CIRCUIT BREAKER THROWN IN WHILE CONTROLLER WAS IN DRIVING POSITION

Coroner's Jury Give Opinion as to Cause of Fatal Accident to W. A. Smith

The inquest into the death of Frederick A. Smith, who lost his life as the result of an accident at the Canadian General Electric works, on Saturday, Sept. 20, was resumed at the Police Court chamber last night with Coroner Greer presiding. After a deliberation of one hour and thirty minutes the jury brought in the following verdict:

> We, the jury empanelled to inquire into the death of Fred A. Smith, find that the deceased came to his death on Saturday, September 20th at the Canadian General Electric works by accident, which, in our opinion, was caused by the circuit breaker being thrown in by the operator while the controller was still in driving position.

The C.G.E. was represented by Mr E. H. D. Hall, Mr. E. L. Goodwill appeared in behalf of the deceased's family. Mr. R. E. Wood conducted the prosecution.

Mr. R. Dobie, Mechanical Engineer at the C.G.E., was the first witness called He described the machine that caused the deceased's death as a travelling supply crane, used for loading purposes.

Mr. Wood— "Did you see the machine after deceased's death?"

Witness— "About an hour afterwards."

"What was the matter?"

"The cable was broken."

"What is Mr. Trombley?"

"Foreman of the crane department. The deceased was under his supervision."

Mr. Ritchie of the C.G.E. Electrical Engineering staff was called.

Mr. Wood— "Did you examine the machinery?"

Witness— "No, sir."

"Can you throw any light on the matter?"

"Very little."

Mr. Ritchie described the mechanism of the crane and mode of supplying power when running.

Mr. Wood— "Did you examine the cable—did anyone?"

Witness— "Mr. Dobie."

Mr. Dobie was recalled and said the breaking of the cable was caused by overstrain.

Mr. Goodwill — "Who is the crane operator?"

Witness— "Mr. Neary was the crane operator and Mr. Trombley is the boss. They give orders and sometimes the drivers."

"Then the operator lifts or lowers his crane as instructed?"

"Yes."

"The big hook was on the ground and the little one about half-way up?"

"Yes."

"Then the little hook caused the accident?"

"Yes."

Dr. Cameron, who attended the injured man, said that death was due to shock which was presumably due to injuries received. The left lung was punctured by the broken rib.

John Trombley said he was in charge of the crane department at the C. G. E. Jas. Neary was in charge of the crane which caused the deceased's death.

Mr. Wood— "Where were you at the time of the accident?"

Witness— "I was loading a car some distance away."

"How do the operators receive instructions?"

"From the drivers or crane men. The power is similar to that of the control in a street car."

"Did you see the accident?"

"No. The first I heard of the accident was when I heard the block fall, and then I saw Smith laying on the car with the block a few feet away."

"Did you examine the works?"

"Yes. The accident was due to overstrain on the cable. Mr. Neary should have stopped the crane sooner."

Coroner Greer— "You examined the cable afterwards, and how did you find it?"

"In pretty good condition."

Mr. Goodwill — "Who generally gives the instructions?"

Witness— "The hitcher or myself."

"Who was giving instructions?"

"Mr. Smith, the deceased, I think the small hook was idle."

"How do you account for the accident then?"

"I don't know."

Mr. Wood— "In running up the hook the crane man should be careful?"

Coroner Greer— "Are the cranes easy to run?"

Witness— "Well, yes."

"Is there any danger of them running away?"

"No."

Mr. Chas. Adams, a machinist, an eye witness of the accident, said he saw the hook fall and hit Smith. "It occurred so suddenly that I hardly know how it happened," said witness. He gave further evidence as to the operating of the crane.

Jas. Neary, the crane operator, said he had been employed on a crane for nearly five months.

Mr. Wood— "It was your duty to operate the crane?"

Witness— "Yes."

"Just tell the jury was you know about it."

"Ask me the questions and I will answer them?"

"Did you have both hooks in motion at the time of the accident?"

"Yes, it is a customary thing there. Just as I went to stop the little hook the circuit breaker flew out."

"Do you know the reason?"

"I do not. It has occurred before and I threw it in, but this time the controller did not work."

"Did you throw the breaker in again?"

"I stopped the controller and then stopped the circuit breaker; just then the hook came down. The deceased was standing at the front of the car, directly under the little hook."

Coroner Greer— "What caused the circuit breaker to fly out?"

Witness— "I do not know."

Mr. Goodwill— "You can generally see the drums?"

Witness— "Yes."

"Were you ever warned?"

"No."

"Did you ever receive instructions?"

"None, except to pick up a load and then raise the load clear of everything. Mr. Trombley told me. I often received instructions from hitchers. The controller appeared to have been the cause as it refused to act." Witness would not swear that the controller was to blame.

COASTER CAUSED FATALITY

Victim Suffered Fracture of Skull and Died in Hospital

Canadian Press Despatch.

WOODSTOCK, Sept. 25.—A small boy whose name is yet unknown, caused the death of Charles Rush, of Michigan, yesterday. Rush had returned yesterday morning on a visit after an absence of twenty-seven years, and while walking down a hill on Hunter street, with his brother John, he stepped out of the way, as he thought, of a small boy, coasting on an express wagon.

The cart struck him, taking his feet from under him and he fell heavily to the sidewalk fracturing the skull. He died in the hospital three hours later.

No Restrictions Allowed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25. — When presiding Judge Cullen of the court of impeachment, trying Governor William Sulzer, ruled yesterday that the objections of counsel for the governor to the consideration of acts charged against the governor prior to his election, should not be definitely decided until the evidence bearing on the charges had been submitted, the last technical point the governor could rise was swept aside and with what seemed startling, suddenness the actual trial of the case was begun.

Jacob H. Schiff, of the banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Henry Morgenthau, newly-appointed ambassador to Turkey, identified checks given to Sulzer.

FORESEES NO TROUBLE

Mrs. Pankhurst Says She Will Get Into United States.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the English suffragette leader, informed the Associated Press yesterday, that she did not anticipate the slightest difficulty in entering the United States, on her proposed visit to that country, and had received no communication whatever on the subject.

"The object of my voyage to America," she said, "is to answer the question in the minds of the American people, which Miss Haldane did not answer, namely, why militants do the sort of things they do in England."

The Miss Haldane referred to by Mrs. Pankhurst, is Miss Elizabeth S. Haldane, who recently visited America with her brother, Viscount Haldane, the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain. While in favor of woman suffrage, she has expressed pronounced opinions against militancy.

"Fortunately," continued Mrs. Pankhurst, "on account of the reasonableness of American men, American women appear to be getting the vote by peaceful means.

"Nevertheless, I think that even American women owe some gratitude to English militancy for helping to make 'Votes for Women' the burning question of the day. I have no reason to expect anything but a sympathetic welcome from the nation whose past history shows it to have been a militant itself."

Sigmaringen is on the Danube and lies in the southern end of the Province of Hohenzollern.

BRITISH EMPLOYERS TO CONSOLIDATE FORCES

Guarantee Fund of £50,000,000 is to be Created Says London Times to Protect Those Who Are Willing to Work When a Strike is On.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The London Times understands that an association has been formed with the object of consolidating the resources of employers of labor in this country and maintaining their rights and freedom to bargain individually with free workers or collectively with trade unions. It bears the title of the United Kingdom Employers' Defence Union, and will be registered as a trade union. An idea of the strength of the movement may be gathered from the fact that at a meeting last week two large manufacturers promised £50,000 each towards a guarantee fund. Other guarantees of £10,000 and smaller sums from each members of the union will, it is understood, be invited, to guarantee a sum commensurate with its position in the commercial world, the intention being to create a fund of £50,000,000. One of the stipulations is that the individual guarantees will become operative only when this sum is secured.

Great importance is attached to the operation of the guarantee and in dealing with large and small strikes in the interest alike of employers and employes and of the commerce of the United Kingdom. It has been arranged that all calls on the fund, which will be pro rata on the whole of the members, shall not exceed 7 1-2 per cent. in any one year. Much less than that proportion will, it is believed, be sufficient to secure adequate protection for men willing to work and employers willing to employ.

In the event of a struggle arising out of any tyranny by trade unions the members would be backed by the fund, and the expenditure of a small percentage in most cases would, so the leaders of the defence union hold, be adequate to insure victory. The leaders of the movement emphasize the fact that the defence union is not espousing the anti-trades union policy. They argue, however, that the vital interests of employers must, in view of what has happened in the past few years, be defended against the new trades unionism.

HE WEDS AT 77.

Sole Survivor of Ontario's First Legislature Marries.

OTTAWA, Sept. 25.—The only survivor of the first Ontario Parliament, which met in Toronto in July, 1867, Mr. Thomas Murray, M.P.P., of Pembroke, North Renfrew, was married yesterday in Montreal for the third time.

Mr. Murray, who is 77 years old, but does not look more than 70 years was in a reminiscent mood when he was visited by a reporter. He was twelve years in the Ontario Legislature, and eight years in the House of Commons, he remembered the Lieutenant-Governor welcoming John Sandfield Macdonald, the first Premier.

The marriage was performed in Archbishop Bruchesi's palace in Montreal, the bride being a comparatively young girl, who in former years was employed in Mr. Murray's big store in Pembroke.

Flagrant Case of Neglect.

KINGSTON, Sept. 25.—The Children's Aid Society, acting in the case of the Arden family of Frontenac County, found a disgraceful condition of affairs. Three children, one aged ten and another twelve, had never been at school in their lives. The court ordered them to be sent forthwith.

MRS. TAYLOR IS ARRAIGNED

Four Doctors Believe Montreal Woman's Mind is Unsound.

CORNWALL, Sept. 25.—Mrs. J. Taylor of Montreal, who committed the terrible crime of shooting her daughter, Mrs. Harold W. Norton and the latter's daughter, Lulu Norton, at Alexandria, and then turned the revolver on herself, appeared before Mr. Justice Britton yesterday.

The judge heard evidence as to her mental condition from Dr. D. O. Alguire and Dr. C. J. Hamilton of Cornwall, and Dr. McClellan and Dr. Jas T. Hope of Alexandria, all of whom stated their belief that Mrs. Taylor was of unsound mind. Mr. Taylor husband of the unfortunate woman gave evidence similar to that given at the coroner's inquest at Alexandria regarding her mental state at the time of the shooting.

Justice Britton ordered that Mrs. Taylor be kept in custody to be removed at the pleasure of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

AVIATOR FACED DANGERS.

Roland Garros' Motor Suddenly Stopped, Then Started Again.

BIZERTA, Tunis, Sept. 25.—The great flight Tuesday of Roland G. Garros, the French aviator, across the Mediterranean from St. Raphael, France, to this port, a distance of 158 miles, was of a much more adventurous character than at first appeared. The motor of his aeroplane was taken to pieces yesterday and several serious defects found. One of the segments was completely burned and other parts had been rendered useless.

Garros, in describing his flight, said that when about sixty miles from the French coast his motor began to work badly, and about the same distance from Bizerta it stopped altogether. He then had no alternative but to volplane into the sea with the chance that he might be rescued by torpedo boats. But suddenly the motor started again and kept running until he reached land.

Wall Street Fears Attack.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Secretary Garrison has not yet passed upon the petition of New York bankers asking that additional barracks be erected on Governor's Island, for the quartering of a full regiment of troops. The bankers claim this precaution is necessary to protect Wall street from possible mob attack.

Mr. Garrison has received through Senator O'Gorman, who presented the petition, a letter from a New York assemblyman, urging the project. He sent an acknowledgement of the letter to the Senator, but did not commit himself as to the feasibility of the project.

NOTABLE MEN ON ULSTER'S PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT

LONDON, Sept. 25. — Elaborating the preparations whereby Ulster seeks to maintain her present position as an integral portion of the United Kingdom, the Ulster Unionist Council, at a meeting yesterday in Belfast, set up the machinery of a provisional government for the purpose of "taking over the province in trust for the British nation" should the Government persist in the passage of home rule. The members of the provisional government form an imposing list in which figure many Ulster notabilities—the Duke of Abercorn, Lord Charles Beresford and Lords Annesley, Arran, Bangor, Castlereagh, Clanwilliam, Crichton, Dartrey, Deramore, Dunleath, Erne, Farnham, Kilmory, Lietrim, Templetown and Lord Claud Hamilton, also the Ulster Unionist M.P.'s, and Sir Edward Carson who will be "Premier."

The "new authority for taking over the administration of the province on the day when home rule comes into force, or before if necessary," appointed a Military Council, in addition to the Ulster Volunteers' Committee, was appointed. Other committees include — finance and business, law, education, customs and a publication and literary committee.

There is no sign yet that the British Cabinet intends to interfere with the Ulster government or the Ulster army.

The Ulster leaders officially announced in Belfast last night that Carson headed the Ulster provisional government indemnity guarantee fund for Ulster volunteers with a subscription of $50,000. Yesterday's meeting, which was attended by six hundred delegates, decided that this guarantee fund will be raised to not less than $5,000,000 sterling for the purpose of indemnifying volunteers injured in the execution of their duty.

Army Officers Enlisted.

BELFAST, Sept. 25.—The greatest review of Ulster troops yet held will take place in Belfast on Saturday, and in its ranks, it is stated, will be found a number of field officers who at present are on active service, including two colonels, now in command of home battalions.

Lord Londonderry, speaking at the meeting yesterday, said that even at the last moment they had trusted that the eyes of the Asquith Government would be opened and that they would realize their crime and shrink from the horrible consequences that would follow home rule. Ulster was bound to protest, and was bound to make her protest effective. They had organized and prepared, and now could say: "We are ready to strike when you please." They had set up the machinery of a provisional government, appointed a military council, and no one could say when it would be necessary to make it effective, but it would be when the leaders thought it expedient.

Sir Edward Carson, who also spoke, said they must recognize that there were two hostile parties face to face. If home rule was not carried there were would be trouble in the south of Ireland; if it carried there would be trouble in the north. Britain must be accepted as the arbiter between the two parties.

INDIAN IS SANE

Dr. Bruce Smith Gives Brantford Murderer an Exam.

BRANTFORD, Sept. 25.—That Jas. Taylor, the self-confessed murderer of Charlie Dawson, the twelve-year-old boy, is sane was the statement made by Dr. Bruce Smith, provincial inspector of jails and hospitals, after a visit here.

Dr. Smith visited Taylor in his cell and propounded several problems in arithmetic to him. Taylor enjoyed the diversion and did well in his examination. As a result Dr. Smith pronounced him sane.

Although Taylor has already confessed to the crime he has not been adjudged guilty of murder. Two applications have been received, however, for the position of hangman owing to the publicity the case has received. These applications are in the hands of Sheriff Ross.

CAN'T PROBE MYSTERY AT MADOC

MADOC, Sept. 25.—A coroner's inquest was held yesterday afternoon by Dr. Gardiner of Eldorado, into the death of the sixteen-year-old girl, Ella Franks whose body was found in the pantry of the Franks' residence on Eldorado road, on Saturday last, with a bullet hole through her heart. Mr. P. J. M. Anderson of Belleville, County Crown Attorney, conducted the case. Several witnesses were examined, but the evidence failed to reveal the cause of the tragedy. The fourteen-year-old adopted son of Mr. Franks has been missing since Saturday. He was seen by neighbors about four o'clock that day with a shot gun in his possession, and a diligent search has failed to reveal any trace of him since.

A previous inquest was held by another coroner, Dr. Harper, at which the jury rendered a verdict that the girl's death was caused by being shot by a person or persons unknown to the jury.

BELLEVILLE, Sept. 25. — The Belleville police are somewhat surprised not to have received notice officially of the shooting of Ella Franks, who was found dead at Eldorado. No description has been sent to the local department of Eddie Franks, the adopted brother, who has been missing since.

Eighteen Months in Jail.

CORNWALL, Sept. 25.—Mrs. McKenna, the Renfrew woman arrested in June last for raising a check and obtaining money under false pretences from the Chesterville branch of the Bank of Ottawa, was given 18 months' imprisonment by Mr. Justice Britton at the assizes here yesterday afternoon.

The woman entered a plea of guilty, and her counsel stated that she had committed the offence, but that the real culprit was a man named Charles Pregood, who framed the plans.

An effort is to be made to locate Pregood and bring him to justice.

Don't talk about other people. It is just as well to be too busy talking about yourself.

TO SEEK FOR LEGISLATION

Large Number of Resolutions Passed by Labor Delegates.

MONTREAL, Sept. 25. — Resolutions dealing with the immigration law and its proper enforcement, the inland revenue laws, the increasing death rate both among adults and infants in large cities, the employment of armed men by private corporations, the importation of Asiatic labor, the attitude of the police towards legitimate picketing, monthly pay days, the licensing of bartenders, and the wages and clothes of letter carriers, were put through by the Trades and Labor Congress at a whirlwind session yesterday morning.

Herman T. Campbell, St. John, submitted a resolution in which the complaint was laid that it was impossible for the representatives of organized labor to gain access to the immigration buildings at the points of entry into Canada, and the motion made that in time of strikes it was necessary, where artisans were being brought from England and other countries by the business interest concerned, that labor be placed in a position to ascertain as to whether the immigration law was being enforced and to advise artisans of the exact conditions of employment here.

The problem of the increasing death rate of adults and children in large cities was taken up through the resolution of John W. Bruce of the Steamfitters' Union.

The resolution contended that the high mortality rate was due in a large measure to the insanitary systems of heating, ventilation and sanitation existing, and the lack of effectiveness of many of the provincial laws governing these things.

In the matter of armed employes by corporations came up in the recommendation that the congress use its powers to have enacted into law a bill similar to that being considered in New Jersey, which seeks to make it illegal for any individual, corporation, or association, to employ bodies of armed men on their premises.

Chinese Invasion of U. S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—An increase in the smuggling of Chinese into the United States, alarming in its proportions, has induced the immigration authorities to redouble their vigilance, particularly along the southern and western borders of the country. Early next week Richard H. Taylor, immigration inspection at large, will begin a trip along the the southern border of the country to see that the law is rigidly complied with. Later he will extend his trip, to points on the Pacific coast. Scores of Chinese recently have been apprehended in the United States who gained entrance across the Mexican border.

UNION LABEL

A FOOL PROPOSITION

Reports of the proceedings at the Montreal Congress of the Trades and Labor Council, state that Rev. Dr. Shearer of Toronto, appeared before the Congress, Tuesday, and denounced the Senate for declining to pass proposed legislation "to provide for the making of all employers criminally responsible for the betrayal of a girl in their employ." If Rev. Dr. Shearer has been correctly reported he has been asking for a piece of legislation, so extreme that no attempt has yet been made elsewhere, to foist such a measure on any public.

Why should an employer be compelled to exercise a supervision over the morals of his employees, day and night. He has—and very properly cannot have—any control over their actions during hours when not at work, and it is safe to say that few instances of betrayal have occurred during working hours. Why hold an employer responsible, as the Rev. Dr Shearer proposes, and place no such responsibility on the householder who employs a domestic.

The whole thing is a silly attempt to gain some notoriety as an advanced moral reformer, and the Senate was quite right in refusing to entertain any such proposed measure, if indeed, it was ever presented in the shape alleged above.

A LAND OF NEWSPAPERS

The place of the newspaper in public life is more secure than any other modern institution. Lord Northcliffe was not exaggerating when he said that Toronto was "the most newspapered city in the Empire."

In fact he might have gone on to say the same about most Canadian cities. Even the smallest villages have a news sheet of some kind and some villages of only 900 inhabitants can boast of two thriving newspapers.

These, of course, are supported by the surrounding farming districts, but they only supply local news and the subscribers take the larger city newspapers beside.

This would be impossible in any other country. The great city of Liverpool, England, with nearly one million inhabitants, has only two newspaper houses, and many of the smaller cities can scarcely support one.

We need to go no further than Peterborough for illustration of the fact that Canada is a land of newspapers. Here we have three newspapers flourishing side by side in this city. The other two are of not much account, but they are newspapers, that is part of them, and despite the fact of having to compete with a first class journal, they have a very easy existence.

The future of the race is in the hands of the press. While a newspaper may have to a certain point to supply the demand, and in many cases for the sake of its existence pander to prejudice and use a little diplomacy upon occasion. Yet there is such a thing as creating the demand, and educating your public up to a higher standard of reading and thinking.

Lord Northcliffe has been criticized as a sort of newspaper monopolist, but Canada has nothing to fear from the capitalization of newspapers when the capitalists are as pure minded and public spirited as the Harmsworths.

A little more of that kind of monopoly would give journalists greater freedom and independence of thought and expression; and graft, with many other social evils, both local and national, would be stigmatized. and perhaps exterminated by a liberated press.

ULSTER AND HOME RULE

Whichever side of the Home-rule controversy we might take there is no blinking the fact that the threatened Ulster rebellion has got a little past a joke. Punch and many of the Liberal newspapers in England have tried to laugh Carson down but he is still on the war-path and evidently means business.

The Liberal papers in England are comparing the rebellion with the Nationalists' outrages during the days of the Conservative Coercion Act. But this is hardly a logical comparison for the Nationalist uprising was purely one of sedition and treason against the British throne.

The Nationalists were avowedly and openly against the Union. Whereas the Ulsterites revolt is against the severance of Ireland from the United Kingdom and what they believe will result in the dethronement of British supremacy in Ireland.

Sir Edward Carson is a man of high legal standing in England and that he should see fit to take these extreme measures is a matter for some serious consideration. It is easy to dismiss it all as Protestant bigotry, but there are other interests involved in disunion than those of religion.

Large business concerns are threatening to remove their works from Ireland if the Home Rull Bill passes into law, as it is feared that the Nationalist majority will overrule and hamper the Ulster minority which is certainly the most progressive part of Ireland.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"As for Mann himself, he is nothing," says the Mail & Empire. The reference of course was to Tom Mann and not to mankind—yet he is one of the kind too. The Mail writes a half column editorial on "nothing."

"His pose as an Anarchist is as misleading as his pretence to be a worker," the Mail goes on to say of this Mann. The strange thing about these poseurs is that they shold ubluff anybody. Mann may do it easier in England than in Canada.

The executive of the Sunday Schools and Epworth Leagues have arranged for a meeting at Omemee on October 8th. The conference will be addressed by the Rev. S. T. Bartlett, of Toronto, general superintendent by the field secretaries by conference officers and by local leaders. Our league is anticipating a meeting of intense interest and profit as well as an increased attendance on October 8th.

Mr. P. Clancy of Lindsay was a business visitor last week.

For the current year, the trustees of the Orange Line school have secured the services of Miss Flynn as teacher.

Mr. Wm. Balfour of Peterboro visited with his sister, Mrs. Charles Rutherford.

Mr. J. G. Staples spent Sunday at his home in Bethany.

Mr. John Graham of Winnipeg his visiting his sister, Mrs. Richard Grandy.

The County of Victoria Teachers' Association will hold its annual convention in the Central school, Lindsay, on Thursday and Friday, Oct. 2 and 3. There are some estimable addresses and papers to be given, vocal and instrumental music and an art display, during the two days' meeting; and Thursday evening there will be a grand concert in the Academy of Music. Trustees are cordially invited to all the meetings of the association. The school act recites "It is the duty of every teacher to attend regularly." Attendance will be reported to trustees.

The service in the Presbyterian church on Sabbath evening was conducted by Mr. George Mulligan of Peterboro, he, having had charge of the service at Mount Pleasant in the afternoon. His evening lesson was the story of Naaman, the Syrian and his healing; his text was taken from Acts 9—5: "I am Jesus." Many present day lessons drawn from the lives of Naaman and Saul of Tarsus and the evident sincerity of the speaker held the congregation intensely interested all through the discourse. One listens to his vocal solos with a sense of great pleasure, and his Sunday night's offering was no exception. At 11 o'clock next Sunday morning, Rev. D. H. Currie, the pastor, will preach. There will be a Sunday school rally at 3 p.m.

Our town and the surrounding districts appear to have a fondness for the Lindsay Central Exhibition. To see the march down town from the 4.33 p.m. train on Saturday night would remind a person of the emptying of some large city theatre at the conclusion of the play. Hosts of returning Fair visitors marched in twos, threes and fours, some carrying parcels, others baskets of fruit and everyone seeming happy because of the excellent show and the delightful weather for their outing. The streets, which had been almost deserted all the early evening, became the scene of human congestion and activity, the townspeople hustling to do their buying for Sunday and the rural people hitching up their horses and making haste home. People like a holiday and to visit Fairs, is a profitable and pleasant one to spend, because interest and education are associated. The rural school fairs should have feeders to the larger county and provincial exhibitions.

Major H. Fee of Lindsay was in town the first of the week.

Shortly after the resumption of classes at the High School for the fall term, the pupils and teachers assembled one evening after class hours and indulged in a variety of games till about 5.30 o'clock, when the honor pupils at the Departmental examinations were given a "Triumph Ride" which was realistic and novel; then came the red-ribbon award of "made in Omemee." A dainty lunch concluded an evening of merry social enjoyment.

Miss Maud Handley was a visitor to Peterboro on Wednesday.

The many friends of Master Stanley Laidley will be pleased to know that he is improving as well as can be expected, and that he will soon be about again.

Messr. T. A. McPaherson and Co. held their Fall millinery opening on Friday and Saturday. Miss Winnie Beatty has charge of the department.

Misses Thurston and Wray, of the Public School staff were visitors to Lindsay on SSaturday.

The Misses M. Laidley, G. Poast, C. Dewan and E. Bradley, and Mr. Fred Corneil enter the Peterborough Normal for the ensuing term.

Mr. Charles Ivory's millinery opening took place on the 18th, 19th, and 20th insts. The department is presided over by Miss Lewis.

MADELINE'S LAST MOVING DAY

When She Found Her Way Back to Her Old Love.

By HARRIET NORTON.

"Madeline, I see those Belgravia apartments will be ready for occupancy April 1. I wish you'd stop off there on your way home tomorrow."

Mr. Stanhope lowered his paper and glanced first despairingly at Madeline, then half supplicatingly at his wife.

"My dear, I don't believe we can improve on this apartment. I'm sure we have room enough."

"But the landlord was here today and said he would not repaper, and that horrid stain in Fred's room"—

"You'll do nothing of the sort. This janitor is perfectly overbearing anyhow, and when I complained about Mrs. Brant's dog running up and down the hall he said there was nothing in the leases against keeping a dog. Just as if there wasn't a law against maintaining a nuisance! Anyhow, I think Fred ought to have a larger room, and we can fit it up as a den, and Madeline ought to have the north light for her work."

Madeline broke in earnestly:

"Oh, mother, dear, I do so little here at home now that my room does very well indeed."

"Well, I heard that those Belgravia apartments had a butler's pantry and— Anyhow, you stop off and see them."

No one answered. Mr. Stanhope sat staring with his unseeing eyes at an article in the evening paper on the proper preparation of food for infants, but before his mental vision passed a succession of moving vans, furniture that needed revarnishing, pictures that had to be reglazed.

Madeline, on her part, focused her mental vision on a succession of days lost, illustrations unfinished, while she restored order in the new home, long hours devoted to packing and unpacking her fragile personal belongings.

Madeline's girlhood had been spent in a pretty suburb half an hour's ride from the bustling city, but Mrs. Stanhope had wearied of the ubiquitous servant girl question that stalks at the heels of every suburban housewife. In town even if they had no maid they could at least eat at a nearby restaurant. Besides, she wanted Madeline to be something more than a household drudge. There were business openings in town for a bright girl, but Madeline was not strong enough to commute.

After all, it was Madeline who not only secured a position in a fashion design studio, but who went to intelligence offices for help and haunted real estate offices for desirable apartments. For four years Mrs. Stanhope had seemed absolutely obsessed by the desire to occupy new and more desirable quarters. Each spring they had moved until the pretty new furniture with which Mrs. Stanhope had started her city career as a housewife looked far less presentable than the old fashioned stuff they had sold at the auction before leaving Crafton Heights. All her ambition seemed to center on showing off the new apartment to her women friends and assuring them she had secured a bargain which should make them turn green with envy.

"Do you think it is becoming a mania?" he asked anxiously.

"No; she has nothing else to do. I wish sometimes"—

Madeline stopped and looked down the long stretch of asphalt pavement. Her father supplied the words.

"That we were back in Crafton Heights, where she had roses to train and the neighbors' chickens to shoo off our lawn. Seems as if all city women are restless."

"Yes; I guess it's in the air. I felt as though I must be doing something big, getting somewhere, for awhile after we moved to town, but now"—

They separated at the corner.

"I hope those Belgravia apartments will all be on a court, with no closets and an exorbitant rent."

"No such luck," responded Madeline, with a forced smile. "They'll be very modern and all desirable, and if you are a dear, sensible father you'll have a business call to Chicago about April 1. It will be over when you come back."

Brave as were her words, Madeline's eyes turned grave as soon as her father turned away. And all day the thought of her mother's restless spirit, the inevitable moving, the noise, the discomfort, burned in on her heart and soul until she could hardly work. Finally she flung aside her pen and asked to be excused for the afternoon. She might as well get it over with, so she boarded the car which passed the Belgravia. The new apartments were considerably farther out than she had anticipated, and as one passenger after another dropped off and the soft spring air crept into the car a sudden desire to see Crafton Heights with its suburban restfulness took possession of her.

"B. and A. depot!" bawled the conductor.

Madeline sprang to her feet. The Belgravia apartments were half a mile beyond, but this was the last station of the B. and A. inside the city limits.

And the B. and A. led to Crafton Heights!

She left the train and gazed around in surprise. The depot building was entirely new, a pretty brick and tile affair, with trim flower beds all laid out for spring planting. She crossed the tracks and followed the street leading to their old home, but was amazed to find that the trees, mere striplings when they left, now intertwined their branches over the sidewalk. An air of permanency and restfulness seemed to envelop the community. Progress was there, but not half finished buildings, torn pavements and moving vans. How the ivy had grown over the Burden gateway! In front of her own old home she stopped and almost rubbed her eyes. Had it really been that pretty?

No; there was a new porch on the south side, and a bay window had been thrown out from her room. What a lovely room it must be, with that flood of light pouring into it!

"I wonder if they'd care"—

With firmly set lips she threw hesitation to the winds, opened the low iron gate and walked up the well kept path to the front door.

"I beg pardon," she said as a white haired lady opened the door, and then she stopped, and her face turned first scarlet, then white. "Oh, Mrs. Carruth, I did not know you had bought the place. I just thought"—

A gently insistent hand drew her inside the door and led her into the sitting room. Madeline leaned against the door jamb, staring around her. It was just as they had left it.

"Why, I thought everything was sold."

"Yes, but somehow Henry traced nearly all of the things, and what he could not buy he somehow managed to duplicate at secondhand shops. Henry always did think your mother's house was the finest in Crafton Heights, and before he was doing so well he used to tell me that he meant some day to earn a house just like it for me."

Madeline felt the room spinning around her. There were other things Henry Carruth had tried to tell her more than once, but he had been a poor, struggling lawyer and she a well paid illustrator even then. She had talked of a trip to Paris, a career—and where had it all gone? Lost in wanderings through a desert of apartment houses, studios, teas and luncheons. But Henry had realized his ambition or part of it at least. Perhaps now he did not care so much about the rest.

She never knew just how it happened, but Mrs. Carruth had soon taken away her wraps, and then, after a comforting cup of tea, she had led her guest over the old house. The bay window had made a great improvement in Madeline's quarters; otherwise they were quite the same, with even some of her first drawings framed and hung above her old fashioned desk.

Downstairs once more, she gathered up her wraps and was drawing on her gloves when Mrs. Carruth excused herself to look after some dinner details. Madeline stood by the window looking at the arbor over which wistaria now clung like a loving, harmless old octopus. She reached out one hand and felt lovingly of the old fashioned damask hangings. A step sounded behind her, and without turning around she remarked, with something of a choke in her voice:

"Mrs. Carruth, I never knew before the bitterness of that old saying, 'A rolling stone gathers no moss—not even pleasant memories.'"

"I know of a cozy corner just meant for tired rolling stones. Will you come, Madeline?"

It was midnight when he came back from town, but Mrs. Carruth was waiting for him.

"I told her we must be married before the 1st. Mrs. Stanhope wanted it in the new parlor because the Belgravia has a bay window that would be fine for a wedding bell, but I don't propose that Madeline shall endure another moving day."

"And the sweetest part of it all was that she never blamed her mother for all these disturbing years—just acted as if she herself were to blame for a foolish ambition for a career. That is true loyalty, and it makes me all the more willing to trust my boy to her care."

And Mrs. Carruth turned to find her son by the window, his rugged face pressed against the old damask hanging where he had found his first and only love that afternoon.

RHEUMATISM KEPT HIM IN BED

McMILLAN'S CORNER, ONT., SEPT. 30th. 1910

"Your remedy, "Fruit-a-tives" is a perfect panacea for Rheumatism. For years, I suffered distressing pain from Sciatica or Sciatic Rheumatism, being laid up several times a year for days at a time. I went to different doctors who told me there was no use doing anything—it would pass away. They gave me mustard plasters and other remedies that did no good. Plasters took no effect on me—except to blister me and make raw spots. I took many advertised remedies without benefit, but fortunately, about two years ago, I got "Fruit-a-tives" and they cured me.

Since then, I take "Fruit-a-tives" occasionally and keep free of pain. I am satisfied "Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism and they will cure anyone who takes them as directed. If this letter would be of value to you, publish it" JOHN B. McDONALD.

Indeed, this letter is of value to us and to the thousands of sufferers from Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago and Neuralgia. It points the way to a certain cure. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50 trial size, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Election In Newfoundland.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Sept. 24.—Hon. Walter Davidson, governor of Newfoundland, yesterday dissolved the Legislature of Newfoundland and called a general election in the colony for Oct. 30.

Both the Premier, Sir Edward P. Morris, and Sir Robert Bond, the former Premier, now leader of the Opposition, have completed their plans for an active campaign.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Evidence of Indigestion.

Coldness of feet and limbs is almost invariably an evidence of indigestion. The coldness is due not to the weakness of the heart or feebleness of circulation, as is generally supposed, but to the contraction of the small arteries, preventing blood from entering the parts. There is generally an irritation of the abdominal sympathetic nerve centers which control the circulation of the lower extremities.

This difficulty is not to be removed by exercise or by any special application to the limbs, but by removal of the causes of irritation. This may be a prolapsed stomach or chronic indigestion. Hot and cold foot baths are valuable. These act not simply on the feet and limbs, but by reflex action affect beneficially the abdominal sympathetic centers, which are in a diseased condition.

YOUR WALK.

Do You Shuffle or Lurch, or Straddle or Just Toddle?

Unfortunately, there are quite a number of walking atrocities of which our sex are especially guilty. For example, there is the "lurch," an ungraceful walk directly attributable to worn heels. Doesn't every one know the sudden blood rush to the head and nervous shock accompanying the down-at-heel "lurch and recover". While the wrench to the ankles, particularly if they be weak, is really harmful. If you would walk well you must attend to those heels of yours regularly.

Boots and shoes are the primary cause, also of the "shuffle." In this case, the victim has probably acquired the habit through once wearing loose footgear. In direct contrast to this walk is the "bounce." The girl who indulges in it rises inordinately high on the ball of the foot. Such a gait, although possibly denoting a cheerful disposition, looks not a little extraordinary, and, although the girl herself may not recognize it, detracts enormously from her nervous energy.

One of the most unsightly walks it is possible to see is the "straddle." Here a girl seems to throw her feet "where they list," rocking from one side to the other much in the same manner as a sailor. This means, of course, that she is walking with her legs too far apart—an unforgiveable offence. To correct this she should try and place her feet one before the other in as straight a line as possible with the toes turned outwards.

Then there are so many modern girls guilty of a ridiculous "toddle." This is nearly always the combined result of high heels and—one must be candid to be kind!—tight-lacing. It is impossible not to toddle when the shoulders and hips are kept stiffly perpendicular and all the impetus comes from, as it were, within a cardboard mummy-case. As will at once be seen, there can be no free and graceful swing of limbs in these circumstances.

Never must the very slight rock of the shoulders and hips necessary to the ideal walk by any chance be exaggerated into an awkward "waddle." Nor should the naturally slight swing of the arms be allowed to develop into a "windmill" motion, evidently though erroneously considered to be "quite the thing" by the athletic young miss.

After so wholesale a criticism of these, alas! rapidly increasing eccentricities of feminine gaits—a woman who walks really well is a rarity—it might be advisable to try and deduce from observation of the wrong way the right way to walk.

First place the feet down heel first, by a circular movement placing them one in front of the other in as straight a line as possible with the toes turned well out, but not "spread eagled." Secondly, balance the body evenly, rocking the hips and shoulders very slightly in unison, at the same time lightly swinging the right arm with the forward movement of the left leg, and vice versa. Thirdly, rear the head squarely on the neck column with a very, very slight tucking in of the chin.

Economy.

Economy is the science of buying a two dollar hat for $3,75 when a good one may be had for $4. It is a harmless and fascinating pursuit for those who can afford it, but a poor man has no business to fritter away his time and substance on such extravagances. Women are particularly addicted to it and often become so skillful that they are able to get through January without encroaching on their April allowance. Men who have such wives are naturally very proud of them and are willing to redouble their efforts, if necessary in order to provide them with the means to develop the habit.—Life.

GEORGE ST. CHURCH AND PAVEMENT

General Opinion is Against the Proposed Location of Pavement

It is understood that at a meeting of the officials of George street church held last evening, there was considerable difference of opinion as to locating the new pavement outside the tree line on the London street side of the church property. Several members of the official committee are convinced that the walk, in general interests of the appearance of the street, should remain as it is, so far as position is concerned.

With this view the general public coincide. The general public are the men and women passing up and down and across the locality, and without exception all are against the proposition as urged by the majority of the church body.

Though the council has given a very unwilling consent, the trustees would be well advised if they reconsidered the matter. In most things of life we make compromises. Not because they are right, but because expedient.

Here is a compromise. Place the walk inside the tree line; sod outside the trees, and put a concrete curb adjoining the turf. The effect will be fine, and the arrangement will not disturb the general line of pavement from Water street west.

What say you, gentlemen. In politics, theology and civic matters we all compromise. Why not now?

Long cooking ruins some vegetables—shredded cabbage, for instance, will be tender and white in half an hour, but dark and tough if cooked longer.

INCREASE IN BUSINESS AT THE POST OFFICE

Points Toward More Accommodation or New Building

The increase in mail matter and the coming parcel post will mean very probably that Peterborough will have to have a new or larger post office.

The Review has no authentic information on this point, but it is understood that in the no distant future the needs of this city and the surrounding country will be met in this as in other particulars.

JUDGE BARHORST
DOES HIS DUTY TO RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS

If you suffer from Rheumatism and don't read this advice, then the terrible disease must have robbed you of your power to be fair to yourself. Read it:

"I, John Barhorst, Justice of the Peace of McLean Township, Ft. Loramie Ohio, do certify that after treatment by three doctors without result, I have been cured of a very bad case of Rheumatism by using two bottles of RHEUMA. It is now two years since I used the remedy, and I am still as well as ever. Previous to using RHEUMA I was a cripple, walking with crutches, and I feel it my duty to let other sufferers from Rheumatism know what it will do. The result seems almost miraculous to me. I have advised RHEUMA to at least a dozen persons, and each one speaks as highly of it as I. I will answer anyone suffering from the disease if a two-cent stamp is enclosed."—May 31, 1912.

You can secure a bottle of RHEUMA for only 50 cents at Warne's Drug Co., and they say, if not as advertised, money back. It's just as good for Gout, Arthritis, Lumbago and Sciatica.

EPHRAIM B. WINDOVER MET HIS DEATH WHEN AUTO TURNED TURTLE

Fatal Accident Two Miles From Lakefield Rolland Darcy, His Companion Escaped Serious Injury—Victim Was on His Way to Buckhorn to Visit His Wife

Ephraim B. Windover was instantly killed and Roland Darcy, proprietor of the Midland Hotel, Lakefield, sustained injuries about the body this morning, when an auto in which they were travelling to Buckhorn turned turtle about two miles from Lakefield.

Windover had arranged with Darcy to drive him to Buckhorn, to see his wife who is employed at Eastwood's Hotel. The deceased who had resided in this city for some time, left here about a year and a half ago, it is said, and went to the north country. Relatives of the dead man who live on Aylmer street, said, this morning, that no word had been received from him since he went away.

The overturned auto was noticed by a lady who was driving on the road. She hurried to the home of Mr. Harry Garbutt, and word was sent to the village. Windover was dead when taken from under the car and Darcy was suffering from bruises and shock but no bones were broken.

Drs Fraser and Blakeman gave attendance and Darcy was taken to his hotel. The body fo Windover was taken to Hendren's undertaking establishment in Lakefield.

Dr. Greer was notified of the accident and he went to Lakefield this afternoon to open and inquest.

Windover was a man of midle age. The body was identified by Mrs. Montgomery of Lakefield.

CONTRACT RECORD COMMENTS ON PETERBORO DISASTER

The current issue of the Contract Record and Engineering Review comments on the recent disaster in Peterborough, as follows:

Enquiry on our part has revealed nothing but reticence in connection with the collapse of the Turnbull Building at Peterborough, which resulted in the loss of five lives. The jury brought in their verdict last week, but the evidence was not sufficient either to determine the cause of the collapse or to fix the blame.

Possibly, the scanty information may be traced to the fact that a number of law-suits are pending; possibly this is only one of a number of considerations.

Reticence to a certain degree is proper. A man is not called upon to take the responsibility of statements which may or may not be founded on fact. At the same time the community at large, and particularly the constructional interests, are entitled to have timely information on such matters. All that we are told one month after the disaster is that the jury were unable to arrive at any conclusions owing to the insufficiency of the evidence and that they recommend the appointment of a building inspector whose duties would include the supervision of structures undergoing alterations.

We can make certain deductions from the evidence given by the architect appointed to examine the premises on behalf of the Attorney-General's department. This gentleman found serious defects in the construction of the basement wall upon which the supporting pillars were erected. The wall was under strength, the bricks were soft and the mortar was poor. Scanty as these details are they show the importance of adequate inspection in every branch of constructional work and point the moral that where human lives are a consideration the question of economy is criminal.

It is to be hoped that more definite information will be forthcoming from the authorities and that further details will not be withheld until such time as public interest has waned to a point where it is a negligible factor.

PRISONER GETS AWAY.

Mystery Surrounds Swede's Escape at Gowganda.

GOWGANDA, Sept. 25.—George E. Ericson, a Swede, whose arrest was asked for by the Swedish authorities on three charges of arson and burglary, has made a mysterious escape from the local lockup.

Arrested by Provincial Constable Stalwood, Ericson was placed behind the bars. He was given a preliminary hearing, but made his disappearance shortly afterwards. It was claimed that friends of his had threatened the authorities. Inspector Powell made an investigation and found that the only way Ericson could have got away would be through a hole fourteen inches square. As he weighs 175 pounds and would have had to reach six feet to get through it, it looks very suspicious.

No trace of Ericson has been secured yet.

Trainmen's Case Presented.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—After offering evidence to show in effect that the increased cost of living for the trainmen of the eastern roads can be met only by the wage increase they demand, the employes closed their direct case yesterday before the federal board that is arbitrating the trainmen's grievances under the Newlands Act. The roads at once began presentation of their testimony, calling one witness before the hearing adjourned.

RENTING ROOMS

If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

ADDRESS FROM THE CITY TO HIS EXCELLENCY MGR. STAGNI

Thousands of Citizens Attend Reception in Honor of the Papal Delegate

The address presented to Mgr. Stagni last night was very handsome, the script being written by Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine, and the illuminating and making by the Review office. The pages were bound in a cover of rich watered purple silk, suitably lettered in gold.

The public reception held last night for His Excellency Monseigneur P. F. Stagni, D.D., on St. Peter's Church lawn was an interesting event. The beautiful weather assisted greatly and thousands of citizens took the opportunity of meeting the Pope's representative to Canada. The Papal Delegate assisted by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, several archibishops and bishops were seated under a small canvas canopy and a steady string of people passed by them all evening, shaking hands with the new Bishop and kissing the Apostolic Delegate's ring.

Early in the evening Mayor Bradburn and members of the City Council met His Excellency and Mayor Bradburn read the following address:

THE ADDRESS.

May it please Your Excellency,—

The Mayor and Coroporation of the City of Peterborough desire to give you a cordial welcome to the City on this interesting and important occasion. We welcome you because of the exalted and important position you occupy in a church which has among its people a large number of residents of Peterborough, among whom are a number of our most prominent and most respected citizens. We are also pleased to welcome you because the purpose of your visit is to raise to a position of responsibility and dignity a son of this city, the Right Reverend M. J. O'Brien, D. D., who has lived among us as a boy and youth, and also as a Clergyman in his years of manhood, and who has always been very highly esteemed by all classes of the community for his many excellent qualities. We feel certain that he is a worthy successor of the eminent men who have occupied the office of Bishop of this Diocese, all of whom have had the esteem of the community in a high degree.

As this is Your Excellency's first visit to Peterborough, we hope that you will have time to visit the more important places of interest. We feel what we are sure you will regard as pardonable pride in our City, in its progress and its educational and other institutions, and we shall be pleased to have you take away with you as much knowledge of them as your limited time in our City will permit you to obtain.

We hope that your visit, which is so gratifying to us, will be a very enjoyable one to Your Excellency, and that you will remember it with pleasure.

W. H. BRADBURN,
Mayor.

THE REPLY.

His Excellency in acknowledment thanked the city officials for their welcome and stated that he was pleased to note the apparent good feelings between the Catholics of this city and the citizens not of their faith. He hoped that Catholics would always obey the laws of the country and of the city and that peace and harmony would reign supreme.

During the evening the 57th Band under the leadership of Mr. Gliddon rendered excellent music. The presentation of "Ecce Sacerdos Magnus" was particularly fine.

To-day the Papal Delegate, Bishop O'Brien, Bishop Fallon and several other dignitaries, are visiting the various points of interest in the city. This morning was spent in visiting the Separate schools, while this afternoon St. Joseph's Hospital, House of Providence and St. Vincent's Orphanage were visited.

The impact of the wheel against the hydrant caused Mrs. Gourley, of Keene, one of the occupants, to fall out of the rig. Fortunately she escaped injury.

After the accident I. C. Reid placed a lantern at the hydrant.

CYRIL MAUDE MAY VISIT CITY

English Actor and His Daughter Get Big Send Off

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The famous English actor, Cyril Maude and his daughter, Margery, were the objects of a most remarkable demonstration of popularity when they left Euston station yesterday en route for Liverpool, where they will board the Allan liner Victorian for Canada.

Mr. Maude and his daughter and company of twenty-four will open their Canadian tour at Toronto on October 6. There was a distinguished gathering at the railway station to see them off, men and women in all branches of public life joining in wishing them Godspeed.

Mr. Maude chatting with newspaper men before the train left, recalled his first visit to Canada when he was a lad of twenty. He worked on a farm in the West for a year, he said. He has since ascertained that the farmer who employed him is now a cemetery keeper at Toronto. He spoke enthusiastically of his forthcoming tour and of his pleasure at being able to leave London to cross the Atlantic again and see Canada.

Yesterday Mr. Maude was the guest of honor at a luncheon given in the city by a number of prominent literary and professional men. Speaking at this function Sir Herbert Tree imparted a secret of sensational interest.

"Peter Pan," about the most successful play ever produced, was originally offered to him, he said, and he declined it, and thus missed a fortune. He confessed that had he produced six of the plays which he refused he would now be a rich man, but that he had had the satisfaction of knowing that all of these plays had enriched his brother managers.

Sir Herbert then added that he had declined "Peter Pan" when it was brought him, as well as "Kismet," "Diplomacy," "The Prisoner of Zenda," and "If I Were King."

The management of the Grand Opera House is negotiating to have Peterborough included in the itinerary of the famous actor.

FISKE O HARA IN "OLD DUBLIN"

The romantic comedy "In Old Dublin," which will be presented at The Grand on Monday next, Sept. 29, by Fiske O'Hara and his splendid company of players, deals with the sporting Irish aristocracy of the early part of the last century and among the exciting incidents in the piece is a yacht race on Dublin Bay. It is not generally known that yachting, as a sport, is an Irish product but such is the case. The first yacht club was organized in the city of Cork in the eighteenth century and the first races were held in Cork Harbor. The role played in the piece by Mr. O'Hara is that of a young boat designer, who builds a yacht which wins the royal trophy the Queen's Cup. He has many handicaps but overcomes them all and not only wins the yachting prize but also the hand of a pretty Irish-American girl who helps him over some of the rough spots. Fiske O'Hara has a new budget of songs which he sings with his inimitable art and which will no doubt prove as popular as those he has had in his other productions. "In Old Dublin" is mounted as sumptuously as the other Pitou production and is presented by one of the strongest casts ever seen in Irish drama.

YOUNG LAD WAS SHOCKED

A live wire coming in contact with a guy wire was nearly the cause of a serious accident at the C. G. E. works yesterday. David Ahearn, the sixteen year old son of Mr. George Ahearn, 496 Ellx Street, is employed at the works, and as he was passing through the yards yesterday afternoon at about ten minutes to one he raised his hand to see if he could reach a guy wire that had been strung from a stack to a pole. In some manner a wire carrying a heavy voltage came in contact with the guy wire and when the lad touched it he received a heavy shock. He was knocked down and dazed, but after a few minutes recovered sufficiently to go home.

RUNAWAY HORSE CRASHED INTO AUTO

Considerable excitement was caused on George street this morning about 11 o'clock when one of the delivery horses of Matthews-Laing became frightened near Brock street and ran down George street. The driver seemed to have had the animal under control until he got to Hunter street corner, when he jumped from the rig. The horse continued and crashed into Dr. Amys auto which was standing in front of Connal's grocery store, and was occupied by Dr. and Mrs. Amys and a small child. The animal was thrown to the ground and was soon released from its position. Fortunately the occupants of the auto escaped injury. The harness was badly damaged.

BARRIE'S LIMITED OPEN BRANCH IN EDMONTON---HAVE NOW THREE STORES IN WESTERN CITIES

Have Located in Regina, Saskatoon and Edmonton, Increased Output Made Necessary Having Direct Purchases and Local People Share in the Results—A Local Industry That Makes an Appeal on Pure Merits.

A Local Industry That Has Been Very Progressive

While Peterborough's industries have all been forging ahead during the past five or six years, there are few that have shown, comparatively more consistent and continuous progress than the wholesale and retail fur business of Barrie's, Limited. Its growth has been steady and sound, and as an evidence of this development there are new branches opened in Western Canada, in addition to the enlargement of the factory and retail department in this city.

The first retail branch was opened in Regina, with Mr. W. W. Armstrong, formerly of Peterborough, in charge. Then Mr. John Gorham was appointed to the new store in Saskatoon, and the third branch in Edmonton, established this year, is under the supervision of Mr. Thomas Savigny. These three managers were schooled in the fur business in Peterborough and are thoroughly conversant with it and with the policy of the house.

Owing to lack of space for manufacturing purposes Barrie's, Limited, was compelled to vacate the corner to which it had given a popular name. It was the Company's intention to erect on the lot south of the Customs House a large store for factory, warehouse, and retail purposes. But some difficulty arose regarding a nearby property, and they were unable to carry out the plans this year. In the meantime the former Murray street Baptist church was secured, and proved a decidedly suitable location for factory purposes. The only available quarters for the retail trade was opened at 420 George street, and while the premises are held but temporarily the Company's business has grown so steadily that it may be termed the "little store with the big business." While this retail location is held it is proposed to make this quotation even more significant than it is at present.

GROWTH OF MANUFACTURING.

The manufacturing end of the business would be naturally expected to leap ahead with the establishing of three western branches, and every anticipation in that direction has been materially realized. In the manufacturing department of Barrie's, Limited, there are now in the neighborhood of 75 employes, and between 40 and 50 of these are located in Peterborough. The rest are distributed in the western stores. Where 6 or 7 years ago there were one or two fur cutters employed here, there are now 9 or 10, and all the goods sold by the Company are of their own manufacture. Hence, when a guarantee is given with articles sold the Company is confident of its position with customers, and more than ever is emphasis being placed upon the guarantee which is extended to buyers.

All satin linings and other trimmings used in the garments are imported direct from the manufacturer. Skins are bought in their original raw state and are carried through their different processes of manufacture in the local factory. Hence the force of the Company's motto "From Trapper to Wearer Direct." These methods all tend to decrease the cost of the manufactured articles and enables the Company to sell in a wholesale, as well as a retail way There is absolutely no reason why Peterborough ladies and gentlemen should pass over the products of the local fur company in preference to any other. In workmanship, style, quality, and price, Barrie's, Limited, makes an appeal for pure merit and follows up with an iron-bound guarantee. Besides, it is a home industry and home patronage redound for the benefit of the whole city.

SECURING MORE FURS.

The quantity of raw fur received by the Company is becoming larger, as the result of a wide distribution of price lists to trappers and fur dealers. More raw material than ever is thus coming forward direct to Barrie's, Limited, and in regard to the cost of this material the Company is practically on the ground floor. Besides, the new branches in the West are giving the Company prestige and places it directly in the heart of one of the great fur districts.

At the Murray street factory all dyeing, cleaning, repairing and remodelling is carried on, besides the work of manufacture. Where possible machinery with electric power is employed and the work is done by expert hand sewers. The public is assured that Barrie's prices this season on all fur goods will be found to average lower this year owing to the increased output, capacity and direct purchases. Repairing and remodelling is made a feature and as with new garments satisfaction is guaranteed.

In regard to next year's plans the new season should find Barrie's Limited, in much larger premises and with retail and wholesale accommodation more in keeping with the business.

THE SEASON'S STYLES.

The present season finds a number of new fur styles that should be investigated by intending purchasers and those ladies possessing good furs. A detailed outline of the new fashions cannot be given here, but they but they are fully illustrated in a new catalogue issued by Barrie's, Limited, which will be sent upon request to those writing or asking for one.

GUNMEN ARE EXCLUDED; OPEN WAREFARE FEARED

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 26.—After another exciting day in the Tennessee House of Representatives, leaders of the political factions which have bandied charges that "gunmen" were being used to intimidate legislators, reached an agreement late yesterday afternoon to clear the capitol of all spectators. The State Senate was not in session and members of that body, city detectives, policemen and state officials not present on official business, were included in the "requist" to leave the capitol and the State House grounds.

This action was taken as a precaution against a threatened open clash between the factions that are fighting over the so-called liquor law enforcement bills. The agreement to disperse the gunmen was reached soon after the afternoon session was called to order, when it was stated that a detail of policemen and city detectives in plain clothes had been stationed in the corridors. Speaker Stanton deplored the presence of the policemen and requested that they be removed.

Three members of the House, Representatives McFarland, regular Democrat; Parnick Smith, Republican, and Lex Stone, Independent Democrat, were named a committee to clear the State House in accordance with the agreement. Mr. McFarland assembled the spectators in the corridors and addressed them, stating that the action decided upon was necessary for the preservation of the peace.

Several of the spectators declined to leave unless assured that city detectives and other alleged armed men obeyed the request. All the partisans of the opposing legislative factions finally left the building and the House was again called to order.

The regulars yesterday continued their filibuster against the law enforcement bills. These bills, three in number, are designed to strengthen the state-wide prohibition laws. They prohibit the shipment of liquor into the state, prohibit its shipment within the borders of the state and provide for action in criminal or civ courts to declare saloons public nuisances upon petition of ten taxpayer All three of the measures passed th Senate by a close vote.

GOVERNOR'S FRIEND WHO WAS ARRESTED FOR CONTEMPT OF COURT AND SENATOR WHO GOT CONFESSION FROM MRS. SULZER

SENATOR U. PALMER
PHOTOGRAPHS BY N.Y.HERALD STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER
JAMES C. GARRISON (IN ALBANY PRISON) AND KEEPER SIMON

Governor Sulzer's personal friend and special graft investigator, James C. Garrison, is in a cell of the Albany county penitentiary. He was remanded to that institution by the sergeant at arms of the State Assembly for refusing to answer questions put to him by the Speaker following arrest on a charge of contempt.

Garrison's alleged contemptuous statement was that four legislators sold their votes on the resolution impeaching Governor Sulzer.

Senator A. J. Palmer was the first person to bring the name of Mrs. Sulzer into the case publicly by saying she told him she was responsible for the Wall street stock deals.

GOVERNMENT PREFERS NOT TO ARREST CARSON

J. M. Robertson, M.P., Under Secretary of the Board of Trade, Says Ulster Provisional Government Can be Quelled by Cutting Off Postal Communication

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The Under-Secretary of the Board of Trade, J. M. Robertson, speaking at Newcastle last night, said that Sir Edward Carson's Provisional Government was an economic blunder and a practical impossibility, which could be ended by the British postoffiffice cutting it off from the rest of the world.

The Under Secretary declared that Sir Edward Carson was not prosecuted for the reason that "the Government did not wish to make King Carson a Saint-Carson."

Canon Pounden and Rev. Dr. Wright are elected chaplains to the Provisional Government. A frank, unbiassed review of the present situation brings the following conclusion:

While travelers who have recently been in Ulster declare that the temper of the Unionists there is unmistakably earnest and determined, there is in England not yet the faintest sign of general excitement. Everybody appears to have a vague impression that something or other will happen to straighten things out. Nobody attempts to say what it will be, but there are some months yet before even the Parliamentary machine at Westminster is to get going again, let alone before home rule goes into the mill for the last time, and all sorts of unexpected things might turn up.

Further conferences of the newly-formed Provisional Government to take over the administration of the affairs of Ulster if necessary have been checked by the illness of Sir Edward Carson, the leader of the Ulster Unionists, who has been ordered to bed by a physician to prevent a complete breakdown.

Extensive plans are being made for a great review of volunteers on Saturday, but that war preparation is not the chief absorption of the people is indicated by the request of the promoters to advance the hour of an important football game so as not to interfere with the review.

STILL AFTER CROTHERS

Resolution Levelled at Minister Comes up To-day

MONTREAL, Sept. 26.—The resolution calling for the resignation of the Hon. T. W. Crothers, the Minister of Labor, has been tabled at the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada. It will probably come up for decision this afternoon. Delegate C. W. Perry of the Toronto Photo Engravers' Union, No. 35, is responsible for the resolution, which reads:

"Whereas during the strike of the photo engravers in Toronto and Montreal, the union spent $2,000 in assisting Hon. Mr. Crothers and his Department to enforce section 27, par. 1 of the Immigration Act; that through his inability to fulfil his office it allowed Mr. Justice Graham, in the Superior Court at Halifax, to render the said section useless to Canadian organizations at large: be it herefore resolved that his convention through its proper officers, ask the Government for the resignation of the said Minister, so that the office may be filled by some one who would be a person capable of understanding and helping the laboring men of Canada in the times of their troubles, as that Department was originally intended for."

QUEEN IS ADAMANT.

And Princess Patricia Stands By Suffragette Friend.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—A cable from London says: The most unmistakable indication yet published as to Queen Mary's views on suffragism is afforded by what has happened this week with regard to Lord and Lady Spencer's invitation to Princess Patricia of Connaught to be one of the house party at Althorp with the King and Queen.

Princess Patricia recently appointed Miss Glenteil, a prominent suffragette, to be her lady-in-waiting during the absence of Miss Adams, and the new appointee was to have gone to Althorp this week in attendance.

The Queen refused to meet Miss Glenteil and the princess would not go to Althorp without her.

The incident, as far as the princess was concerned, was closed by the latter sending her regrets to Lady Spencer and going with her aunt, Princess Henry of Battenburg, to Abergeldie Castle, Scotland.

PROTEST IS MADE

Toronto Foresters Object To the New Scales of Rates.

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—Objecting to the legislation put through by the Supreme Court of the Independent Order of Foresters at their last session in Toronto during August, whereby the members who had joined the order prior to 1899, had to pay considerable sums to hold their policies or have a lien put upon them, about 100 members met last night in the Euclid Avenue Methodist Church to talk over the change to be introduced, and it was decided to hold further investigation into the whole matter. Sentiments expressive of lack of confidence as to the manner in which the affairs of the order are being conducted by the Supreme Court were indulged in on every side, and the almost unanimous decision was that the matter should be further probed, in order to arrive at the true state of affairs.

EVERYTHING GOES.

Sulzer's Judges Will Not Keep to Charges In Impeachment.

Jacob H. Schiff, a New York banker, testified that he was recently asked by Samuel I. Frankenstein, a former law partner of Governor Sulzer, if he would accept the return of the alleged $2,500 campaign contribution which the banker Wednesday said he gave to the governor without restriction as to its use. Mr. Schiff said he had replied negatively.

The high court, by an unanimous vote, decided to admit all testimony pertaining to campaign contributions made to the governor, even though they were not specified in the articles of impeachment.

This ruling paved the way for the introduction of evidence intended to show the governor had solicited and received large contributions from brewing interests.

The governor asked, according to the testimony, that these contributions be given in cash instead of checks.

Counsel for the impeachment managers said they were prepared to prove the governor received campaign contributions "vastly in excess" of the total mentioned in the articles of impeachment. There were more than 100 not accounted for, counsel asserted.

The names of a large number of these contributors other than those of the brewing interests were brought into the evidence. These included the names of fifty-two persons mentioned as drawers of Sulzer checks in the account of Louis A. Sarecky, the governor's campaign secretary, in the Mutual Alliance Trust Co. This account showed, with checks and cash, that deposits of $14,000 had been made between Sept. 10, 1912, and the date of the governor's inauguration.

Decision on the question as to whether Sulzer's alleged misuse of checks given the governor without restriction as to their use constituted larceny was reserved to give the court an opportunity to investigate the authorities.

PAYMASTER SHOT

Lewis Dean Is Victim of Would-Be Assassin Near Sherbrooke, Que.

SHERBROOKE, Que., Sept. 26.—gamated Mines, was shot in the back by an unidentified man yesterday afternoon while he was driving to Black Lake to pay off the men at the mines. A posse is searching for Dean's assistant. Dean, who is fifty years old, is in a local hospital and his chances for recovery are good.

The paymaster had in his possession a check for a considerable amount, but carried no cash.

Five pellets from the shotgun which the would-be assassin used entered Dean's back, his life being saved by the fact that the greater part of the gun's charge entered the back of the carriage seat and failed to penetrate it.

Alverstone Has Recovered.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—A London cable says Lord Alverstone has practically recovered from his long illness, and unless a relapse occurs it is certain he will resume his post as Lord Chief Justice on October 12.

This will bring the greatest relief to the administration, which had selected Sir Rufus Isaacs for the position, but feared a popular outcry on account of the Marconi scandal.

EIGHT CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH

Family Resided on Third Story of Wooden Building Which Was Destroyed by Fire---Parents and One Son Were Rescued But Mother Died This Afternoon

Canadian Press Despatch.

QUEBEC, QUE., Sept. 26.—Lucienne, Yvonne, Alice, Therese, Charles Alphonse, Jules and Jean Trudel, whose ages range from 2 to 16 years, are the names of eight children who were cremated as they slept last midnight, in a fire which occurred in a wooden building situated at 62 St. Frances street, while the parents and another son are the inmates of the hospital suffering from burns.

Flames were seen issuing from a three storey wooden house owned and occupied by Ulric Trudel and five other families about midnight. The fire brigade was soon on the spot, but owing to the inflammable nature of the building, the whole structure was soon ablaze, and the Trudel family living on the third storey, were cut off from escape.

The parents were awakened, and managed to drop one son to the ground, and with one daughter made their escape. Mrs. Trudel was horribly burned. She was rescued from the burning building by firemen.

The charred remains of the victims were recovered by morning. Mrs. Trudel is said to be in a dangerous condition.

Later—Mrs. Trudel died this afternoon after terrible sufferings.

DEATH TOLL IS THREE

Car Caught Fire After Striking a Tree

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—When one of the rear wheels on the motor car of J. B. Bickell broke from the ax[illegible] the car was traveling at a rapid rat[illegible] toward the city on the Dundas road near Cooksville, early yesterd[illegible] morning, causing the machine to collide with [illegible], two men were al[illegible] instantly killed and another so b[illegible]ly injured that he is likely to die. T[illegible] other members of the part[illegible] slightly hurt, but were able [illegible]o home. The accident occurred what is known as the Cooksvi[illegible] shortly after midnight.

The dead and injured are:

Dead: William McKay, carne[illegible] age 36, 4 Radenhurst avenue, [illegible] on, single, employed at Fairba[illegible] Horse Co.; James Thomas, ag[illegible] 1 Gerrard street east.

Fatally injured: Arthur Broo[illegible] age 30, married, 2 Roslin aven[illegible] near the Don.

Injured: Walter Jones, age 30 married, 29 Lovat place, near Sumach street; John McSwiggan, age 30, 69 Huron street.

There were about twenty men who went in motor cars on Wednesday to the Price Dairy Farm at Erindale. Shortly before midnight the four cars started back for the city. The ill-fated machine was the last to leave.

John Reynold, chauffeur to Mr. Bicknell, had charge of the motor car and he claims that he was not driving very fast. McKay, Thomas, Brooks, Jones and McSwiggan were laughing and chatting in the car when the wheel flew off and the machine crashed into a large elm tree at one side of the road.

The occupants were thrown out on to the road. McKay was killed instantaneously, but Thomas lived for a half hour afterwards.

The car caught fire after striking the tree and then the gasolene tank exploded, blowing fragments of the car in all directions. [illegible]ne of the other cars was some miles ahead, but a member of the party glanced back and saw the reflection of the fire. They turned around. The injured were placed in the car and hurried to the General Hospital. Thomas died soon after the car left the scene of he tragedy.

TO INVESTIGATE LOANS.

Bankers Will Consider Advances To Farmers To Aid Threshing.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 26.—The election of officers and the discussion relative to the loaning of money to farmers that they might continue their threshing were features of the meeting of the Canadian Bankers' Association yesterday. As the latter subject met with approval a committee was appointed more fully to investigate the question.

The suggestion that extra manual classes be established for the training of bank clerks at Queen's University, Kingston, was favorably received and a committee appointed to investigate. The resignation of J. T. Knight as secretary was accepted. The balance of the time was given to routine matters which were not made public.

Col. D. R. Wilkie of the Imperial Bank was re-elected to the presidency.

HON. FRANK COCHRANE PLANS HIGH DEVELOPMENT

SOO CANAL TO BE DEEPENED

Steps to Expropriate Land for Enlargement of Upper Lake Channel is Only a Part of Scheme to Provide a Thirty-Foot Waterway From the Head of the Lakes to the Atlantic

OTTAWA, Sept. 26.—As a preliminary to the enlargement of the Canadian canal at Sault Ste. Marie to a depth of 31 feet, the Government is arranging for the expropriation of Whitefish Island and an additional strip of land along the south side of the present canal. Most of the property is owned by the Algoma Central Railway, and the Department of Justice is now instituting expropriation proceedings. Although there was no vote passed at the last session of Parliament for this purpose, the Minister of Railways and Canals, Hon. Frank Cochrane, is taking prompt action to secure the land when it can be got for a comparatively small amount, and before contemplated investments by private parties are made, thus rendering the property more valuable.

The actual work of enlarging the canal must, of course, wait until sanctioned by Parliament, but it is understood that a vote will be asked at the next session of Parliament for a preliminary survey and for the preparation of plans.

The enlargement of the Soo Canal is a logical sequence to the enlargement of the Welland Canal. The next step will be the enlargement of the whole St. Lawrence canal system so as to give a continuous 30-foot channel right through from the head of the lakes to the Atlantic. This is the big scheme which Hon. Frank Cochrane is reported to have in view, and which the Government, it is said, will adopt. The formal announcement of the whole scheme will probably not be made for some considerable time yet, but meanwhile the enlargement of the Welland and the Soo Canals will be proceeded with.

DOUBLES IN CRIME.

Frisco Police [illegible] One of Daring Twin Criminals.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 26.—The exploits of clever twin criminals who have escaped punishment for a series of murders and robberies in all parts of the United States by masquerading as each other, are believed by the local police to have been broken up here in the arrest of Fred. Brokaw, alias Fred. Boley, alias R. White, who is being held until he can be extradited to Pittsburg to face a charge of robbery and assault.

Brokaw is identical in every feature and in complexion and stature with "W. R. Anderson," who is now being sought in Indianapolis for the murder of Joseph Schlansky, a merchant, who was found in Anderson's room in an Indianapolis hotel shot through the head and with a rope around his neck.

It is believed that Brokaw and "Anderson," relying on their remarkable resemblance, deliberately planned a long series of crimes, taking care that they should be in large cities hundreds of miles apart when the crimes were committed. When one man was arrested he could immediately prove that he was the other and thus escape justice. It is claimed that Anderson in this way, at least, a half dozen, alibis for Brokaw, and that Brokaw has returned the compliment on every occasion.

According to the police the two were so daring in their operations when one was in "hot water" the other one, half a continent's breadth away, would deliberately set himself in the way of police snares as to be arrested. He would then show that he was not the man wanted, and meanwhile his comrade would make good his escape.

BABEL

There seems to be a determination on the part of certain Conservative newspapers not to let the bi-lingual question rest with a mere protest against the recent further concession to the French in Ontario.

The Kingston Standard has adopted a distinctly militant attitude toward the whole question of bilingualism. Some papers would abolish the bilingual post card because it is a pretext for carrying the idea further.

It is a very difficult problem, for Canada is a "bi-lingual" country and to compare it with the States in this respect is not a fair comparison. It would be much better for Canada as a nation to observe the one language in all public concerns. But while Quebec is French and insists upon the French language and the postal department is a Dominion organization, bilingualism must prevail in all postal documents.

But on this question of education which goes to the very root of our civic life in Ontario, there can be only one opinion with English-speaking people. Ontario is a purely British province and all its public institution recognize but one language. The bilingual postal card is for the convenience of Quebec, and is not circulated in Ontario for the sake of its French inhabitants.

The French people of Ontario have no more claim to special treatment in language than the Italian or any other of the many nationalities residing in the province.

As we have already said in a previous article upon this subject, this question of language is vital to our national welfare and growth and the effect of this confusion of tongues will be the same as it was with Babel, to confuse and separate, and to destroy our nation-building. Let us speak one language and there will be an end of misunderstanding.

THE CANADIAN LEAGUE

Mr. Arthur Hawkes and Mr. Cooper have, so to speak, kicked off at Newmarket. The game is now supposed to be in progress. But it is to be feared that it will be a very tame and one-sided affair, for the two gentlemen disclaim any antagonism to either party, and from this we must presume that the game is between "their two selves"—a sort of "dribbing" display.

Whatever may be said against party politics, it is certain that there never was any politics without party. Politics has often been called a game, and it is not a bad simili. There is nothing wrong in the game itself it is the players who degrade the game. If the players are good sportsmen and will play clean and fair, and not get nasty and unmannerly with each other then politics is a very invigorating and interesting game indeed.

It is difficult to see what is the real intention of Mr. Hawkes and his partner. They claim to be in favor of the contribution which the Senate rejected, but only as a temporary policy. That is exactly where the government stands, so what's the trouble?

The only point at which these gentlemen seem to be at variance with the government is that they demand an immediate pronouncement from the government of its adherance to the Rainbow and Niobe policy. This seems to be the sole reason for Mr. Hawkes' desertion of his party.

Mr. Hawkes knew those ships were sinking but he advised the rest of the crew to stick to the old ship while he admired their courage from the Canadian League lifeboat.

The truth is that the Rainbow and the Niobe were long ago derelicts of the deep, and a danger to all useful navigation. But the Laurier Government had not the heart to blow them up. This was left to Mr. Borden and it was done with due respect and expedition, to the pretended horror and dismay of the Liberal Press.

Since the disappearance of this Canadian toy-navy no one, not even the Globe, has felt the least bit less secure against invasion by any lurking enemy. Not one editorial has appeared in the Globe warning the government against the exposure of our coasts by the removal of these Dreadnoughts. The Globe has repeatedly assured its readers of the splendid condition of the British Navy and in that fact it finds cheap consolation.

As for Mr. Hawkes' laudable intention to cleanse politics and make it an "honorable profession and not an accursed trade," every decent politician will be with him, both Liberal and Conservative.

But this does not explain the position of the Canadian League, for Mr. Hawkes and Mr. Cooper are not the only examples of honor and disinterestness in Canadian politics. If a person desires to cleanse the interior of a house the proper sphere of operations is not in the street throwing stones at the windows. This may attract attention, but a more constructive policy would be more profitable if less spectacular.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I see the Council Monday night decided to put the sidewalk outside the trees on McDonnel street. Now, what will the street look like right in the centre of the city just for one block one side of the street inside trees, the other outside? Talk about beautifying our city, and then go and do a thing like that, and for an excuse that it is for economy's sake as there won't be so much roadway to keep up, and make themselves the laughing stock for years to come, when visitors come to our city and stand on the park and see such a piece of work as that. If the other walks were not down, then there might be some hope ofs of making it even. If the Council is anxious to economize, let them try it on the other streets where the pavement walks are not yet laid. I thought they had more backbone in them than that. Have they ever gone up and stood and imagined what it will look like when it is done, and think well. I voted for that to be done, and have people ask what kind of a Council are they? Because some men from the church came and petitioned for it to be done they gave in. I believe that the most of them are dead against it, and a petition should be got up and get those in favor of it to sign the petition, and I think the majority would be for it to stay where it is. If it is done as the Council voted, it will be the biggest mistake they ever made. I think the tax-payer should have a little to say in it.

Yours truly,
RESIDENT OF McDONNEL ST.
Peterborough, Ont., Sept. 26th. 1913.

LORD NORTHCLIFFE AND THE CANADIAN PRESS

Some Candid Criticisms—Poorly Paid Journalists—Inefficient Reporters—Scotchman the Best Journalists

Lord Northcliffe, the famous publisher, who has been handing out compliments to the local press very freely was in a more critical mood to-day, when asked for his candid opinion of Canadian newspapers. He hesitated for a moment, and then delivered a few caustic comments which showed that the distinguished journalist travels with his eyes open and has some very positive opinions on newspaper work when he cares to express them. He contrasted many phases of the Canadian press with their prototypes in England with a result that was not flattering. His opinion of what he termed "the machines of publicity across the line" was even less complimentary.

He critized the inaccuracy of Canadian journals in spelling and in grammar. He also said that Canadian journalists were very poorly pain. He was very definite as to efficiency in reporting and said that every reporter ought to be a shorthand writer.

But he thought that Canadian journals were far more reliable than those over the line.

PRAISE FOR THE SCOTCH.

Lord Northcliffe has a great admiration for the Scottish newspaper man and considered that Toronto owed its premier position in Canadian newspaperdom to the number of Scotsmen connected with the journals.

"The majority of my London staff are Scotsmen," he proceeded. "It is a young Scotsman who looks after my French editions and my chief engineer is a Scotsman. You can't beat the Scot for accurate newspaper work.

"I consider that the public is very patient here. They accept uncomplainingly many things that we could not get away with in England. The English public are very exacting and they are quite an important factor in keeping the daily journals up to the scratch. The Canadian is not so exacting in his demands and perhaps that accounts in large measure for some of the conditions existing here to which I have referred."

MARIA'S MONEY

She Drew Too Much on Her Imagination

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Maria Bevis dusted the glass showcase in her little store, piled the bolts of percale and gingham neatly on the shelves, hung some imitation lace collars in the window and unlocked the door for the day's business.

Behind the store, which was the front parlor of her house, were the rooms where Maria lived.

As she sat at the window waiting for customers she saw a girlish form hurry past and enter the grocery store. Maria Bevis smiled sourly.

"Shiftless," she muttered, snatching irritably at the red yarn of her ball. "If that ain't just like Amy Lane. Probably just got out of bed and gone to the store for something for breakfast! I never could believe Cousin Sam's daughter could be so different from me! Bevises have always been thrifty and hardworking. Somehow Amy Bevis was different; then she went and married Howard Lane, and everybody knows it's starvation business running a country newspaper. But"—

"Well, Maria, how goes it!" twittered Ida Ramsell girlishly.

"I'm all right, Ida," returned Maria dryly. "Going out to sew today?"

"Yes—up to Mrs. Bremer's. I'll want two yards of slate colored silesia and two spools of black thread No. 60, I guess. Just saw Amy," remarked Ida.

"So did I."

"Amy looks sick, Maria."

"Probably she eats too much pastry. I hear she lives out of the bakery," sniffed Maria, squinting nearsightedly into a box of thread.

"They are having a hard time to get along," murmured Ida kindly.

"Humph! Howard better go to work and do something that will bring in real money. I never dreamed when I lent that money to Amy's father that he would die without a penny. When I spoke to her about it she and Howard up and promised to pay every cent, with interest."

"I heard they said they would pay compound interest."

Maria flushed. "You do hear a lot of trashy talk, Ida! Howard did say that, but it's all talk. They've never made but the one payment on the interest I never expect to get the rest."

"I expect it's a good deal for you to lose," suggested Ida inquisitively.

"That's a personal matter," returned Maria stiffly. "It's enough that I lent it to Cousin Sammy, and he gave me the note for it payable on demand. Amy and Howard have promised to pay it. But, land, I've given it up!"

"Folks say you don't speak to Amy and Howard now," ventured Ida Ramsell as she arose to go.

"For once folks are right. I told 'em I didn't hold to keeping acquaintance with cheats."

"Maria!" For once Ida's sharp voice was warmly sympathetic for young Howard Lane and his wife, Amy. Swiftly she changed the topic. "Mr Busby told me to tell you that you was appointed one of the delegates to the convention at Ripple River. There'll be twenty-five churches represented. Mrs. Bremer's another. I suppose you'll go?"

"Go nowhere!" cried Maria bitterly. "I can't afford to, Ida. If Amy would pay me that money I could go."

"Well, I'm sorry. Goodby," said Ida hurriedly, and the door jangled after her. "My," she breathed as she skipped down the street, "Maria must have lent them a lot of money! When I think of all the things she's wanted to do and couldn't because of the money tied up in that family loan I feel's if she was a martyr."

Ida Ramsell repeated that remark the next afternoon at the sewing society, and a buzz of laughter went around the group of busy women.

"It must be thousands of dollars," observed Mrs. Bremer quietly, "although I never could understand how Maria Bevis could get hold of very much to lend. I remember, when I went into black for Mr. Bremer, I offered to sell her my new garnet silk, but Maria said she couldn't afford it just then; she'd lent every penny to Sammy's folks and they hadn't paid her back."

"Too bad of her to talk so much about it," said the minister's wife. "Family affairs are best kept in the family."

"That's what I'm always telling Maria," chirruped Ida Ramsell, sewing jerkily. "But she will gabble about it. Does seem's if her milk of human kindness was turned to vinegar and she just rejoiced in gettings slaps at Howard and Amy."

"I wonder how the baby is," murmured Mrs. Busby, the minister's wife.

"Better, so Amy said when I ran in there yesterday. Seems they had trouble with the milk from Long's. Howard wants to buy a cow, but I guess he doesn't dare to until they pay Maria."

That same night Amy and Howard Lane sat in their garden and talked of the future and played with Joyce, who seemed much better. From a tent on the green came sounds of laughter and threads of music, where a fair was in full swing.

Howard's arm was around Amy's waist. "Dear, if you hadn't married me you might have been over there enjoying yourself," he said, a little bitterly. "Now you are ashamed to go because you haven't got decent shoes to wear and because if you spent a penny Cousin Maria would frown and call us"—

"Cheats," finished Amy, with a little laugh. "Never mind, Howard. I've been to lots of fairs, and I've got you and baby, and that's enough for any girl. Only I do wish we could pay Cousin Maria's note."

They started to go into the house when a man entered the front gate and came briskly toward them. "Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lane?" he asked abruptly.

"Yes," said Howard.

"I'm Tobias Bevis—Maria's brother. Guess you've heard of me from your father. Amy, ain't it? You was a little girl when I went away. Your father, my Cousin Sammy, mortgaged his house for $1,000 to send me to California to get back my health. Well, I got it back and went to Australia, and I've been making money. I've brought back Cousin Sammy's money with compound interest. It's here in this packet. I'm sorry I couldn't give it to him direct. He was one of the best men in the world." The man's voice trembled as he finished speaking.

Without questioning why this long delayed loan was only now being repaid, Howard and Amy ushered Tobias Bevis into the house and listened to his story.

"I came here first. Maria wasn't home, and I went to the minister, Mr. Busby, and he gave me the particulars of Cousin Sammy's death. I'm sorry, Amy, that your father lost his home on account of me, but I'll make it up, if I can, to this little girl of yours. Did you say her name was Joyce?"

He played with the baby while Amy and Howard counted the money with trembling fingers and unbelieving eyes. Twenty-two hundred dollars! What wealth! Perhaps there would be enough left after Cousin Maria's awful debt was paid to give them a fair start in the world. Paying the interest had always kept them back.

"We must go tonight," whispered Amy, and Howard nodded assent.

Tobias promised to care for the baby until their return, and the happy pair hastened to Maria's house, where they found that spinster in a state of perturbation over the discovery of a man's leather suit case on her front piazza.

"What in time has happened?" she asked tartly as she ushered them into her sitting room.

"We've come to pay the note," said Amy proudly. "Will you please bring it at once, Cousin Maria? We must get it off our minds."

"With compound interest," added Howard.

Maria looked at them blankly. She had never expected the note to be paid, and she had not looked at it for years.

Slowly she walked to the china closet and took down a large blue china teapot. She thrust her hand in the top and drew out a bundle of yellowed papers.

Her spectacled eyes selected one and brought it to the table and laid it on the red cover. "There it is," she said skeptically. "Do you want to pay the whole of it?"

"I hope it isn't over $2,000," whispered Amy prayerfully as she turned over the note.

She stared uncomprehendingly at it and gave it to her husband. "What does it say?" she whispered tensely.

Howard read and his face flushed.

"Cousin Maria, do you mean to say that this note is only for $25—that that is all Father Bevis borrowed from you?" he demanded hotly.

Maria nodded dazedly. "I guess that's right," she said sheepishly. "Somehow I got to thinking how many things I could do with that money. It got to seem like a whole lot. I—I"—She paused helplessly, while Howard counted out $30 and pushed it across the table. Then he caught up the note and set a lighted match to it. When it crumbled to ashes he looked across the blacked fragments on the red cloth into Maria's scared eyes.

"Maria Bevis," he said gravely, "you've spoiled the three years of our married life, all for that paltry little sum. It is paid in full. How are you going to pay us back for the agony you have caused us? You have made us the laughingstock of the village and"—

"Don't Howard," said Amy softly. "Please don't. She is sorry."

"What would Rippledale say if it knew how much we really owed you?" Howard added remorselessly.

Maria's head dropped into her hands. "Tell 'em," she sniffed miserably. "I don't blame you one mite!"

There was silence. Then Howard spoke abruptly. "We won't tell a word, Maria. People may think what they please about the amount, but it is your place to inform every one that the note is paid, the debt is canceled. Will you do it?"

"Yes," cried Maria fervently. "I'll tell 'em tomorrow at the missionary meeting, and I don't suppose you'll ever have much to do with me again."

"Nonsense," said Amy brightly. "I'm coming over tomorrow morning with baby to buy something for new little dresses and we will have a cozy chat."

But Maria Bevis punished herself in her own way. When her brother Tobias came in and surprised her by his sudden arrival she told him the whole story, and any one who knew Maria Bevis and realized how she worshiped this young brother might understand that Maria Bevis was not too old to learn a lesson.

AUCTION SALES.

Elisha Yale Held the First One in England In 1700.

The first auction sale in England was held in 1700 by Elisha Yale, who had been governor of Madras and who adopted that plan for selling the East Indian wares he had brought home. The sale attracted wide attention and was so successful that others immediately adopted the plan.

Before the close of the eighteenth century England began to place a tax on auction sales, and at times these duties have ranged as high as 5 per cent. In 1845 the tax was repealed but a charge imposed on the license to be taken out by all auctioneers. The abuses at auctions, caused by combinations of brokers to bid up the offerings, led to the adoption of stringent regulation.

In America auctioneers of a certain class have also been guilty of many impositions on the public. Fake "auction sales" of alleged bankrupt stocks of merchandise, "fire sales" and similar schemes have long been used to impose on the credulous. At many such sales the auctioneer has confederates in the crowd who start the bidding and continue it until some legitimate bidder has offered a price that affords the promoters a handsome profit. The imposition of heavy fines and prison sentences has discouraged this class of auctioneers in most sections.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Thousand-year-old Castle.

Tamworth castle, which has had a thousand years of checkered existence, stands on the site of a Saxon fortress, built by a daughter of Alfred the Great, which was formerly the seat of the kings of Mercia. It will be familiar by name to all readers of Scott, who has made famous

Lord Marmion
Of Tamworth tower and town.

The present edifice is mainly a Jacobean structure, standing on a lofty artificial mound and chiefly remarkable for a multangular ivy clad tower and a rather gloomy banqueting hall. It was sold to the corporation some years ago by the Marquis Townshend, who is on the distaff side a lineal descendant of the Marmions.—Westminster Gazette.

ADHESIVE TAPE.

Did You Ever Think How Useful It May Be In the Home?

A little forethought will provide adhesive tape for many emergency uses in the household outside of the sick room. Labels for bottles and jars can be made of it, since the name is easily printed in ink, and the whole label may be removed with no effort when it is outgrown. A hot-water bottle can be mended with adhesive tape; in fact, any rubber hose or container may have its life prolonged by it. Even a three cornered tear in a cloth or dark dress becomes invisible when pressed in place over a small square of it.

If any tacks are not at hand when the window shade is pulled off the roller adhesive tape will put it back strongly and neatly. "And when I have a corn or a tender spot on my foot," said the trained nurse who suggested some of these uses, "a little patch of adhesive tape is a great comfort and protection from chafing." A binding strip of adhesive tape is invaluable for sheet music that is much in use. Manuscripts, too, can be fastened together at the top with a broad band of it."

Strips of adhesive tape are splendid for training plants, such as ivy or other vines, against a house foundation, for fastening rose bushes or tomato vines to the supporting frames or for any use in the garden when string or wire would cut the tender, growing stalks.—New York Tribune.

Turner Proofs for Britain.

The British Museum has received, as the gift of Mr. W. G. Rawlinson, four rare and valuable proofs of the unpublished plates of Turner's "Liber Studiorum," making the series in the Print Room almost complete. The subjects are "Sheep - washing, Windsor," "Crowhurst, Sussex," "Swiss Bridge, Mont. St. Gothard," and "The Stork and the Aqueduct."

Time Enough.

"Some women make me very tired," said the first agitatress. "I asked one woman if she believed in woman suffrage, and she didn't know; she'd have to ask her husband."

"Did you find out how long she had been married?" asked the second agitatress.

"Yes. Three weeks."

"Oh, never mind; I guess she'll do to call on again in a year or so."—New York World.

COMPLICATED WILL CASE IS ENDED

Judgment is Given in Favor of the Plaintiff

Judgment has just been given in favor of the plaintiff in the case of Goldsmith vs. Harnden et al. tried at the sittings of the High Court Division at Belleville before the Chancellor Sir John A. Boyd. The facts in the case go back over more than half a century and include an unusually large number of the technicalities of real estate law which a dozen lawyers have been engaged in unravelling.

In 1846 the late John Platt, a prosperous merchant of Warkworth, made his will appointing the late Thos. Scott of Cobourg, and Adam Henry Meyers, of Trenton his executors. After disposing of other interests, the will purported to give a farm of 103 acres in the township of Cramahe, now Brighton, to his brother the late Daniel Platt for life, then to the late Homer Platt for life, then to such of Homer Platt's offspring as Homer Platt should appoint and should survive Homer Platt. The wording of the will was such that it left it open to the contention that Homer Platt took an estate tail instead of an estate for life, and he mortgaged the farm in fee to the late John Eyre, barrister of Brighton, and afterwards sold the equity of redemption. Homer Platt then, on the assumption that he only had an estate for life appointed the farm in fee to his daughter Luella Sweet who mortgaged it to the late E. B. Stone, Barrister of Peterborough, and who assigned it to Senator Cox. Luella Sweet afterwards sold and conveyed the farm in fee simple to the late Dr. Goldsmith, then practising in Peterborough, who conveyed to his wife, the plaintiff. After all this in 1900 Homer Platt purported to revoke the appointment to his daughter, Luella Sweet, and made a new appointment to two other daughters, Mrs. Harnden, of Warkworth, and Mrs. (Dr.) Rauiston, of New York, for a consideration of $500.

In the case of Sweet vs. Platt, the late Sir Chas. Moss, acting for Eyre, contended that Homer Platt had an estate in tail, and could convey to Eyre, but the Chancellor determined that Homer Platt had only a life estate, and that the mortgage to the late John Eyre affected only that life estate. Homer Platt died in 1912. In the case of Goldsmith vs. Harnden, the defendants contended that the appointment to their sister Luella Sweet was void because there was no consideration for it, and it was made without Luella Sweet's knowledge at the time. The Chancellor, however, determined that the first appointment of Homer Platt to his daughter, Luella Sweet, was irrevocable and binding, and therefore the plaintiff took the farm to the exclusion of the defendants, Mrs. Harnden and Mrs. Rauiston.

W. C. Mikel, K.C., acted for plaintiff, and the defendants were represented by Geo. Drewry and E. Guss Porter, K.C.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE FR. BROPHY

Will be Buried Beside His Father and Mother

The remains of the late Father Brophy, who passed away at Kingston, arrived in the city this afternoon via the 5.35 G.T.R. train and were taken to St. Peter's Cathedral.

To-morrow morning at nine o'clock the funeral mass will be said, after which the remains will be interred at St. Peter's Cemetery, where his father and mother were buried.

BENEDICTION BY HIS EXCELLENCY MGR. STAGNI

Large Congregation Present at Sacred Heart Church

His Excellency Monseigneur Stagni D.D., Apostolic Delegate to Canada, concluded the various consecration ceremonies last night, when he officiated at the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament at the Church of the Sacred Heart. The church, beautifully decorated with yellow and white, was filled to its utmost capacity.

Before the ceremony began Rt. Reverend Bishop O'Brien and the Papal Delegate spoke a few words. Bishop O'Brien said he wished to thank the delegate for coming to the Church of the Sacred Heart, and His Lordship remarked that his first visit in his episcopal capacity would be a memorable one for he brought with him the representative of Pope Pius the tenth.

Bishop O'Brien then stated that he announced last Sunday his successor as pastor of the parish of the Sacred Heart would be made known in the near future, and a more appropriate time than the present could not be found for the announcement. He then made known that Rev. Father John O'Brien, formerly of Lakefield, had been chosen as their new pastor.

In conclusion he asked the parishioners to be loyal and true to their new leader, and he hoped that abundant blessings would come to the parish of the Sacred Heart.

The Papal Delegate then addressed the congregation, and stated that it was a very great pleasure for him to visit this church in company with the bishop who was only a few days hence their pastor. He congratulated the parish on having their pastor chosen bishop and gave a few words of advice to the parents present. "Be careful," he said, "that no scandal, no bad example or no bad language ever enters into your home but let the fear of God and Catholic devotion reign supreme. If God gives you a son whom He calls for Himself, it is a great honor and you should be proud, and if it is an honor for a family to give their child to the service of God, then is it not also an honor for a parish to have their parish priest chosen to the bishopric? This great privilege had fallen on the parish of the Sacred Heart. But your connections with him are not ended. Pray for him and take pride in the bishop of the diocese, who was such a short time ago your pastor."

In conclusion His Excellency thanked once more the citizens of Peterborough for the good-will with which they received him, and hoped to be able to visit Peterborough again. He concluded by giving his blessing to the congregation.

The delegate then gave Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, assisted by Father John O'Brien and Father Phelan, with Father McCauley as master of ceremonies.

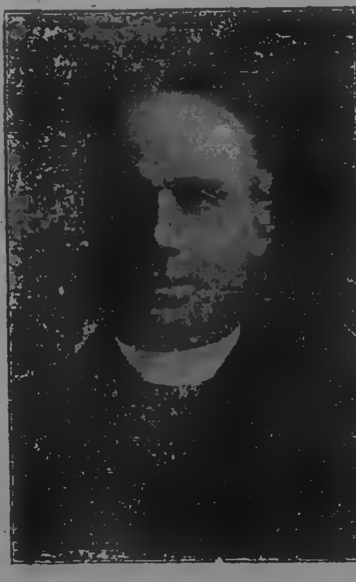
Among the clergy present were: Ven. Archdeacon Casey, Father Meagher, Father McFadden, Father Bretherton, Father Phelan, Father J. J. O'Brien and Father Ferguson.

This morning His Excellency visited Mount St. Joseph, and went to Lindsay at noon. He will return to this city to-night and leave on the midnight for Ottawa.

CHANGES IN THE DIOCESE

Venerable Archdeacon Casey is Vicar General

The elevation of Right Rev. M. J. O'Brien to the Episcopate has brought about several changes. The Venerable Archdeacon Casey of Lindsay, has been made Vicar General of the diocese of Peterborough succeeding the late Rev. Father Brown. Rev. W. J. McColl, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, has been made Dean of this part of the diocese. Rev. J. J. O'Brien of Lakefield has been appointed pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart while Rev. Fergus O'Brien of the Cathedral staff will succeed Rev. J. J. O'Brien at Lakefield.



REV. FATHER W. J. McCOLL
Who has been made Dean of this part of the Peterborough diocese.

THIEF VISITS GROCERY STORE

But He Had Poor Returns For His Trouble

There are indications which point towards the presence of burglars thieves in this city and the outlying villages. Suspicious looking individuals have been seen loitering about certain premises and the police have been acquainted with a case of theft at Lillico's grocery store, at the corner of Park and Charlotte streets.

The intruder forced an entrance by way of the cellar but his haul was not large, there being only a few coppers in the till.

The display of carriage horses was exceptionally good, and the cattle were excellent in quality.

Millinery Styles For Autumn and Winter

Fashion—in spite of all the vagaries with which she is accused—offers a most serviceable, sensible hat in the prevailing Autumn and Winter styles.

The correct colorings, which are brown, purple or black, are not easily soiled, while it is doubtful if one can find a material that will give more service than plush, velvet or felt, the chosen fabrics for this season's shapes.

Combine with these qualities, a rich appearance, smart trims of feathers or ribbon, and one will see that Fashion presents a hat that at once satisfies the demands of good style yet keeps within the bounds of economy.

So with a certain amount of pride in the production of our own workrooms, we have prepared an attractive array of Autumn and Winter Millinery, which is priced at........ $4.00 AND UP

MANY WILLS LEFT BY MAYOR GAYNOR

New York, Sep. 25 — Complications may attend the distribution of the $2,000,000 estate of William J. Gaynor, late Mayor of this city. Pending the filing of the supposedly last will of Mr. Gaynor, it was learned from a close friend of the Gaynor family that a number of wills had been drafted up by the late Mayor, and that some of them will undoubtedly make their appearance.

This friend declared that for a time Mayor Gaynor drew up a fresh will almost every month but no reason was assigned for this strange behavior. Most of the Gaynor estate consists of Brooklyn real estate and stock in a baking powder company.

Friends of the family were greatly shocked by the declaration that the Mayor's only bequest to Mrs. Gaynor in his will is the town house at No. 20 Eighth Avenue Brooklyn. It could not be learned whether he provided for her before he died.

LOCAL OPTION AT COBOURG

Another Fight for no Bars by Temperance Party

COBOURG, Sept. 26.—At a meeting of the Cobourg Temperance Committee of the Northumberland County Union, it was decided to bring on a local option contest for Cobourg in January next. A few years ago a local option by-law was submitted to the electors, and was carried by a majority, but lacked the three-fifths vote. Local temperance enthusiasts are confident of success if the measure is again submitted to the people. When Cobourg falls in line all of Northumberland County, if Alnwick Township also carries the by-law, will be under local option.

THE BUILDING OF WARSHIPS

First Few Ships Should be Built in England

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 26.—In the opinion of Sir Philip Watts, K.C.B., since 1911 advisor on naval construction to the British Admiralty, who has arrived in Vancouver, warships of the greatest kind could be built in Canada, but not as quickly or cheaply as they are turned out in England.

The best way, he declared, for Canada to start on naval construction would be to have a few ships built in England at first and then have some built partly in England and partly in Canada, and finally, when the workmen have been trained and the shipbuilding plants properly organized and equipped here, to build ships altogether in Canada.

"Of course," he said "the whole work no doubt could be done in Canada from the outset, but I think the cost would be very great and the ships would take a much longer time to construct than is the case in England."

DUCK SHOOTING

Unusual Spectacle Reported From Near Hastings

The season for duck shooting is progressing with varied fortunes for the hunters. An unusual spectacle was seen recently near Hastings when just as the sun was setting, and when it looked as though no birds would be coming in to roost, a flock of about one hundred suddenly appeared over the trees and started to circle preparatory to lighting in a large rice bed about one hundred yards square. Scarcely had these started to circle when another flock even larger appeared, then another and another until five separate flocks had come in and all in the air at once, circling and diving about, paying no attention whatever to the hunters hid in the marsh. They gradually came down alighting in the rice and weeds it being perfectly useless to shoot as dusk coming on it would have been impossible to find them without a dog.

Whether it was only a visit or a regular call could not be ascertained but never before had such flocks of black and wood ducks congregated in that small space.

CHARGE WITHDRAWN BY COMPLAINANT

Havelock, Sept. 26.—The case of Mathison vs. Parcels, of Havelock, which was to have been tried in Havelock yesterday, was withdrawn. It was alleged that a quantity of refuse had been deposited on his lot.

James Parcels, the defendant, held that the lot was public property and he also denied the charge.

The complainant being without a witness to testify that the defendant was the guilty party withdrew the charge. Keen interest was evinced in the case by the residents of the town and it promised to be of considerable interest.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, of Peterborough, acted for the defendant.

PREPARATIONS FOR WEDDING OF PRINCE ARTHUR

London, Sept. 26.—Invitations to the wedding of Prince Arthur of Connaught to the Duchess of Fife will be issued at the end of the month. The Chapel Royal is at present in a state of chaos. The work of preparing the interior for the event will be completed, it is expected, about the fourth of October. The pews have been removed and stored in the basement of St. James Palace. Raised stands have been erected in their place on both sides, in three tiers, to accommodate three hundred guests. A semi-circle of gilt chairs will be placed at the railing for the royal guests. One higher than the rest is for Queen Mary.

The keynote of the decorations is to be simplicity. There will be no lavish display of flowers or shrubs. Instead, white heather will figure largely out of respect to the bride, and, of course, there will be the usual bridal bouquets. The same carpet will be used which served at Their Majesties' wedding. The gold plate dates back to Charles the second. The books to be used are those used at the King's wedding. The bridal gown and trousseau are still in their elementary stages. The groom will give the bridesmaids diamond brooches bearing the royal monogram. Four queens will be in attendance. Prince Arthur's supporters will be his cousins the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

HIS RETURN BANQUET.

It Was a Grand Social Success and Cost the Major Nothing.

A veteran officer in the United States army recently told of the shrewdness displayed by a major in the old days. He had been appointed to the command of an army post on an island not a great way from San Francisco.

Soon after his arrival there a French fleet dropped anchor in the harbor. The commander invited the major aboard the flagship and entertained him royally.

The idea struck the worthy major the next day that he was in honor bound to return the compliment, but he was staggered by the expense involved.

To give a banquet befitting his dignity as a United States officer enter- ining a distinguished representative f a foreign nation would mean bank- ptcy, as the government had not au- horized him to draw on its treasury r such a purpose, and the cost of the ffair would have to come out of his wn pocket. A bright idea struck him.

He invited the naval visitors to be guests the third day thereafter at "American picnic." Then he sent vitations to the best people of the ighborhood to join him in a basket nic at a grove near at hand on the me day, "to meet our French naval iends now on our shores."

The people came with great baskets hampers of provisions. A royal ast was spread in the grove, and the nic was long remembered as one of e most notable social successes of time.—Chicago Record-Herald.

COFFEE AND ITS EFFECTS.

t Injurious When Used Moderately by Persons In Health.

In the light of the data that have accumulated in respect to the ysiological action of coffee it may fely be affirmed that it is not in- ious when used moderately by rea- bly healthy people. With the rasthenic and the dyspeptic it is a ewhat different matter. While rming symptoms have followed the ion of enormous quantities, there no evidence that fatally toxic effects ve ever ensued.

ee is a mild stimulant, and the ts are rather transient. The mod te use of coffee will not make a l man sick. Such moderate use ll not occasion disagreeable symp s in the healthy, such as insomnia che, nervousness, drowsiness, tation, dyspepsia, vertigo, etc. On other hand, it will obviate or re ve fatigue.

We do not consider coffee a neces ry concomitant of civilized life ich some extremists claim it to be our minds it is rather a luxury ich it is not necessary to dispense th unless one is compelled to do so a part of the attempt to combat increasing cost of living. As to moderate use of any of the things ich we ingest the same principles ply. Even such a valuable sub nce as milk has to be imbibed within son as to quantity, lest autointoxi- ion ensue.—Medical Times.

DERMOTT'S BEST MAN

Why He Came to America After Wedding That Happened Long Ago.

By FRANK FILSON.

Father O'Brien gave me a big wink when I had outlined my scheme to him. There wasn't a better sport than the Father in all the parishes round, and when it was a case of marrying a couple he'd move heaven and earth to bring it about. But the next time I went to see him there was no difficulty at all. I had caught Mary O'Toole's heart on the bounce and she wasn't the girl to go back on her word—not she.

Some people said it was a shabby trick to play, but I say a man's justified in using any means he can to win the woman he loves. And didn't I love Mary—hadn't I loved her for years until that thundering limb of a Terence MacShane came along and stole her heart out of my keeping?

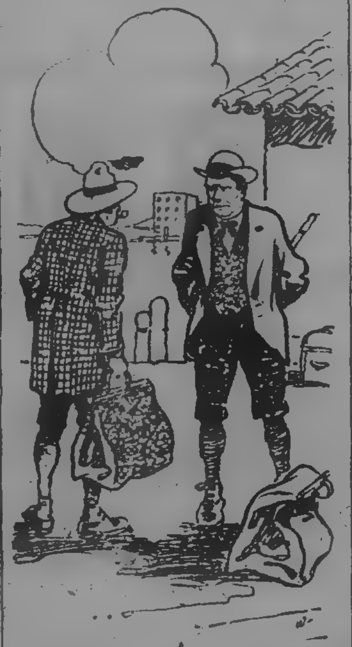
Mary and I had been born in the same week of the same year, and they say that when my father learned I was a boy he called Phil O'Toole into his bit of a parlor, first putting out the pig, because he wouldn't bring company into a stye.

"'Tis a boy I'm after having, Bill," my father said. "What do you say to making a match of it between him and your girl?"

"I'm agreeable," says Phil O'Toole, draining off his glass of poetheen that never saw a government stamp. And so it was ratified, and nobody ever expected that it would turn out any different.

We might have been twenty or a bit more when Terence MacShane comes riding in from Limerick and sees Mary and dismounts to ask for a glass of milk. I was away then, minding the still—bad cess to the government. We had to keep it running down in the bog lands where the smoke wouldn't rise above the mists, because there were government people all over Munster.

When I came back a few days later I found Terence sitting, bold as brass in Mary's cottage, and her very close to him and listening to all his gabble.



He Scowled at Me and I Scowled at Him.

When she saw me she started away, confused and guilty like, but I didn't take notice of the girl.

"Won't you come out where the sun's shining and take your dose, Mr. MacShane?" says I.

Up he springs and out he comes and we had a fine tussle in the cornfields; but seing he had my advantage by four inches and twenty pounds, it wasn't long before he had me down.

"Do you give me best, Mister Dermott?" he asks, sneering. But I said nothing and Terence rose with a laugh and went into Mary's cottage again. There wasn't a scratch or a bruise on him, either.

Well, that settled that, and I packed and got ready to take the boat for Cork, thinking maybe I'd go to America. I knew there were bigger fishes in the sea than I'd hooked yet. But my heart was sore for Mary O'Toole, and I couldn't stay in Dunchestown any longer.

Who should I meet at the dock but Terence himself, with his pack, and he scowled at me and I scowled at him; and then we both burst out laughing.

"So we're both in the same boat, Terence," I says. "There's an hour yet. Come, tell me all about it."

He told me, and I learned that he and Mary had quarreled bitterly the night before about some trifle—I think it was whether Limerick had better pigs than Dunchestown—and she had flung his ring in his face and slammed the door on him. By the time he had made an end of telling me we found that we had missed the boat. But by that time Terence had began to feel differently. He decided to go back to Limerick and not try his fortunes in Cork at all.

I didn't tell him my plans, but I saw him aboard the train and made my way back to Dunchestown. I was a long way from the cottage when I saw Mary sitting inside. She wasn't stirring hand or foot, and that meant something for Mary. When I got in her eyes were wet with crying.

"Mary, asthore," says I, "I've come back to you. Won't you take me?"

She put her head on my shoulder and cried there. And that's how I caught her heart on the bounce, as I said.

The wedding day was all settled, but very soon I saw that it was Terece all the time and not me she cared for. Faith, there's no telling how a girl's tastes will run. And I saw there wouldn't be overmuch happiness in store for us, but I wasn't going to let a Limerick man, and a giant at that, steal her from one of the Dermotts So I made out I didn't see through her pretense at caring for me.

As for Terence, I met him once when I was into Limerick with a drove of hogs. He looked at me sort of surly, but didn't bear malice when I went up and spoke to him. I found out that he loved Mary just as much as ever. But I didn't feel any more like losing the pride of Dunchestown to a Limerick man. So I put my troubles before the priest.

When Father O'Brien had heard my scheme for making an end of Terence, I mean as a possible cause of trouble after the ceremony, he winked, and clapped me on the back.

"Mary," I said that evening, "who do you think's going to be best man at the wedding next Thursday? Who but Terence MacShane?"

She started and began to protest. But I told her the priest had arranged that all enmity should be drowned in this way, and if the bridegroom couldn't choose his own best man who was going to do it for him? She fought over it for long, but at last I told her if she didn't allow it I'd refuse her at the ceremony and shame her before all the village. You ought to have seen the look she gave me then. If my head was as thick as a Limerick man's I'd have known why she was marrying me then. It was to spite Terence. And yet she couldn't bear to have him at the wedding.

I got her consent at last, after the Father had put in his word, and Thursday came, as a good many Thursdays have come along since then. We met Terence at the door, looking very sheepish and very wretched. I think the Father had word with his priest in Limerick and made him come as a penance for something. Anyway, there he stood, scowling at me and never looking at Mary, and she nearer crying than laughing. It was a strange sort of wedding.

Then the Father began, and when he came to asking the questions he sort of looked up inquiringly. I knew my cue had come.

"Wilt thou take this woman to be thy wedded wife?" he asked me, and I slipped out and caught Terence by the arm and dragged him up to Mary.

"Say 'yes,' Terence," I whispered and he said it quick as a flash. And the bans had been in his name, too, but nobody could read the Father's writing.

No, I didn't stay for the wedding breakfast. The fact is, I slipped out through the door before the ceremony was over. But that's how I came to America after all. It happened a long time ago, and—well, I've almost forgotten now.

While They Summed up Judge Went to Get in Some Hay, Leaving His Decision in Court.

Having a little fun with the justices of the supreme court at a recent dinner, Counselor Wilson C. Tipple told a story of how some decisions are rendered. He related the case of a North Carolina justice who had just been elected to the bench.

This justice, said Mr. Tipple, had the partition between the two front rooms of his home removed and here he was to hold court. His first case was before him and the evidence was all in. The attorney for the prosecution announced that he was ready to sum up and that it would take him about one hour. The attorney for the defense said that it would require an hour and fifteen minutes for him to properly present his side of the cose.

"His worship"—Mr. Tupple said they called a judge "Your worship" down in that neck of the woods—scratched his head in thought for a moment and then wrote a few lines on a slip of paper, which he carefully placed under a book on his desk. He then addressed the attorneys:

"You gentlemen can have this room to talk in as long as you like, and when you are all through you can look at this piece of paper under this book; there you will find my decision all written out. I'm going out in the fields and get in some hay."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Favorite Ruses.

"I'm so sorry, but I have an engagement this evening."

"Hello, dear. I won't be home to dinner. Have two or three hours' work to do yet. Don't sit up for me."

"I know you have me beat, but I'll call you."

"She's awfully plain and hasn't any style, but she has a sweet disposition."

"Oh, thank you, you couldn't have given me anything that would please me so much as your photograph."

"Yes, I have a charge account here, but I've decided to pay cash for everything."

"My daughter's had several chances to marry, but she's too independent."

"Come in! We'd be glad to have you look at the house, but we don't care to sell."

MORE SILVER TIPS

BRITISH COMMONS CLOAK ROOM MAN SEES LESS GOLD.

Well-known Official Has Retired After Fifty Years Has Occupied a Celebrated Position — His Predecessor Reputed to Have Retired With a Fortune of $100,000, But Retiring Officer Says Money is Scarcer Now.

A change has just taken place in one of the most sought-after positions in the British House of Commons—the cloak room superintendency. Mr. Henley, who has held the post for nearly fifty years, has retired to make room for a younger man. It may not at first be obvious why such a position should be coveted, but when it is learnt that Mr. Henley's predecessor by common repute retired with a fortune of over £20,000, it will quickly be seen what grounds there are for the statement.

Mr. Henley can congratulate himself on being comfortably off, and as a presentation has been made to him, subscribed to by every member in the "House," and by every member of the gilded chamber who was originally in the Commons, he can look forward to a nest-egg of £1,000 supplementing his savings.

Where King's Death Warrant Was Signed.

The cloak room is a long corridor forming a square, which is entered from Palace Yard. It is situated in one of the most ancient parts of the Palace of Westminster, the roof being a beautiful example of fair tracery, comparable with that in the Abbey. A little room branching off it is where, according to tradition, the death warrant of King Charles was signed. Etiquette prescribes that members shall leave their coats here, and leave only by this exit, although, of course, there are plenty of other exits.

At the top of the staircase that leads from the cloak room is the Members' Lobby, at the entrance to which sit on separate benches the different Whips. Thus they are able to keep count of how many supporters are present, and in the case of the Government Whips to know if Ministerial supporters are in attendance in sufficient numbers to command a majority.

There are some members who do not favor this custom, and it is their practice to slip in and out of the House by other entrances and exits, so as to be unobserved. They will hang their coats probably in the smoking room, defying the fine tradition which makes the cloak room the rightful repository. These truculent members, who are a great source of anxiety and annoyance to the Whips, are known as "slopers," and, needless to say, are abominated by the cloak room superintendent. Every member has his own peg in the cloak room, these being allotted in alphabetical order. A piece of red tape—a rather appropriate symbol—hangs from each peg, and in the loop which it forms members can deposit their parcels, usually small purchases which they have made during the day.

Silver Now Instead of Gold.

Before Mr. Henley's time members were very free with their guineas. Individually, too, they were richer, and they thought nothing of bestowing a piece of gold on the obliging cloak room superintendent—now silver is the currency of gratitude. Still it is possible to amass quite a nice sum every year from the silvern shower, more especially as Christmas time always finds members very generous to the official with whom they are so constantly in contact. He is looked upon, too, as a useful man to cultivate. He is generally safe to consult in the matter of divisions, and what is coming on in Parliament he has at his finger ends. With a shrewd judgment ripened by long years of experience in the "House" he can put members right as to the pros and cons of any debatable topic, and to the novices he is a perfect gold-mine of information. The tips that come to him, however, are not rewards for personal judgments, but for a multitude of services. He receives parcels and telegrams for members, and alternatively despatches them; he becomes, too, the medium of exchange for a multitude of messages.

Generally speaking, he is the members' handyman. The hours, of course, are very long, but he is provided with a little room in which he may sleep, two assistants holding the fort. He has an old fashioned leathern armchair in which to rest, and in the present chair Mr. Henley has sat so long that it bears the impress of his form. Nobody can size up members better than the cloak room superintendent. He knows exactly their capacities, and if he is sometimes lenient to their failings because of their generosity, yet his opinions pretty well represent the truth.

Friendship With Gladstone.

A rich store of anecdotage makes his conversation a delight to hear, though he is inclined to be very discreet and reserved except with some of his oldest friends. Mr. Henley, for instance, has the most interesting recollections of Gladstone and Disraeli, and apparently the G. O. M. extended to him great geniality. Some day Mr. Henley may be induced to write his memories, and one dares venture to say that if he were sufficiently open no more piquant book of recollections could be imagined. On the magic question of the perquisites that fall to his department we can guarantee, however, that he would be silent. It would be unfair otherwise to his successor.

Nursery on Sands.

At Southport the Mayoress, Miss Willett, has put into practice an excellent idea for the shore. She has instituted what is described as a "Left Luggage Office for Babies." This is a kind of nursery on the sands, in which children can be left with responsible people in order that their mothers may enjoy a few hours' respite from their care.

Cat Fosters Rat.

A cat mothering a rat was an unusual sight witnessed at Dunedin, New Zealand, recently, when the steamer Monowain arrived at the place. A young rat was discovered in a litter of kittens on board the steamer. The cat devoted considerably more attention to the rodent than it did to her own offspring.

There may be microbes in kisses, but no girl has ever seen one.

THE OPIUM EVIL.

The Chinese Government is Battling Hard for Its Eradication.

Last February a man named Hai, residing in Lanchowfu, the capital of Kansu Province, China, was arrested with two coffins in his possession containing the bodies of near relatives around which were packed 4,000 ounces of opium, which he was taking with the corpses into Shansi, an adjacent city. It is the custom of the Chinese to take their dead in huge wooden coffins back to the place of their birth.

The prisoner was tried and sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment. The case was then referred to the central government in Pekin and the man was sentenced to death. The execution has just taken place, the prisoner being shot instead of decapitated, as was the practice in the old days.

In connection with the suppression of the use of opium, rumors are continually afloat concerning the drastic measures which the government is able to enforce in spite of the disorganization it is experiencing as a result of the revolution. Reports tell frequently of fighting between farmers who have formed bands and armed themselves with the object of successfully harvesting a crop of opium. Sometimes the reports tell of Christians being made special objects of attack and even murdered because they oppose the growing of the poppy. The rule of keeping hands off the missionary and his property, however, is still generally observed, as it was throughout the revolution.

Other reports tell of proclamations threatening death for a third offense in selling or smoking opium. Still others tell of great stocks of the drug being burned amid worth of celebrations. Stome $25,000 worth of confiscated opium went up in smoke in Tientsin a few weeks ago, while bands played and people drank tea and listened to speeches telling of the harm opium had done the Chinese. It is believed by foreigners and Chinese alike that such drastic measures would not be possible at this period of reconstruction if the feeling of the nation were not in favor of the reform.

The restriction of the importation and growth has caused the value of opium in China to be enormously enhanced. Those who persist in using it must now do so not only in secret but at prices which only the rich can afford. It is now said to be beyond the reach of the poor man, selling as it does for many times what it cost before the suppression began. In consequence there are great inducements to carry on the trade illicitly and much smuggling and growing in remote hill countries is attempted.

The cleverness of the Chinese police in discovering smuggled shipments is shown by the instance given above of the big burning at Tientsin. But in the country they are not always so clever and many reports of fields of growing poppy come to the government notice directly or indirectly through foreign missionaries and their converts.

One of the mysteries still unsolved is that of the sense by which the lower animals become aware of the approach of earthquakes. For three or four days before the recent severe earthquakes at Guadalajara, Mexico, the many parrots of the city showed great and unusual restlessness, and during the period of disturbance the increased cries of the birds gave warning of the nearness of the worst shocks. Rats also became alarmed, fleeing from the city before the earthquakes came. Supersensitiveness to faint shocks hardly gives satisfactory explanation, for modern seismographs are very sensitive, and it is quite unlikely that tremors too slight to be recorded would be felt so strongly as to give alarm.

The housewife should remember that her family needs green food the year round.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Cincinnati, Sept. 26.—Owing to frequent complaints received by the National Baseball Commission and the Baseball Writers' Association concerning articles alleged to have been written by ball players, the National Commission yesterday handed down a ruling in which it orders that no players eligible to compete in the world's series or any city series, shall write or pretend to write an account of such series for any newspaper, nor shall any player allow the use of his name over an article purporting to be written by him. Violation of this order will result in the infliction of such penalty as the commission may determine.

The Baseball Writers' Association of America had recently solicited the co-operation of the commission in preventing ball players from invading the field.

"Females."

Our woman words have all experienced vicissitudes of fortune. "Female," like the rest, has had its day. Chaucer introduced it under the guise of "femelle" and Shakespeare used it a few times instead of "woman." But it was the early novelists who clothed it with respectability by making all their women "females." So exceedingly respectable had it become in the time of Dr. Johnson that Fanny Burney called the princess royal "the second female in the kingdom." Even so late as the publication of Tennyson's "Princess" Mrs. Browning was able to write with perfect propriety that the poem dealt with "a university attended by females." Then decadence set in till now no shred of respectability is left to it.—London Standard.

SENT HIMSELF BY MAIL.

One Use to Which the Parcel Post In England May Be Put.

An Englishman wished to reach a customer living in a remote part of Balham, one of the suburbs of London, and it was very urgent that he find him quickly.

Knowing nothing of the locality, he called at St. Martin le Grand to consult a directory. Stating his case to a clerk, he was amazed to learn that he could be sent to the address by parcel post by paying a fee of threepence a mile. The gentleman had never heard of such a thing, and it is said that very few in England know that it can be done.

Accepting the offer, the gentleman was placed in charge of a messenger familiar with all parts of the city and was soon on his way. The boy carried a printed slip on which was written a description of the "parcel" in charge, under the heading, "Article required to be delivered," and before leaving the customer's house both the customer and the gentleman were required to place their signatures on the paper.

The limit in weight for anything delivered by parcel post in England is generally understood to be eleven pounds, but there is one clause which reads, "A person may be conducted by express messenger to any address on payment of mileage fee."—Argonaut.

BOUCICAULT'S PROFITS.

The Playwright's Fame Clung to Him Better Than His Riches.

Dion Boucicault received £300 for his share in the authorship of "London Assurance." The way in which he spent that sum was an indication of things to come. He bought two horses, a cab and seven new coats. His extravagance reached a climax over "Babil and Bijou," produced at Covent Garden in August, 1872. The money was found by Lord Londesborough, and Boucicault (with him Planche) was under contract to produce something that might be called dramatic.

What was produced was a gorgeous and incoherent spectacle, with red lobsters recumbent at the bottom of the sea. Boucicault, who had run up bills to the extent of £10,000 or so, did not stay for the production, but betook himself abroad. All that persists of this magnificent fiasco is the boys' chorus, "Spring, Spring, Beautiful Spring," which was retained almost by chance.

But Boucicault was better known by his Irish dramas that are fresh today, as "The Shaughraun," "Arrah na Pogue," "The Colleen Bawn" and the like. By these he became rich and famous, but his fame clung to him better than his riches.—London Post.

Eating Crow.

Although the use of the expression "to eat crow" in a metaphorical sense, meaning to eat one's words, may well have dated from the time of Noah, when the bird was first looked upon as unclean and not fit to serve as food for man, it seems to have arisen from the old tale of the officer and the private. A soldier, having shot a tame crow belonging to one of his officers, was discovered by the owner with the bird in his hand. Seizing the private's gun, the officer commanded him to eat the bird as a punishment. With the firearm pointed at his head, the soldier fell to, but no sooner had the officer laid aside the gun than the culprit gra[illegible]t and compelled his superior to join in the distasteful banquet. The private was court martialed the next day, and when he was asked by the examiners what had occurred he replied, "Nothing, except that Captain Bank and I dined together."

A NATURAL RIDDLE

Attraction of Gravitation Is a Mystery to Science.

IT CONTROLS THE UNIVERSE.

Yet That Wonderful Force That Directs and Regulates Moons, Planets, Suns and Stars Without Visible Means of Connection Is Inexplicable.

The mystery of mysteries in science is the attraction of gravitation—that very force of nature that is the most familiar to us all. It seems strange that the most familiar thing in the world should be at the same time the most inexplicable, but so it is.

In order to see clearly wherein the mystery consists, let us first consider what gravitation appears to be. It is gravitation that gives the property of weight to all bodies. If there were no gravitation we could float like thistledowns and infinitely better than thistledowns, for they, too, are finally brought down by gravitation.

It is gravitation that brings a cannon ball eventually to the earth, no matter how swiftly it may be projected. The faster it starts the farther it will go, but during every second of its flight it drops the same distance vertically toward the earth, whether the speed imparted to it by the powder is 500 or 3,000 feet per second. Gravitation acts on a moving body exactly as well as on one at rest.

It is gravitation that curbs the motion of the moon and keeps it in an orbit of which the earth is the active focus.

So, too, it is gravitation that governs the earth in its motion around the sun, preventing it from flying away into boundless space. Astronomy shows that gravitation acts between all the plants and all the stars and controls their motions with respect to one another.

Now, this mysterious force appears to be an attraction, as if there were elastic cords connecting all the bodies in space and tending to draw them together. But space, as far as our senses can detect, is empty. There are no elastic cords and no physical connections whatever between astronomical bodies or between a flying stone or cannon ball and the earth. How, then, can there be an attraction? In order that a body may be attracted or drawn there must be something to draw it. Gravitation does the trick, but completely hides from us the mechanism through which it acts. We can discover no mechanism at all.

When an unfortunate aeroplanist drops from his machine at a height of a thousand feet he begins at once to fall toward the earth as if it were pulling him. But how can it pull if it has nothing to pull with? You may think at first sight that it is the air which acts as an intermediary, but that is not so, because the earth and the moon "pull" upon one another with a force equal to the strength of a steel cable 500 miles in diameter. But there is no air and no other tangible thing in the open space, 240,000 miles across, that gaps between the moon and the earth.

Then, gravitation exerts the same force at every instant. No matter how fast the falling aeronaut may be descending at any moment, gravitation will keep on adding speed as if he had just started. Disregarding the slight retardation produced by the resistance of the air, he will fall sixteen feet in the first second, forty-eight feet in the second second, eighty feet in the third second, gaining thirty-two feet in his velocity during every second after the first.

From a height of 1,000 feet he will come down in about eight seconds, and will strike the ground with a velocity of about 256 feet per second. From a height of 10,000 feet he would fall in about twenty-five seconds and would strike with a velocity of 400 feet per second.

The same kind of calculation can be applied to the gravitation between the earth and the moon. If the moon were not in motion across the direction of the earth's "pull" it would fall to the earth in about 116 hours.

Now, to return to the mystery, how is this force exerted? Is it really a pull, as it seems to be? The answer to which science is tending is that instead of being a pull, gravitation is a push; in other words, that the falling aeronaut is pushed toward the ground and the moon is pushed toward the earth.

On the face of it one might think that nothing was gained by this theory, because it seems as impossible that a push should be exerted without a tangible connection as a pull. But the clew is found in the supposed properties of that invisible, intangible, all pervading medium called the ether.

This, to be sure, is explaining one mystery by another, for we know nothing about the ether except that it conveys the waves of light and electricity; but, at any rate, it affords a conceivable explanation of gravitation. Dr. Charles F. Brush's theory regards the ether is being filled with a peculiar form of waves and that material bodies may intercept these waves in such a way as to be pushed toward one another on account of the diminished effect of the ether waves in the space between the bodies.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

If you know how to spend less than you get you have the philosopher's stone.—Benjamin Franklin.

No Landlubber.

Young Jack Tabbs has only been in the navy for a few months, but there is not a more enthusiastic sea dog in the whole of his majesty's service. He recently made application for and received the usual leave and proceeded to London and his mother's house.

Mrs. Tabbs lives on the third floor of a house in Camberwell, and when he arrived at her address he stood in the doorway and bawled up the stairs:

"Mother, aloft there! Jack's come home! Open the window!"

"Why, Jacky, my dear," cried the old lady from the landing, "whatever's wrong with the stairs?"

"Stairs!" cried the weather worn tar, with ineffable contempt. "What do I know about stairs? Just you open the window and lower a rope to the main deck, and be quick about it!"—London Express.

MAN PROUD OF HIS FACE.

Man worships the cut of his mug.
In the cave people's day the first worker in clay
Etched a monkey faced man on his jug.
On clay and on stones and on elephant [illegible]nes
The portraits they drew, and they baked them on pones.

Puts his totem pole up in the breeze.
It's his horrible phiz done in wood, so it is,
A frieze that would cause you to freeze.
Those faces up there they would frighten a bear,
And the pole that must tote 'em's a totem for fair.

The Assyrian "kinks," those proud purple old ginks,
Flat nosed and as ugly as gall,
Their portraits they'd mix in the clay of the bricks,
And they'd bake 'em and make 'em a wall.
It's a poor trait o' character, wouldn't you say,
To want your old portrait forced on us that way?

Old Queen Cleopatra she still gazes at you
Sketched out on an obelisk pile.
The folks who were ace high, they all nailed a face high
On stone in the land of the Nile.
Today we have faces in color and tone
Produced on our billboards with lithograph stone.

King George puts his face on the stamps;
The czar he puts his on the coin, so his phiz
Will be dear to dukes, peasants and tramps.
Ever go to a show with the freaks in a row?

Yes, we all love our phiz, freaky, fierce as it is;
We are proud of our features and shapes.
And we swell up and "bust," we poor creatures of dust,
When our photograph gets "in the papes,"
For the power of the press is a thunderbolt hurled
That can carry our mugs through the width of the world.

DR. HERBERT SYMONDS AT ST. LUKE'S CHURCH

A Neat Sanctuary—The Cycle of the Year—The Trinity of God and Man—A Plain Harvest Sermon.

By Our Special Reporter.

Rev. Dr. Symonds was the special preacher at St. Luke's church last evening when the harvest festival service was held.

Dr. Symonds is well known thorughout the Dominion and is loved and respected, not only by members of his own church, but by other denominations. It will be remembered that a short time ago he caused some stir in ecclesiastical circles by his outspoken advocacy of the union of the churches.

Dr Symonds is announced to speak upon this subject in the school room of St. Luke's this evening, when it is expected that many from the various denominations in the city will be present to hear him give his views on church unity.

A SANCTUARY.

The service last evening was a very beautiful one. The neat little church was decorated with the fruits of the harvest and there was a full congregation, and a congregation that joined heartily in the service and singing.

St Luke's is one of those churches to which one would soon get attached, it is so comfortable and compact, there are no pillars to obscure the vision, there is nothing ornate about the chancel, yet everything about the church tends to compose one's soul and lift the thoughts to higher things.

The choir is surpliced and is composed chiefly of ladies, and the singing was very good. Rev. F. J. Sawers, the vicar, conducted the service and introduced Rev. Dr. Symonds as a man of high position and catholicity of spirit.

CYCLE OF THE YEAR.

Dr. Symonds is a well-set man of vigorous intellect and forceful style. He preached from a passage in Psalm 147—from the 5th verse to the end. He said that the cycle of the year was again completed. The miracle of Nature which was repeated year by year, the sowing, the springing up, the growth, then the gathering, had once more been wrought before our eyes. And in these festivals we come together to recognize the cause of it all.

But, the preacher said, he wanted to turn their thoughts from the material aspect of this festival. It is quite natural for us to speculate upon the material value of the harvest and reckon it all up in bushels and dollars. But we must get away from the material, to what is behind it all. What is the inner meaning of all these symbols? For all the things in nature are symbols of something spiritual.

POWER, WISDOM, LOVE.

The first thing that one observes is power. Yet no one has ever seen power. We only know it is there by its effects: When we look upon the great waves of the sea, when we look up at the stars, when we think of how the sap is forced up into the branches of the tree, we know that there is a great power at work in the universe. Nothing is at rest. Where there is motion there is power.

The second thing we notice in nature is Wisdom. Wisdom in the adaptation of all the various parts of the life of the world. Everything works in order and is controlled and guided by wise laws

SYMBOLISM.

Ther there is Love. All embracing love in the providence of God. All these things are symbolised in nature and as the thing symbolised is always greater than the symbol, so God is greater than all His works.

His power is almighty. His wisdom is infinite. His love is all embracing and boundless. In these three attributes we see the Trinity The Father, Son and Holy Spirit. Three in One.

TRINITY IN MAN.

In these things we are made in the likeness of God Himself. There is a trinity in man. Let us use our power, said the preacher, for worthy ends. Let us apply our wisdom and intellect not merely to outwit our weaker brethren, but let us use this great gift for the highest and noblest. That love which we possess can be used for selfish purposes. Let us live for others. Sin is the perversion or misuse of power, wisdom and love.

A PLAIN PREACHER.

Dr. Symonds is a plain and straightforward preacher. He has no distinctive style, nor does he use flowery language. He neither ascends to the heights or decends to the depths. He is more impressive when he lowers his voice and leans over the pulpit and speaks quietly to his congregation. There is no intonation not anything affected about him, and one can well understand his impatience with denominational and man-made distinctions.

BODY NOT THAT OF WINDOVER

Relatives Claim a Mistake Has Been Made

It is now stated that the man killed in the auto accident near Lakefield yesterday morning was not Ephriam Windover.

Relatives of Ephriam Windover viewed the body at Lakefield last night and said that a mistake had been made.

The constable at Lakefield, who identified the body at the opening of the inquest yesterday afternoon, now says that he was mistaken.

It is said that the name of the dead man is McDonald.

Corner Dr. Greer, of Peterborough, opened an inquest at Lakefield yesterday afternoon into the death of E. B. Windover, who was killed in an auto accident about three miles north of the village on the Buckhorn road. The following jury were empanelled with Wm. Graham: foreman; S. Hunter, J. H. Sherwin, W. Charlton, Jas. Edwards, J. Hendren, R. Graham, Percy Spence, Ed. Cassan, Chas. Tanner. After the jury were sworn by Constable Webster, the body was viewed and identified as that of E. B. Windover by Mr. A. E. Graham, of Lakefield.

The inquest adjourned to Thursday, October 2 at 2 o'clock in the town council chamber.

Trying to round a sharp bend, known as Goose Neck, while travelling at a high rate of speed, was probably the cause of the accident yesterday morning, in which E. B. Windover was instantly killed and Roland Darcy was badly shaken up.

It appears that the men left here the night before and had stayed over in Lakefield for the night, leaving the village shortly before eight o'clock in the morning for Buckhorn. They had only gone about three miles when the accident occurred. According to Mr. Darcy's explanation of the affair to the men who were first on the scene, Windover was driving at the time of the accident, and they had stopped to light a cigarette. Soon after starting again the accident happened. A farmer named Snelgrove, who was the first on the scene, was working in a field at the time. He didn't see the car moving, but when he heard the crash he looked up and saw the overturned auto partly in the ditch. In company with another man they pried the car up and pulled out the body of the man who was killed, and who was later identified as Windover. Darcy was rescued, and he seemed to be badly injured. Windover was under the car with the back of the front seat on his chest. Death must have been instantaneous owing to the heavy pressure.

The fact of Windover being a heavily built man partly saved Darcy from being seriously injured, if not killed. Drs. Blakeman and Fraser were summoned, and the body of Windover removed to Hendren's undertaking parlors in Lakefield. Darcy was removed to his home in the village, where he is resting as comfortable as possible. Considerable difficulty was experienced in identifying the body, as when last seen Windover was wearing a heavy beard and was using the name of McDonald. He had been living apart from his wife for the past year or more. When last heard of he was in North Bay, but he had come down to the city a few days ago and was on his way up to Buckhorn to see his wife. There are eight children, all of whom have been in charge of the Shelter for the past year, except a boy, who is working in the north country.

A half-emptied bottle of liquor and a few cigars were the only articles found in the pockets of Windover's clothes.

WIFE WANTS ONE MILLION DOLLARS

For Alienation of Her Husbands Affections

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—A sensation in New York society is caused by the action of Mrs. Catherine Ketenam Blake, who is bringing suit for $1,000,000 against Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay for alienation of the affections of the plaintiff's husband, Dr. Joseph A. Blake. Dr. Blake is famous throughout the United States as a surgeon and was chief surgeon of the Presbyterian hospital up to a few months ago. Dr. and Mrs. Blake have been separated for nearly a year. Mr. Mackay suddenly left his summer home in New Jersey this summer, and taking his children sailed for Europe. A few days later Mrs. Mackay left the country home of the Mackays at Roslyn, L.I., and went to live in Portland, Me. Neither have returned to the city since.

George Gordon Battle, attorney for Mrs. Blake, admitted last night that the papers in the case were made out, but added that they have not been served. Henry W. Taft, attorney for Mrs. Mackay, is absent in Europe. Mrs. Mackay was Miss Katharine Alexander Duer, and her marriage to the telegraph magnate took place in 1898. Dr. and Mrs. Blake were married in 1900, and have two children.

Mrs. Mackay is a woman of brilliant intellect. She has been a member of the board of education of Rosslyn and takes a leading part in the woman suffrage movement.

WITNESS SAYS SULZER ASKED HIM TO VIOLATE OATH

New York State Official, Who Gave Money to Governor's Campaign Fund, Says Accused Chief Executive Urged Him to Deny Contribution—Richard Croker, Jr.'s, Check Cashed by an Agent.

ALBANY, Sept. 27—Governor William Sulzer tried to persuade contributors to his campaign fund not to testify against him, according to evidence adduced at his impeachment trial yesterday.

He asked Duncan W. Peck, state superintendent of public works, who gave $500 to the fund to violate his oath on the witness stand in the event that he should be called to testify before the Frawley investigating committee, Peck swore. The governor, Peck asserted, had told him that he too would deny receiving contributions. This conversation, he said, occurred in the governor's office at the Capitol. The witness was examined by John B. Stanchfield as to the precise words used by the governor.

"What did he say?"

"He said: 'Do as I shall do; deny it.'"

"I said, 'I suppose I shall be under oath.' He said, 'That is nothing. Forget it'."

Attorney Hinman, cross-examining for the defence, asked Peck if it were possible that he could be mistaken about a single word that passed between him and the governor.

"Not a word," Peck replied emphatically. Peck at the time of his contribution held his present position, but, he testified, he told the governor there were no "strings" on the gift and that he did not feel that he was obliged to reappoint him.

Peck was reappointed.

The governor asked Henry W. Morgenthau, ambassador to Turkey, who contributed $1,000 to be "easy on him," and to "treat the affair between us as personal" in the event that he should be called to testify. This Mr. Morgenthau swore to when recalled to the witness stand yesterday. He said that the request was made by the governor over the long-distance telephone on Sept. 2 last.

The governor's attorneys gave indication of being completely confounded by the testimony of these two witnesses. None of them had the faintest inkling, it was said, that such accusations were to be brought by the attorneys for the assembly managers.

It was further brought out that Richard Croker, jr., son of the former leader of Tamamny Hall, had contributed a $2,000 check, payable at the request of Sulzer, to the order of "cash," and that the check was cashed by Frederick L. Colwell, alleged to have been the governor's agent in his Wall street transactions. This was the first testimony adduced either at the present trial or before the Frawley investigating committee directly connecting Colwell with the governor in that capacity. Croker testified that the governor wanted the check in a convenient form to cash it immediately, because he was in a hurry to start on his campaign trip through the state of New York. This was on Oct. 16, and it was developed that Colwell did not cash the check until Oct. 31.

CONTROL OF AVIATION.

International Conference Draws Up Suggested Laws.

FRANKFORT-ON-MAIN, Germany, Sept. 27.—The conference under the auspices of the international law committee of aviation yesterday adopted the following principles on which they will endeavor to secure international legislation for the uniform control of aviation:

Rights of private property do not entitle land holders to prohibit aviators flying over their lands if such flying is done without occasioning inconveniences, but any abuse of this privilege by a flyer will make him legally responsible.

The owner of an air craft shall be responsible for damages to persons or property, except to persons on board an aircraft, but the owner of the air craft may recover against a person who causes damage and also may plead that damages were due to forces beyond human control.

After passing these proposed measures the conference adjourned.

Ex-King Manuel's Wife Better.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The Daily Mail's Berlin correspondent says he has high authority for stating that ex-King Manuel's wife was discharged on Thursday as cured from the hospital, where she has been under treatment, and is now staying in Munich with her cousin, Princess Frederick of Hohenzollern. Unofficial reports ascribe her illness to a more serious cause than that officially given. The case was in charge of Prof. Von Romerg of Tubingen University, an authority on internal diseases. Telegrams from Siguaringen state that news of the young bride's illness and secrecy about it has caused consternation in her former home.

King of Greece Hurries Home.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—King Constantine of Greece made preparations yesterday for a hurried return to Athens where the Balkan situation is regarded by the Hellenic Government as very disquieting. The king has decided to cut short his visit to the seaside resort of Eastbourne, on the south coast of England, whence he will come to London to-day for a special conference with Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary.

AUTOMOBILE HELD UP

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—Early yesterday morning, four masked men held up an automobile, containing four men and two women, on Queen Mary road, Cote des Neiges, near Montreal, and robbed the occupants of $250 in cash and jewelery. The bandits were armed with revolvers and kept those in the car covered while relieving them of their money and jewelery.

When the bandits had accomplished their work they ordered the occupants out of the machine, climbed in themselves and drove toward Montreal. Before reaching Outremont they abandoned the car in the middle of the road and disappeared.

Chief Baker of the Outremont police department was notified and set out with his men to cover the roads leading from Cote des Neiges. The bandits, however, had a good start and no trace of them was found.

Canadian Produce In Bond.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 27.—Canadian butter and farm produce are being shipped to commission men here and held in bonded warehouses until the passage of the tariff bill, which is expected to lower the duty approximately $1,000 a carload. Several large shipments of produce also are being held on the Canadian side of the border.

MAY BE SETTLEMENT IN THE IRISH QUESTION

Garros Would Cross Atlantic.

PARIS, Sept. 27.—Roland G. Garros, who on Tuesday made an aeroplane flight across the Mediterranean, is quoted as to the possibility of a flight across the Atlantic Ocean. He believes this to be possible. His plan would be to divide the journey into three stages: First, from England to Ireland; second, from Ireland to Newfoundland; third, from Newfoundland to the United States. Two of these stages would actually be shorter than his France to Tunis flight and the third very little longer.

Death Duties Are $1,050,000.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The British Treasury yesterday received an unexpected windfall from the estate of the late Anthony Nicholas Brady of Albany, N.Y., who died in London in July and whose property in the United Kingdom has been valued to probate at $6,577,640. Death duties amounting to $1,050,000 will be paid over to David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

TO COMPETE WITH CANAL ?

English Capital May Be Lent to the Republic of Colombia.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The Standard, in a long editorial to-day, hints that English capital, represented by Pearson & Son, will give Colombia a chance to avenge herself against Panama by constructing an ocean-to-ocean canal by way of the Atrato and Cupica Rivers.

"What," says The Standard, "is to prevent Colombia, if it has sufficient support from foreign capitalists, from making this canal itself and thereby setting up a formidable rival to the enterprise which is now rapidly approaching completion?"

The assertion of the Monroe doctrine to prevent the building of the canal would be, according to the editorial, equivalent to the assertion of sovereign rights over every American republic, which so far is not a pretension American statesmen have put forward.

Sailor Held Up.

KINGSTON, Sept. 27.—The second hold-up to occur on Swift's Wharf in a few weeks took place Thursday night. When about to go on board his vessel, William Offord, a sailor, was attacked by three men. Two held his arms, while the other went through his pockets, relieving him of $15 and a watch.

Hon. James Bryce Will Witness the Review of the Ulster Volunteers To-day—Unionists In Ireland Are Drilling With Dummy Rifles Because Government Would Seize Real Ones.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The prospects of a conference between members of the Liberal and Unionist parties on the Irish question have improved considerably during the last three days, according to The Nation, which says it is now almost certain that the conference ultimately will be held.

A significant point in this direction was the visit paid to Belfast yesterday of James Bryce, former Ambassador to the United States, and at one time Chief Secretary for Ireland. Mr. Bryce left Belfast last night for Dublin, but said he probably would return to Belfast to witness to-day's review of the Ulster volunteers.

It is generally believed that the Ulster question is being discussed at Brodick Bay, Scotland, by Premier Asquith and David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who cut short his continental holiday to meet the Premier.

Henry W. Massingham, editor of The Nation, in an article in his paper declares he sees nothing but childishness in such a rebellion as has been depicted in Sir Edward Carson's speeches.

"There is no concealment," says Mr. Massingham. "Even if the Government were not fully informed, which they are, they could get all the knowledge they require merely by asking. For example, a friend of mine, a journalist and a stranger in Belfast, witnessed one of the drills. The volunteers used dummy rifles.

"'What's the use drilling with dummies?' my friend enquired of a patriot.

"'We cannot use rifles,' the man replied. 'The Government would seize them.'

"'But you have a store of them somewhere?'

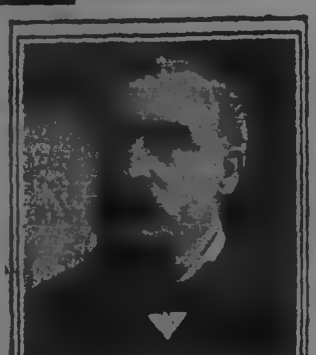
"'Certainly; we keep them in that building there, with all the ammunition we want,' was the reply."

The preparations for to-day's great review of the volunteers in Belfast are complete. All the brigade, staff and regimental officers for the four regiments have been named, and Sir Edward Carson is said to be sufficiently recovered from his indisposition to receive the homage of his followers from the reviewing stand.

Sunday, being the anniversary of Ulster Day, special services will be held in most of the churches in the Protestant districts. The official commemoration service will be attended by the officers of the provisional government. It will be held in Ulster Hall.

The latest volunteer to the Ulster [illegible] is an aviator.

ATTORNEYS AND JUDGE IN GOVERNOR SULZER'S IMPEACHMENT TRIAL.



EDGAR M. CULLEN
CHIEF JUDGE, COURT OF APPEALS

Edgar M. Cullen, Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals, is hearing the impeachment trial of Governor William Sulzer, of New York State. Judge Cullen is admittedly a fearless jurist. Nothing has ever swayed him in his sworn duty but his belief in the right. Independent of political leaders, defiant, as always, of the conventionalities, excepting those which he believes are founded on the fundamental law of the land, the opinion of this veteran jurist will have a powerful influence on the court.

D. CADY HERRICK

SENATOR HARVEY D. HINMAN

Two of Governor Sulzer's attorneys are D. Cady Herrick and Harvey D. Hinman. They, with their associates, are making a wonderful fight for Mr. Sulzer.

FACED DANGERS AS RULER OF PERU; TO BE EXILED BY COUNTRYMEN

PRESIDENT LEGUIA (+) IN HANDS OF THE MOB

MR. AUGUSTO B. LEGUIA

VIEW OF THE VERANDA AT THE RESIDENCE OF MR. LEGUIA AFTER THE MOB HAD FINISHED ITS WORK THERE ON EVENING OF JULY 24
COURTESY OF THE WEST COAST LEADER

Mr. Augusta B. Leguia, onetime President of Peru, is now in the United States. Mr. Leguia was President for four years and during that time escaped assassination by the narrowest margin on several occasions. Now he is an exile in America, for Peru's politics changed.

At the expiration of his last term he was entertaining a number of friends when his house was attacked by a mob with rifles. He and his friends defended themselves, and for defending his own home he was arrested, the charge being "firing on State troops." He was put in prison and in a short time was given a choice between leaving the country or staying in jail. He chose the former.

FIVE PERSONS KILLED BY C.P.R. QUEBEC EXPRESS

All the Occupants of Vehicle But One Are Killed When Train Collides With It on Level Crossing—Fifth Victim Dying When Picked Up—Exact Nature of the Accident Is Mystery.

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—Five people were instantly killed by the C.P.R. Quebec express, ten miles from this city last night, when the carriage in which they were riding was struck by the pilot of the engine.

The dead are: Hormidas Alaire, 4? years; Mrs. Hormidas Allaire, 4? years; Wilfrid Lortie, bachelor, 42 years; Albina Lortie, his sister, unmarried, 43 years; Victoria Lortie, another sister, 66 years.

The party were driving to their home at St. Elzear over a private road known as Monte Du Moulin, which runs from Park Laval to St. Martin. The road is not much more than a rough track, and at the crossing where the accident took place there is no light or habitation. The train was en route to Montreal.

The engine driver, realizing that there had been an accident, pulled up, and the train crew picked up the bodies of the party, which had been thrown in all directions, one of them being found on top of the engine. The carriage was smashed into splinters.

Four of the victims were dead when picked up, the only one showing any sign of life being Albina Lortie. All were placed on the train and brought into Montreal.

At the Mile-End Station an ambulance from the Royal Victoria Hospital was waiting. Miss Lortie was placed in the vehicle, but died before reaching the hospital.

Just how the accident happened no one seems to know, as the point where the carriage was struck is far removed from any farm house. The party carried no light, and the engine driver claims that the first intimation he had was when he felt the impact of the engine and carriage.

The bodies were placed in the Montreal morgue, and an inquest will follow.

HEIFER RAN AMUCK.

Runaway Animal Tosses Two Children In Brockville.

BROCKVILLE, Sept. 27.—A heifer that was being transferred from the eastern hospital farm to the slaughter-house escaped from the keepers, and for three hours ran amuck through the streets of Brockville, creating considerable excitement.

The heifer went completely wild charging two children named Audrey Ryder and Isabella McLaren, who were playing in the yard at the rear of their homes. The former was tossed from a hammock, while the latter was caught upon the horns of the infuriated beast and carried into the street. The child's dress dropped over the heifer's eyes, forming a blind, and encountering an obstruction it fell after running a few hundred feet. Mrs. James Newell, who had witnessed the incident from her verandah, rushed out and rescued the little girl from her perilous position before the animal, which was well nigh exhausted, had time to regain its feet.

Both children escaped with slight injuries. Later the animal was rounded up by asylum attendants.

Won't Boycott Queenstown.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—There will be no "boycott" of Queenstown by the White Star Line, it was stated here yesterday by W. M. Jeffries, passenger manager of the company. The failure of the Olympic to call at the harbor Thursday, Mr. Jeffries said, was due to weather conditions off the Irish coast. The Olympic is under contract to carry the British mails, he said, and will in future as heretofore make Queenstown a port of call.

Big Power Company Incorporated.

OTTAWA, Sept. 27.—The announcement is made in The Canada Gazette this week of the incorporation of the Upper St. Lawrence Power Co. of Toronto, capital stock $3,000,000. The incorporators are nominally given as clerks in a Toronto legal firm, who frequently appear in connection with the launching of new Mackenzie and Mann enterprises.

Let Aeroplane Fly Alone.

PARIS, Sept. 27.—For twenty minutes in a wind exceeding eleven miles an hour an aeroplane, piloted by Moreau, and carrying Naval Lieut. Lafon as a passenger, safely sailed in the air at Melun, the aviator during the time not having touched one lever or handle in the machine. The aeroplane thus won a prize for automatic stability in a contest which had long been open under the management of the National Aerial League.

The machine got into winds blowing over forty miles an hour and rolled so much that the officer often shouted to the aviator to give up the contest and seize his levers, but Moreau steadily refused to touch anything. The aeroplane righted itself every time and he won the prize.

Heavy soups should be kept for the main dish at luncheon.

TARIFF FIGHT ENDS.

Committee Agrees on All But Cotton Future Tax.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The tariff bill is to-day a completed document, except for the provision taxing trades in cotton futures. After more than two weeks of constant work behind closed roors, the eight Democrats representing Senate and House, as members of the conference committee, late yesterday settled the last of their other difference, and reached the final decision that they could not agree on the cotton future tax.

The formality of submitting the conference report to the Republicans is not expected to take much time, and it is believed the report will be presented to the House on Monday afternoon by Representative Underwood. In the final session yesterday a further futile attempt was made to settle the fight over the cotton future tax. The Senate conferees changed front and agreed to give up the Clarke amendment altogether, but the House members refused to permit this. The Senate in turn refused to accept the proposed Smith-Lever compromise, and in the end it was determined to report a disagreement to both branches of Congress and let the Senate and House determine what should be done toward regulating or taxing the trading in cotton for future delivery.

The final differences in the bill were adjusted as follows:

The House receded from its rate of 1-2c. per cent. ad valorem on zinc ore, and accepted the House rate of 10 per cent.

The House gave up its demand that the woollen tariff rates go into effect at once, and agreed to the dates fixed by the Senate, namely, woollen goods, Jan. 1, 1914; raw wool, tops and waste, Dec. 1, 1913.

The House receded from its provisions as to cotton threads, yarns and cloths, accepting the Senate amendments, which revised the schedules upon a new basis of thread count.

Engineer Dies of Grief.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 27.—Charles J. Doherty, engineer of the second section of the Springfield Express, on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, which ran into the first section at Stamford last June, causing six deaths, died suddenly of heart failure at his home here, early yesterday. He had grieved constantly over the wreck, his relatives say, and this is believed to have contributed to his death. He was about 31 years old, and leaves a wife and two small children.

Among a number of happenings of twenty years ago the Norwood Register has the following:

Three thousand eight hundred and eighty-one boxes of cheese valued at $27,161, were boarded at Peterborough on 20th Sept. The highest price received was 10 1-8c [illegible]

PLANNED TO ASSASSINATE

Arrested Dynamiters In Lisbon Confess To Plot.

LISBON, Portugal, Sept. 27.—A confession that they intended to assassinate the Portuguese Premier and instigate a revolt was made yesterday by five men arrested Thursday night while placing bombs around the Premier's villa at Praia das Macas, a watering place near Cintra.

According to The Mundo the men were delegated by a syndicalist group to explode the bombs in Dr. Alfonso Costa's garden. His attention was attracted in this way and they intended to shoot him down when he appeared at the window to find out what had happened.

Dr. Costa's death, they declared, was to be the signal for a revolt. Armed bands, they said, were ready to rush the prisons amid the confusion and to liberate the prisoners.

The syndicalists, they asserted, had plotted also to kill the Minister of War.

The Mundo avers that the Royalists, Radicals and Republicans were implicated in the conspiracy.

Prepare For Invasion.

MADRID, Sept. 27.—Bands of Portuguese Royalists have gathered along the Portuguese frontier, according to despatches from Badajos, where they intend to carry out a carefully-laid plan to create slight disturbances at various points, so as to attract the attention of the Portuguese while the main body of a royalist army marches on Lisbon from the north.

Heroic Sacrifice To Save Children.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Edward Scully, foreman in the street cleaning department, sacrificed his life yesterday to save a crowd of school children from a runaway horse. The horse, attached to a street-cleaning cart, was turning a corner in Brooklyn occupied by two public schools. On the sidewalk were some three hundred children. Scully dashed out of his office, seized the animal's bridle and brought it to a stop at the curb. But after he had checked the runaway he lost his grip and fell under the horse's hoofs. His skull was fractured and he died in a few minutes.

Calgary Wants Free Wheat.

CALGARY, Sept. 27.—The Calgary industrial bureau has started a campaign for the removal of the duty on American wheat, so that Western Canada may take full advantage of the Wilson tariff, the passage of which through Congress is now assured, and in which there is a provision for the free entry of Canadian wheat into the United States, provided the Canadian Government removes its present duty on American wheat.

SCHOONER DRIVEN ASHORE.

NOME, Alaska, Sept. 27.—The four-masted schooner Transit is a total wreck on the shore of Point Barrow, where she was driven by the ice, and five other vessels are imprisoned in the ice in the same neighborhood.

Captain J. B. Backland, owner and navigator of the Transit, and his crew of seven are on their way to Nome in a launch. The old whaler Karluk, bearing Vilhjalmar Stefansson, is the only vessel of the Canadian explorer's fleet to clear the ice and make winter quarters. The power schooners Mary Sachs and Alaska and the steam whaler Belvedere bearing part of the explorer's outfit are fast in the ice. The other icebound vessels are the power schooner North Star and Polar Bear.

While the five imprisoned vessels are in danger of meeting the same fate as the Transit, no fear is felt for the safety of those on board, as it would be easy to leave at any time over the ice.

Lady-Bugs "Aviated."

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—About two million lady bugs are flying around Chicago to-day through the carelessness of an employe of the International Refrigeration Exposition at the stock yards amphitheatre.

The frozen insects were packed in an icebound case with glass top. When an attendant filled the refrigerator he forgot to close it, and before long the bugs were revived by the warm air and flew away.

The lady bugs were shipped from California, where they are used to fight the fruit scale. Between seasons they are put on ice and frozen. The management ordered another shipment at a cost of several thousand dollars.

Garment Workers On Strike.

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—With some seven hundred garment workers from three clothing factories in the city on strike, the United Garment Workers of America, Local No. 209, have issued a statement threatening a strike of all their members in Montreal as a demonstration of sympathy with the men now out.

An open air meeting for the strikers and sympathizers has been arranged for Saturday afternoon next on the Champ de Mars, when the speakers will include Mr. Will Thorne, M.P., James Simpson, Toronto, and several of the labor leaders now attending the Trades Congress here.

FATHER APE

Whatever conclusion the Scientists of the British Association may come to on the question of man's ultimate destiny, they seem to be agreed as to his primal state. They can trace the "Whence?" with some amount of certainty, it they are not sure of the "whither?"

There seems to be no doubt now as to the theory of evolution, it has gone past the theoretical stage it is even more than a hypothetical doctrine, it is now a fixed dogma of every Scientist's creed.

But while they are positive that man did evolve from the ape, they are not quite clear as to how it was done. Various interesting theories were put forward and discussed at the Birmingham meeting as to the development of the brain. It was suggested that intelligence was the consequence of the ape taking to animal food.

This predilection developed the habits of the hunter—his gregarious and co-operative instinct, and he became a sort of wolf-ape. Professor Read says that "man resembles the dog more than any of the other animals, and that is the reason why he is more friendly to the dog than to any other animal."

That there is something akin to man in the dog has often been remarked. But these human attributes displayed by the canine fraternity are the result of ages of domesticity and association with mankind. The fact that man resembles many of the lower animals does not necessarily prove that he was evolved from them, any more than it proves that they descended from him.

There is still an inifnite gap between man and the lower creation which Scientists have failed to bridge with all their theoretical and practical engineering. The discovery of prehistoric remains do prove that there were lower types of humanity on the planet, but the earliest known fossil remains are still human, and the brain capacity is in many cases equal to the average man to-day.

OUR AIRY EMIGRANTS

The lighthouses on the coasts of England and France, while they often save the lives of unwary mariners in the dark, are great destroyers of migratory birds flying across the sea by night. There is a movement on foot to protect these airy emigrants against this wholesale slaughter There is a suggestion that perches should be placed on the lighthouses. An enormous number of migratory birds dash themselves against the bright lights. Fifteen thousand larks are reported to have been killed off Heligoland in this way.

Swallows are the most frequent victims and the slaughter of these insect-eating birds is regarded by agriculturists as very serious. Lord Curzon has interested himself in the subject, and his plea for the birds has already borne some fruit.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Sir Philip Watts, K.C.B., of the British Admiralty, has been assuring the people of Vancouver that it would be cheaper and quicker to construct warships in Great Britain than in Canada. Is this information still required?

It is prophesised by a French chemist that in the distant future man will subsist on food in the form of tabloids, he will be independent of the seasons of rain or drought, heat or cold, and exposed no longer to pathogenic microbes which are the cause of epidemics and are the enemies of the human race.

The islands which disappeared a short time ago in the Pacific ocean are said to have had a population of several hundred natives and a few white men. They are not shown on ordinary maps owing to their smallness, but they lay about midway between New Caledonia and the Fiji group. They were of volanic origin, Falcon Island having been thrown up in October, 1889.

MR. WILLIAM WATSON'S FAITH

Mr. William Watson, in a sonnet contributed to the September Independent, of New York, gives thanks for three things. Two of these are "A perfect spouse, pure as the perfect sea," and "A radiant daughter." The third is referred to in these lines:

Deep thanks, that I have now at last regained
That faith in God which I did lose
so long;
The God who oft-times with bewildering gloom
Muffled His beams; who dark-omely sustained
And guided, when I knew not and from whom
I had at birth the heavenly dower of song.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To The Editor of The Review

Sir,—Your report of the Canadian League meeting at Newmarket makes me say: "This question of National defence should be tried at a General Election." Will you kindly allow a correction?

My speech contained a warning against throwing the matter of National defence, on which there should be national unity before the world into a general election, in which half the people of Canada might be accused of disloyalty by the other half. The Canadian League is for a non-partisan settlement of the Navy question, which would make a general election on it superfluous.

Australian Boys Always Prepared to Deal With Snake Bites.

While in India about 20,000 persons a year die from snake-bite, only about 19 a year die in Australia, though a very large number get bitten. The low death rate in Australia is due to various causes. In the first place, the bite is usually received in the leg, which is protected to some extent by clothing, or on the hand. It is quite a usual thing for an Australian boy who puts his hand into a burrow or a hollow log in quest of a rabbit and pulls the hand forth with a venomous snake clinging to it—by no means an infrequent occurrance—immediately to take heroic measures. He chops off the bitten finger with a hatchet, which is almost always part of the equipment when boys are hunting rabbits, or gets one of his companions to do it for him. Failing this, he at any rate slashes the bitten finger vigorously with a knife to let the flow of blood carry away the venom, and ties a ligature tightly round his finger and round his arm, in order to check the return of the poisoned blood to the heart. In this he is carrying out the instructions which are posted by the Government of Victoria in every state school and on every railway station in the state.

On the school walls and station platforms are seen everywhere colored prints depicting some of the more venomous snakes, the two punctures of the poisonous reptile, the four pictures of the non-venomous, the cruciform incision which is recommended, and the best method of making a ligature with a stick for a tourniquet. The pictures are accompanied by explanatory letterpress in large type. Prof. McCoy, of Melbourne University, in a book about snake experiments, tells a strange story illustrating the courage of despair. Putting a mouse into a box that contained one of his captive cobras, he watched the reptile glide slowly towards it. The mouse shrank terrified into a corner, and then, when the cobra's flattened head was within an inch of it, sprang into the air and alighted on the back of the neck of its foe. It sat there and clenched its sharp little teeth in the reptile's flesh. The cobra could not shake it off, and it bit deeper and deeper until the cobra lay dead.

He Had Been There.

"Can you direct me to the best hotel in this town?" asked the stranger who, after sadly watching the train depart, had set his satchel upon the station platform.

"I can," replied the man who was waiting for a train going the other way, "but I hate to do it."

"Why?"

"Because you will think after you've seen it that I'm a liar."—Chicago Record-Herald.

BRITISH NEWS OF THE WEEK

WISHED HE WAS BACK

"I cannot tell you how grieved I am to have two soldiers before me," said the Matlock magistrate, Sergeant J. W. Merriott, remanding two men charged with being deserters. "I have had twenty-two years in the Army and I only wish I could go back to my regiment.

HER ALLOWANCE.

"What does your husband allow you?" asked the Lambeth magistrate. Woman: Sometimes a shilling, sometimes sixpence, sometimes nothing, sometimes a good hiding.

ONE HERE AND THERE.

"That wouldn't make a man drunk would it?" argued a youth before the Brentford magistrate, after narrating that he "had only seven half-pints—not on top of one another, but one 'ere and one there." He was fined.

PONTOON BRIDGE ACCIDENT.

An unlucky accident marked the crossing of the pontoon bridge at the Medmenham ferry. A four-horsed wagon of the Royal Engineers' Signal Company had reached the middle of the bridge when, either by the giving way of a plank or by a start of the horses, the wagon, with its four horses and two men were flung into the stream. Sergeant Quinney and Corporal Ryte jumped immediately from the bridge and cut loose the leaders, which with the drivers and the rescuers, swam ashore. The other two horses were drowned.

A "GENTLEMAN"

Gentleman was the name of a man fined by the Stratford magistrate for swearing at a woman.

SUDDEN DEATH IN A 'BUS.

A well-dressed man, aged about thirty-six, was taken ill in a motor-bus while proceeding along Clerkenwell road. He was conveyed to the Royal Free hospital, Gray's Inn road, and on arrival was found to be dead.

HUNGER-STRIKER OUT.

James Connolly, one of the Dublin strike leaders who has been on hunger-strike, was released from Mountjoy prison, to which he had been committed a fortnight ago for three months in default of bail. He was charged with having used language calculated to incite to breaches of the peace. No attempt was made to forcibly feed him.

ONE OF ERIN'S FAIRIES.

The story of the boy who was exhibited throughout Scotland as a genuine Irish leprechaun leads one to ask what exactly a leprechaun is, for, of course, each variety of fairy has its special characteristics.

The leprechaun is peculiar to Ireland and is in the form of a little old man, by profession a maker of brogues. He is only discovered by the sound of the hammering of his brogues, and any one capturing him can induce him by threats to reveal where his wealth is hidden.

But no one yet has laid hands on that wealth, for if you take your eye off the leprechaun for as much as a second he has the power of vanishing, however tight you may hold him. And his ingenuity in making you glance away is always successful.

Only once did that ingenuity fail, and even then the treasure escaped unpillaged. A careful peasant, proof against all temptations, kept his eye on the little brogue maker until the money was revealed in a field of ragwort. But he had no bag. So he tied his garter round the particular plant under which the money was hid and went to fetch one, only to find on his return that every ragwort in the field was adorned with a red garter.—London Chronicle.

FATHER OF ALL HOT SPRINGS.

Carlsbad's Famous Sprudel and Its White Robed Priestesses.

The Sprudel is the most ancient of all Carlsbad's fountains, the father of all hot springs, and still pours forth the greatest flood of all.

It rises like a geyser in its basin, a steaming, spouting column an inch and a half thick and from six to thirteen feet high. Around it stand priestesses, the spring girls, dressed in lovely white waterproof uniforms. They fix the drinking cups at the ends of poles and catch the water as it comes fresh from the earth's heart.

The geologists call Carlsbad's fountains virgin or volcanic water. They have their sources in no rainfall sinking to fill subterranean reservoirs. Created in those glowing inner laboratories of mother earth, the water here leaps to light and air for the first time.

Pagan memories seem to stir in one at the thought. It becomes easy to believe that the springs bring from recesses where it has lurked hidden since creation some magic, unspoiled, primeval energy and that the cheerful, smiling German peasant girls who toil so tirelessly are captive woodland creatures serving forces more ancient than the gods.—Harper's Magazine.

Elizabeth's Pride

A Labor Day Story

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Elizabeth heard the motorcar crunch on the drive, but she would not part the curtains to see if Andrew Gaylord had accompanied her brother home from the ball game. The color left her cheeks as she listened with bated breath for the sound of their voices as the car slowed down. The motor throbbed noisily for a moment and then swept on around to the garage, and she heard her brother's step in the hall and the sound of his deep voice, but there was no other.

Elizabeth felt the color rushing back to her cheeks as the doorknob rattled, and she bent over her book in apparent absorption when the door opened breezily and Tom came in, big and brown and excited.

"Rah, rah, rah, for the other fellows!" he grinned sheepishly. "Licked to smithereens, Beth!" He flung himself into an opposite chair and looked at her with brotherly affection.

"What was the score, Tom?" asked Elizabeth as she carefully marked a place in her book and laid the volume on the table.

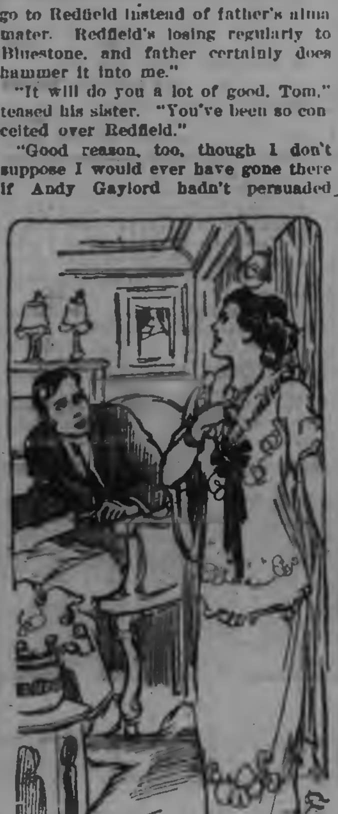
"Twelve to nothing," returned Tom Prescott grimly.

"I suppose father was delighted?"

"Tickled to pieces all the way home. That's the worst of my choosing to go to Redfield instead of father's alma mater. Redfield's losing regularly to Bluestone, and father certainly does hammer it into me."

"It will do you a lot of good, Tom," teased his sister. "You've been so conceited over Redfield."

"Good reason, too, though I don't suppose I would ever have gone there if Andy Gaylord hadn't persuaded me." He stopped abruptly and looked away from his sister's sensitive face.



"SO I TOLD ANDREW GAYLORD," SHE FLASHED.

"Mr. Gaylord decided not to attend the game, then?" asked Elizabeth in a curious, repressed tone.

"Oh, he went with us, but we set him down at the station, and he's gone on home," returned Tom with assumed carelessness.

"Home?" echoed Elizabeth, sitting very rigid and white. "You mean he has gone to—to Chicago?"

"Yes. He sent farewells to you and mother. Father and I tried to persuade him to remain over Sunday, but he said he felt the call and that he better start in at his shop at once. He said something about a telegram and important business, but he had so many excuses that I became suspicious and told him he could go along just on the plain fact that he wanted to, and he seemed relieved and went. I'm disappointed in Andy Gaylord," he ended with a sly look at his sister.

"In what way?" she asked quickly.

"Oh, he isn't a sport! What in thunderation does he want to throw over his uncle's fortune and all the good times he could have with it and go and grind in a machine shop? I don't wonder his uncle has cut him off—I would do the same, only you know, Beth, I really believe at the bottom of my heart that Andy's on the right track." Tom leaned forward and spoke confidentially.

"In what way?" inquired Elizabeth coldly.

"Why, he says it's up to some of us chaps who have the education to work in with the laboring masses, who have not had our advantages, and help place organized labor on an equal fighting ground with organized capital. He's learning the machinist's trade in the Falcon shops."

"I know it," returned Elizabeth crisply. "Why should his uncle object?"

"His uncle, Samuel Gaylord, is one of the important units of organized capital—that's why! He considers that Andy is a traitor to the family standards. The Gaylords pride themselves on their white hands, and machinery is greasy, you know, sis." Tom was watching her keenly.

"So I told Andrew Gaylord," she flashed through sudden and unexpected tears.

"Beth Prescott," gasped Tom, aghast, "you told Andy that? You allowed him to think that you were ashamed of knowing him because he was giving himself to a great cause? I'm ashamed of you!"

Elizabeth arose and walked toward the door. Her fair face was flushed, and she held her head proudly aloft. "That is what I told Andy Gaylord," she reaffirmed distinctly. "I told him I could never become the wife of a mere mechanic; that I knew I should shudder at the very contact of his blackened and greasy hands. I said all that and much more, for I thought he would give up the idea and return with you from the game, and—and now without giving me an opportunity to talk it over further with him he has suddenly left for Chicago." Her voice broke, and she fumbled for the doorknob.

"Give up the idea, Beth, dear! You don't know Andy Gaylord," protested Tom, coming hastily toward her, but Elizabeth, hurt and sensitive from the wounds she had herself wrought, slipped through the door and went to her room.

The Prescotts were very tender with her after that, for they knew that their only daughter had given her heart to Tom's classmate, but the months went by, and Elizabeth grew like her old self, and only her mother knew that the old wound was unhealed beneath her indifferent exterior.

Andrew Gaylord's name was rarely mentioned, and then only in the most casual way, but Elizabeth learned that he was still pursuing the course he had mapped out and that his rich uncle had recently died and left his great wealth to an impecunious distant relative, who was quite willing to keep his hands clean from toil.

Two years afterward Elizabeth was visiting a school friend in Cleveland. It was early in September, and the following day would be the one dedicated to labor. There was to be a great street parade, and Ruth Dalton's father, a prominent newspaper man, was deeply interested in the project.

"If you girls want to see 18,000 workingmen on parade, come down to the Magnet office and you can have a window all to yourselves. I know Ruth is a little democrat. How about you, Miss Elizabeth?"

"I would like to see the parade, Mr. Dalton," she said, coloring faintly.

It was a bright, hot Monday, and the streets were soon filled with a restless crowd of onlookers. The two girls went down to the Magnet office in the Daltons' automobile, and when it drew up at the curb Mr. Dalton hurried forth to meet them.

"You will have to stand on the curb after all," he said. "The crowd is so dense here that it is impossible to see well from our ground floor windows. If you'd rather, not I'll take you down to an office in the Tower building."

"Let us stand here," cried Ruth, and as Elizabeth added her plea Mr. Dalton took his place beside them and gave them some idea of the magnitude of the organization which was about to pass before them. The girls became deeply interested, and when the first notes of the band sounded in the distance Elizabeth's heart fluttered curiously. She told herself that the next best thing to seeing Andy Gaylord once more would be to observe the passing of the trades to which he had apprenticed himself. She would feel in closer touch to him after that, for her pride had been melted in the scorching heat of a love she could not cast out.

Division after division passed, and as Elizabeth watched them she admitted that thousands of these men looked as intelligent and carried themselves with as much grace and dignity as many men in her fashionable set at home. If Andy Gaylord had chosen to become one of them, to throw himself into the ranks of a great army where brainy leaders were needed, why—

"Here come the men from the Falcon shop in Chicago," remarked Mr. Dalton carelessly, and Elizabeth caught her breath as a line of men swept down the street.

Her eager eyes scanned the faces of the men as they passed by in a wavering line. Then, all at once, the whole world seemed to turn upside down and the faces to dance in a gray mist. Then the mist cleared away, and the faces were passing, set steadily ahead, all save one—that of the man on the end of the line nearest the curbstone.

Andy Gaylord's brown eyes were gazing incredulously, wistfully, into hers. As he passed and seemed to go out of her life again she called.

"Andy, Andy, come back!"

"I will!" he called back lustily, and the few who had heard the words above the music smiled at each other, for romance is in every heart.

That night when he had found her at Mr. Dalton's house and her friends had given him an opportunity of seeing her alone he held out his hands to her.

"You called me, Elizabeth," he said quietly.

She came toward him, blushing, trembling. For a moment she looked down at his hands. They were strong, capable hands, clean, but not white. There were calloused spots, and here and there were traces of old cuts from keen edged tools and now and then a fine line of black that was ingrained.

Elizabeth looked down at them, and then she bent gracefully, and, taking his work worn hands in her own soft, white ones, she laid her lips first on one and then on the other.

"My apology to the noblest heritage God has bestowed—labor," she whispered as he took her in his arms.

TWO WOMEN TESTIFY

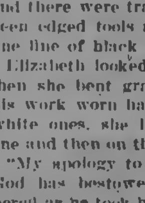
What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Their Health—Their own Statements Follow.

Haliburton, P.E.I.:—"I had a doctor examine me and he said I had falling of the womb, so I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. All the bearing-down pains have vanished. I have gained ten pounds in weight, the discharge is all gone, and I feel better than I have for a long time. I think any woman is foolish to suffer as I did for the sake of a few dollars.

"You can use my letter as a testimonial. It may encourage other poor women who suffer as I did to use your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. GEO. COLLICUTT, Haliburton, Lot 7, P.E.I.

Read What This Woman Says:

New Moorefield, Ohio.—"I take great pleasure in thanking you for what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had bearing down pains, was dizzy and weak, had pains in lower back and could not be upon my feet long enough to get a meal. As long as I laid on my back I would feel better, but when I would get up those bearing down pains would come back, and the doctor said I had female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was the only medicine that helped me and I have been growing stronger ever since I commenced to take it. I hope it will help other suffering women as it has me. You can use this letter."—Mrs. CASSIE LLOYD, New Moorefield, Clark Co., Ohio.



The Sausage.

The sausage dates back to the year 407. It has been asserted that the Greeks in the days of Homer manufactured sausages, but this prehistoric mixture had nothing in common with our modern product. The ancient so called sausage was composed of the same materials which enter into the makeup of the boudin of the French market and the blood pudding of the French Canadian. The ancient sausage was enveloped in the stomachs of goats. It was not until the tenth century that sausage made of hashed pork became known. It was in or near the year 1500 that, thanks to the introduction into Germany of cinnamon and saffron, the sausages of Frankfort and Strassburg acquired a universal reputation.

Perspiration.

The best thing for excessive perspiration under the arms is common baking soda mixed in equal proportion with plain unscented talcum powder. Never bathe under the arms with scents of any kind. Better wash with a good soap and then rub on alcohol in which a little powdered alum has been added, finally dusting with the baking powder and talcum mixture.

Wise Insects.

In his experiments to determine whether it is the color or the odor of flowers that attracts bees and other insects M. Plateau, the Belgian zoologist, bethought him of trying a mirror. He selected a flower of striking color and strong odor and placed it before an excellent glass in which the reflection was perfect. All the insects went straight to the real flower, and not a single one approached the reflection in the mirror.

Fast and Slow.

Redd—Did you have a nice automobile trip? Greene—Part of the way. The chauffeur went too fast going out.

"I suppose he reduced speed coming back?"

"Oh, yes; we were towed back!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Angry Adjectives.

It was not a young woman novelist, but Charles Sumner, of whom the late E. L. Godkin, the New York editor, said:

"He works his adjectives so hard that if they ever catch him alone they will murder him."

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON TABLES OF THE LAW REPLACED.

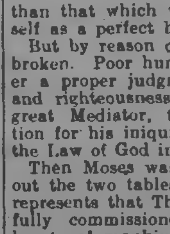
—September 28.—Review.—

"Thou art a God ready to pardon, gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and abundant in loving kindness."—Nehemiah 9:17.

WHOEVER fails to see that Moses, Israel and the Law were types, fails to get the real lesson out of them. Moses was not only a type of Jesus; but, as St. Peter explains, he was a type of the entire Church of Christ, of which Jesus is the Head. St. Peter's words are, "Moses truly said unto the fathers, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me."—Acts 3:22, 23.

Jesus was raised up first, and since Pentecost the raising up from amongst the brethren has progressed. The work will be consummated when the full number of the Church shall have been accepted to glory. Then the antitypical Moses will begin His great work of delivering all desiring to return to harmony with God—all of whom are represented in the twelve tribes of Israel.

The Church of this Gospel Age is otherwise called the Church of the first-borns, and was typically represented in the tribe of Levi, all of whom represented the first-borns of Israel, saved in the Passover. These were divided into two classes—priests and their servants. The priests represented The Christ—High Priest and under priests. The Levites represented the remainder of the overcomers.



Typical of Christ's Second Advent.

The antitypical priests will become a Royal Priesthood. Jesus, the great High Priest, invested with kindly honors, will have associated with Himself the faithful Little Flock, His joint-heirs. The remainder of the overcoming Church are to be colaborers on a less glorious plane, yet spiritual. Their work will be primarily the blessing of all desiring to come into harmony with God.

The First Tables of the Law.

The first tables of the Law were prepared by the Lord Himself. This represents the fact that man was created a perfect image of his Creator, in full accord with the Divine will and fully expressive of the Divine Law. Adam needed no other law than that which was in and of himself as a perfect being.

But by reason of sin this Law was broken. Poor humanity has no longer a proper judgment respecting sin and righteousness. Man needs the great Mediator, to make reconciliation for his iniquity and to rewrite the Law of God in his flesh.

Then Moses was instructed to hew out the two tables of the Law. This represents that The Christ of glory is fully commissioned to prepare the hearts of mankind for the rewriting of the Divine Law. To prepare men to obey God's Law will require their Restitution—their uplifting up out of sin and degradation. This work, committed to Moses in the type, is in the antitype committed to Christ.

Moses' second return with the two tables of the Law was peculiarly different from the first. Coming with the second tables, Moses' face shone; and it was necessary for him to put on a veil, which thereafter he wore in the presence of the Israelites, but removed when entering the presence of God.

Aaron's anointing typical."

Christ's work as Mediator, at His Second Coming will be accompanied by a veiling of His glory, so the world will not see Jesus. This He declared, "Yet a little while and the world seeth Me no more; but ye shall see Me." The Apostle explains that the Church will be prepared to see Christ by being changed from the earthly to the Heavenly nature. "We shall see Him as He is"; "we shall be like Him"; "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye"; for "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."—1 John 3:2; 1 Corinthians 15:50-52.

At Christ's Second Coming, when He will accomplish His great work as Mediator for man and become their Leader into the Land of Promise—Paradise restored—He will veil His glory from mankind, and speak to them through the veil, and not directly from the spirit plane. Mankind will see Jesus no more. Instead, they shall see Him represented in the Ancient Worthies, as He declared—"Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the Prophets.

The anointing of the Aaronic priesthood typified the anointing of the Royal Priesthood. As in the type sacrifices were necessary before anointing and consecration to the priestly office were possible, so in the antitype Jesus must offer Himself, thereby showing His loyalty to God by sacrificing even unto death.

Similarly, the under priesthood, of which Jesus is the Head, consecrate to their office only by sacrifice. In the case of the typical high priest, the sacrifice was a bullock. The antitype was our Lord's own body. In the case of the typical under priests, the sacrifice was a goat. The antitype is the flesh, the human nature, of the Church.—Hebrews 13:11-13; Romans 12:1.

Our Golden Text suggests that Christians and the world in general have lost much through our miserable misconceptions of the Divine character, handed down from the Dark Ages.

REV. F. A. CONNER'S ADDRESS TO PROTESTANT FEDERATION

Mock Modesty and False Tenderness He Says Prevent Some Protestants From Doing Their Duty

The following are some quotations from an address delivered by Rev. F. A. Conners to the Protestant Federation on Thursday evening, Sept. 25th in the S.O.E. Hall, on the theme "Protestantism, Its Origin and Significance."

Protestantism was first applied to those who at the time of the reformation under Luther, in 1529, protested, or made a solemn declaration of dissent from a decree issued by the Emperor Charles V., and is now applied to the various Christian denominations growing out of that great movement.

Behind the reformation was Luther and his colleagues and behind these great men was God, our only hope for true Protestantism is in God. Any effort to establish and maintain a Protestantism without God will perish, and it ought to.

With all our machinery of organization we will only be as France and other nations are but if we fail to recognize God. France had the wealth and the genius to have become a great nation, but she left out God, and where does she stand to-day? France was held in the thraldom of Rome until her intolerance became unbearable, and revolting against the Roman yoke she stands alone lapsing into infidelity.

Heretofore we have seen great displaying of the powers of this gigantic institution, now we see her begin to decline, and in the near future we shall see her downfall and overthrow; it must come and will come as sure as night follows day.

There is a mock-modesty and false tenderness exercised on the part of some of our Protestants which prevent them from doing their duty, and this type of Protestantism add nothing to the cause of true Protestantism, rather it is this class that we need most to fear. Let me say to you here, do your duty as true Protestants regardless of what other may think or say of you, he who dislikes you for being true to your convictions, never had the spirit to be your friend. Such policy religion is only a vain effort to serve the Lord so as not to offend the devil. God pity the Church that has such weak-kneed men for her pillars.

There is also another class who for business policy and political advantages are selling their principles of faith and rights of country, these are not "Regenerates" but degenerates, not men but jades and knaves, traitors to the Faith and enemies of our commonwealth. God deliver us from such a degraded condition and give us true men of sterling worth, to represent us in all our religious activities and political interests.

MAKE ME, O LORD, A MAN.

Lord make of me in word and deed,
 A man to honor Thee,
A man of justice, faith and truth,
 A man of equity;
Give me the grace I daily need,
 To serve Thy purpose true,
That I may do each day I live,
 The things I ought to do.

Help me to do Thy Sovereign will,
 As in Thy Word revealed,
That sinners lost be led to Thee,"
 And broken hearts be healed;
So shall my mission be fulfilled,
 In life's allotted span.
Then shall I serve Thy purpose true,
 And truly be a man.

It is not in the name I take,
 Nor what I claim to be,
Nor what the people say I am,
" Nor what they think of me,
Nor where I live, nor what I do,
 Nor whether bond or free,
But it is what I really am,
 O Lord, my God, in Thee.

As true hearted Protestants I entreat of you, attend public worship in some Christian Church where true Protestantism is preached and its principles enforced. Many of our Protestants are reflecting discredit on the cause they represent through absenting themselves from public worship on the Lord's Day. Nothing is more gratifying to the opposition than the indifference of Protestants in this respect. As you love your children and cherish for them the best in life, I beg of you think earnestly and act wisely in this matter. It is incumbent upon every true Protestant to say in the words of Joshua of old, "As for me and my house we will serve the Lord."

The tactics of Romanism are of the most subtle character, and we as Protestants need to be constantly on the "watch-tower" exercising the closest scrutiny and the greatest wisdom for our protection and safety. May God keep us steadfast in the right and protect us in all our efforts to promote Truth and Holiness."

Romanism makes man's relation to Christ depend upon his relation to the Church, while Protestantism makes man's relation to the Church depend upon his relation to Christ. Freedom is the slogan of Protestantism. Truth is her foundation and Christ is her only hope. There is no true freedom or real liberty in Romanism, for her principle is domination and subjection. There is no hope in Atheism, for it denies God and the world to come; it leaves us with no faith except in ourselves, limited to our earthly wants, and with no motives but our appetites and passions, whose slaves we soon become. Protestantism is our only escape from Romanism and Atheism; the one a religion without life (spiritual) and the other a life without religion. There is no real religion but within the Spirit of Christ and the laws of love.

Four centuries ago Protestantism had not an existence as an organization, to-day she leads the world in military power, wealth, civilization and morality. May she so continue to grow in power and efficiency until true Protestantism shall reign from pole to pole, and the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ.

The Romanists would do well to give heed to Act 5. 38. 39; "If it is of man it will come to naught, if it is of God it will stand," and all the powers of earth and hell shall not prevail against it."

ASK POLICE TO SECURE EVIDENCE

As to Cause of Accidents Affecting the City

Several claims for damages against the city were considered by the Legal Committee last night, when it was decided to secure the co-operation of the police department, so that evidence might be secured at the time of accident or as soon after as possible.

Mention was made of the Conroy case, in which the city claims $5,000 for unfinished work in connection with sewer operations. The City Solicitor was instructed to take action in default of settlement. Mr. Conroy had a counter claim of $3,000 against the city. This arises out of the Smith street bridge contract.

A recommendation was made to Council, which it is hoped will settle the dispute between Mr. Wm. Green and the city, as the ownership of certain property, which has caused no end of discussion in committee and Council sessions for several years. The city will cede all rights to Messrs. Green and Campbell for $300.

RALLY DAY SUNDAY SCHOOLS

A Happy Day For The Children

To-morrow is Rally Day in all the Methodist and Presbyterian churches of the city.

Special services are held in every Sunday school. For some weeks the children have been practicing new songs and anthems, and everything has been done to make the services bright and inspiring.

Parents are especially invited to attend and a hearty invitation is offered to all.

REV. J. R. WEBB WILL GIVE HIS IMPRESSIONS

The subject at Murray street church on Sunday evening will be: "A Morning in the Roman Catholic Church." It was noted that Rev. J. R. Webb was among the most attentive of the non-Catholic attendants at the consecration service on Wednesday morning and it is interesting to know that he intends to give his impressions to his Sunday evening congregation

The world is almost as full of people who wear themselves out as it is of people who rust.

THE OUTLOOK ON POTATOES

Good Yield but Tubers Are Smaller Than Last Year

According to latest inquiries among the farmers of this district the prospects for a good yield in the potato crop are bright. Generally speaking, the tubers are smaller than a year ago, but they are in a better condition.

The whole trouble last year was that the rains were prolonged, causing a large portion of the crops to rot. So far, the farmers declare that they prefer this season's drought which makes the potato small to the the wet season which causes rot to large tubers. A number of returns refer to the fact that there are fewer Colorado beetles than usual this season. This is attributed by some to the presence of an insect which makes its living by eating the common potato bug.

One of the great troubles encountered this season has been the dry rot, and this shows up in particular in one variety of imported potato. Horticulturists will tell the inquirer that the dry rot, contrary to popular belief, is not regulated by climatic conditions, but that is caused by a certain variety of bug. Experimentation has shown that proper spraying at the proper season will prevent the dry rot. It is a rot which commences in the centre of the tuber, and while for a time not marring its outward beauty, leaves a very unpalatable core.

IMPROVEMENT

Sanitary Conditions in the City Have Been Improved

Inspector Spence reports sanitary conditions in the city to be very good. Elm street, which was causing the Board of Health considerable trouble owing to its unsanitary conditions, has been remedied and is reported to be in good shape. The sanitary conditions in the city have been greatly improved during the past few months.

ALL SAINTS' S.S. RALLY DAY

The annual Sunday school rally will be held to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Parish Hall. Mr. C. E. Jamieson of the Collegiate Institute, will give an address to the children. The parents are invited and requested to see that every scholar is in attendance.

DYING FROM GALL-STONES

Doctors Said Only An Operation Could Save His Life—"Fruit-a-tives" Enabled Him To Pass Nearly 200 Gall-Stones.

J. B. HARDING, Esq.

46 Grove Ave., TORONTO, ONT., Jan. 10th, 1913.

"I suffered untold agony from GALL-STONES, for the past three years, and tried many doctors without getting relief. I also paid $5.00 for one bottle of medicine which was useless. At times the pain from these gall-stones was so great that I lost consciousness, and my condition was desperate. I was quite satisfied that I was dying and the doctors said I must be operated upon.

"During one of these very severe, acute attacks, I was given some "FRUIT-A-TIVES", and after taking a short treatment of this remedy, I passed gall-stones over an inch in length, and as many as one hundred and fifty or two hundred in number. "FRUIT-A-TIVES" was the only thing that would relieve my pain. They are the greatest medicine in the world, and if there is anyone in Canada, or anywhere else, that suffers from gall-stones, I say "Let them take "Fruit-a-tives" and be cured".

"If this testimonial will further the good work of "Fruit-a-tives", publish it with my full authority." J. B. HARDING.

Are you wondering how "Fruit-a-tives"—a medicine made from fruit juices, can cure Gall-stones? We will tell you. The Gall bladder is the reservoir for holding the Gall, or bile, secreted by the liver. If there is insufficient bile, then the bile in the Gall bladder is thick and easily forms stones. When the liver is weak, it secretes very little bile and then the Gall bladder is partially filled with a thick jelly-like mass of bile and thus forms into lumps or stones. "Fruit-a-tives" stimulates the liver to secrete more bile, and this increased bile softens the Gall-stones and by overfilling the Gall bladder, forces the passage of the stones through the Gall duct—and thus cures the disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices. By a wonderful process, the medicinal properties of certain fruits are greatly intensified—then valuable tonics and antiseptics are added and the whole made into the pleasant tasting tablets known in every section of Canada as "Fruit-a-tives".

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

It isn't until a man approaches the top that the world is eager to give him a boost.

The people who overdo things needn't be surprised if they have to do them over.

OBITUARY

Woodrow Mann

Woodrow Mann, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Mann, 111 London street, passed away last night.

The Late John Smith

John Smith, aged 68, an old resident of South Monaghan, passed away yesterday. The funeral will take place from the late residence, on Monday afternoon, to the Little Lake cemetery.

LAID TO REST

The funeral of the late Rev. Father Brophy, who passed away at Kingston, on Thursday, at the grand old age of 84 years, was held this morning at nine o'clock. Rev. Father Fergus O'Brien sang the requiem high mass at St. Peter's cathedral, while Rev. Father Cote and Rev. Father McCauley assisted in the choir. Rev. Father Ferguson officiated at the cemetery.

The late Father Brophy was born in Ireland in 1829, but when he was a very small boy his parents removed to Canada and settled in the vicinity of Peterborough. He spent his young days and attended school here. He went to Ottawa to continue his education but in a short time he was sent to Rome to complete his studies and it was there, over half a century ago, that he was ordained into the priesthood.

Shortly after his ordination he returned to Canada and was given the charge of the parish of Reid, Ont. He was one of the finest speakers in the vicinity and spoke on many important occasions.

A SAFE TONIC FOR MOTHERS

Who do Not Recover Their Strength as They Should

Every mother who fails to regain her health and strength after confinement needs a tonic. The years of weakness and suffering which so often follow are unnecessary and easily avoided. The fact that her strength does not return is a certain indication that her blood supply has been overtaxed and is impoverished. This condition is often made worse when the mother takes up her household duties while she is still weak when a complete breakdown results. The strength a weak mother needs can be quickly found in the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills increase and enrich the blood supply, and thus bring health and strength to the exhausted system. Mrs. Robt. Little says: "I have nursed for upwards of twenty-five years, and I could relate many cases relieved and cured through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In maternity cases which I nurse I always use them and I know of no other medicine that so speedily builds up the mother at this critical time. I have also found them of great value in the case of young girls, and I can add that as for myself they have saved me many a doctor's bill. I feel safe in saying they are the best tonic medicine I know of."

Nursing mothers will find Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will give her just the strength she needs, and they will at the same time aid in keeping her child healthy. If you do not find these Pills at your dealer's they will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BODY IS IDENTIFIED

Victim of Auto Accident Had Worked at Local Hotel

The body of the man who was killed in the auto accident near Lakefield is still unidentified, but is thought to be that of John McDonald, who was an employe of the Oriental Hotel some fifteen years ago and of late as a lumberman in the north country.

Mr. and Mrs. George Windover, of Aylmer street went to Lakefield yesterday afternoon and on viewing the body say that it was not that of Ephraim Windover, whom they say, was a bigger man and that his hair was almost white.

The wife of E. B. Windover also claims that the body is not that of her husband, as do also his brothers.

The description of the dead man tallies with that of the man who was seen in company with Darcy and another man at some of the hotels the night before the accident. In conversation with several men around the city he said his name was McDonald.

Mr. Sam Long proprietor of the American Hotel, identified the body as that of the man who was with Darcy when they left Peterborough for Lakefield.

A TANGLE AT POLICE COURT

Fine of $50 but Defendant Did Not Elect or Plead

When John Revoy faced Magistrate Dumble at Police Court this morning he was fined $50 and costs for obtaining money under false pretences.

Revoy conducted a game of hoop-la during the Peterborough Fair and it was claimed that the wooden hoops would not fit on the blocks. He was first charged with conducting a game of chance, but His Worship did not convict.

Then when the second charge was laid by Chief Thompson, Revoy was not asked to elect or plead. The case was enlarged, and this morning Magistrate Dumble imposed the above fine thus bringing about a legal tangle.

The false pretences stated in the charge relate to the taking of the money for the wooden rings with which the purchaser could not circle the block.

Fire at Smoke Stack

BOSTON, "trot" and tango have brought in their train special fashions in dresses, shoes and stockings, for to dance these modern steps well one must have a frock that is not too long, and, consequently, pretty shoes and stockings.

Some of the latest Paris models are pictured here, and their graceful simplicity gives a very good idea of the type of dress that looks best for these dances. One, of white tulle posed over pale pink satin, is just striking enough for these odd dance steps. The little shortwaisted corsage is Greek in character, almost sleeveless, the material simply caught once at the shoulder and once over the arm. Of the four ruffles on the skirt one is of black net and all are cut in little points on the lower edge, outlined with black chenille and weighted with round white or black pearl buttons. The black ruffle is caught at intervals with little pink roses and tufts of black tulle. White silk clocked stockings are worn with white satin slippers having very high heels and an oval slide buckle of rhinestones set in silver.

A decorative tassel that will fly out attractively with dancing steps is made of the same kind of crystal beads that embroider the white tulle tunic. This tassel is original in that, while it comes on the outside of the old rose satin skirt, it goes under the white tulle fichu corsage, showing through translucently. Sleeves, as such, as in most of the new evening dresses, are lacking. A cap sleeve effect is made by catching the fullness of the fichu under the arm. A large velvet pansy is thrust into the belt. With black silk stockings are worn black satin slippers, laced about the ankle with black satin ribbons. A black velvet hat almost covered with white feathers repeats the note of black.

No sleeves at all is the feature of another of these dancing frocks, the arms passing through apertures in the loose draped corsage. The gown is a combination of plain and crystal chiffon over white satin. In spite of its filmy character there are four thicknesses of material on the skirt—first, the white satin foundation, then a layer of plain chiffon, then the crystal embroidery and lastly, over the hips, a drapery of the chiffon. The drapery is a hint for modernizing a straight up and down last year's evening gown. A pale blue felt and a black tulle chou give a dash of color that goes well with the black velvet shoes and silk stockings.

Youthful looking capes are draped with individuality over filmy dancing frocks. Some are very simple in cut, depending on their wearer and the material used for the artistic effect. Black taffeta lined with pink silk makes one model, the outside part gathered onto a very small yoke, the edge left ruffled. A tiny collar is just wide enough to hold one button and loop.

Modish shoes and stockings from Paris, on latest lines, show some original details. At the Deauville races a pair of white shoes were noted with a broad ribbon strap over the instep caught at the outside edge with a jewelled slide. A pair of white kid boots had instead straps laced with white satin ribbon. decorative plaques outlined with narrow satin afternoon dress were tied with

With a blue brocade dress slippers of the same material were worn, and a pair of brocaded slippers, worn with a plain satin dress, were interwoven with tinsel threads and flowered sprays. The stockings had inserts of white Chantilly lace embroidered with pearls and brilliants.

A mauve Greek style gown had matching stockings and satin slippers laced through crocheted rings with ribbon over the instep and ankle in corthune fashion. Silver buckles on the front were set with rhinestones.

With a white lace dress satin slippers had an embroidered slender vine design running along the outside and inside of the slipper. On the toe a double looped satin bow was caught with a small oblong fancy slide.

SANDALS ARE EASILY MADE.

THE Parisian fashion of ribbon lacings, now so much in evidence on afternoon footgear, has proved a boon to women with narrow feet of the kind that simply refuse to stay in pumps. It has also demonstrated its usefulness to the girl who delights in the various and complicated steps of the tango, where a slipper may cause some damage, not to say much embarrassment.

By a series of buttonholed flat loops a clever New York woman has devised by means of these lacings a way not only to keep her pumps on, but also to prevent the lacings from slipping down over the ankles once the topmost bow has been tied. She purchased four yards of black satin ribbon, five-eighths of an inch in width, which was divided into four equal lengths. Two strands of the ribbon were then sewed on each side of the pump, about an inch from the centre front, and at a point about two inches from the back flat buttonholed loops the width of the ribbon were made on each side.

The next step was to make three of these same loops on the stockings to be worn; the first loop about three inches above the pump, on the stocking seam, the second about two and a half inches above that, on the same seam, and the third on the front of the stocking about halfway up the leg.

DARING BASE RUNNERS.

Catcher Sweeney's View of the American League Stars.

Asked recently whom he thought were the best base runners in the American league, Ed Sweeney, the popular catcher of the Highlanders, replied:

"For speed, the best are Cobb, Milan and Collins, but if you asked me to name the most daring base runners, I would say George Moriarty and Jimmy Callahan. I consider Moriarty the trickiest base runner in the country. When he is on base you cannot relax your vigilance a second, and if he got on the paths as often as Cobb, I believe he would steal a full hundred bases a season. As a pilferer of base ball cushions he is an artist.

"George is considered a fast man, but he is nowhere as rapid as Ty, Milan and Collins, so that makes his dazzling performances all the more wonderful. He has the audacity to try anything, and he gets a bigger lead on the pitchers than any man I know of. He works away from the bag inch by inch and then bolts ahead like a streak. He seems to get top speed in half a second and always slides to the base at a point furthest from the man taking the ball.

"When he is on third base he is more dangerous than gunpowder. The catcher is working with the pitcher to 'get' a batsman and before he notices it Moriarty has slid into the plate. He can steal home by narrower margins than any ball player I have to worry over.

"When Callahan is playing regularly and is feeling fit he is every bit as dangerous. He deceives you because he never jockeys from the cushion for a lead."—Ed A. Goewey in Leslie's.

IMPALED IN MIDAIR.

Four occupants of a balloon, one of whom was a lady, had an unpleasant experience and narrow escape recently while starting for a race from Berlin.

The London Telegraph states that the balloon rose laboriously from the grounds of the Schmargendorf gas works, where it had been filled, and before it could get clear was swept by the wind up against the high chimney of a boiler house. The envelope was pierced by the lightning conductor and spread itself out over the top of the chimney like a gigantic mushroom, while the car hung down against the brickwork with which it had come into violent collision.

Fortunately, a foreman in the boiler house witnessed the accident and had the presence of mind to close the valves connecting the furnaces with the chimney. No time was lost in calling in the fire brigade, who ran up their tallest ladder. It failed, however, to reach the car, and it was necessary for the occupants to lower themselves by ropes to the topmost rung.

When the valves to the chimney were reopened the balloon caught fire and was burned to ashes.

She Won't Live In Russia.

Mme. Pavlowa, the Russian dancer, had to pass through something of an ordeal during her recent visit to her native land. After a performance at St. Petersburg she was called to the imperial box, and the czar asked her why she had ceased to live in Russia. The dancer was equal to the occasion. She entered into an animated description of the beauties of her new London home and especially of her pet swans, pigeons and parrots, who could hardly be expected to enjoy the delights of travel and who even at that moment were pining for the return of their mistress. The czar listened with amusement and gave his permission to the great dancer to live where and how she pleased, so long as she remembered that her own people were second to none in appreciation of her art.—Chicago News.

"Clamorous Printers' Devils."

Among the papers of a dead relative has been found an unpublished autograph letter from Thomas Carlyle to Mrs. Austin when he was preparing to leave Craigenputtock to reside in London. Mrs. Austin had undertaken to choose a house in London for the Carlyles and the letter, which is dated March 20, 1834, refers to this matter. The most interesting passages are as follows:—

"You are very kind and helpful, and yet it is almost cruel to so task your kindness. With the clamorous printers' devils one has enough to do and there is no need of other devils to join in the hunt. I am well presuaded that you can please us better than we could ourselves were we already on the spot.

"My whole soul grows sick in the business of housekeeping. I get to think with a kind of comfort of the grim house, six feet by three, which will need no seeking. In return I ought to profess myself humble in my requisitions as to that matter.

"I must have air to breathe. ... I must have sleep also, for which latter object procul o procul este, ye accursed tribe of bugs, ye bawling watchmen, that awaken the world every half-hour to say what o'clock it is. Of other indispensable requisitions I have none."

Mrs. Asquith Tired.

"I am sick to death of it," said Mrs. Asquith, the British Premier's wife, to a friend at Goodwood races. She was referring to her duties as the wife of the Prime Minister. "You never can be 'yourself'," she volunteered, "for you must be forever, so to speak, standing on your hind legs." Her friends who know "Margot" best predicted this for her.

"She'll be so heartily sick of it all, she'll wish herself at the bottom of the sea," they said when she went to Downing Street.

"I have to wear a hat, or, at any rate, keep my head covered when I play golf," she remarked, "and if there's one thing I dislike when I play it is to do this. It takes away half the pleasure of the game. And all the weary bores one has to be civil to if you are the wife of the Prime Minister! And you have to put the brake on your tongue all the time."

Interesting Group of Islands.

The Maldive Islands in the Indian Ocean are very little known. They are atolls, or groups of coral islets, and are situated 400 miles west of Ceylon. Of the latter crown colony of Great Britain they are a dependency, having over them a sultan who pays allegiance to and receives the protection of the Ceylon Government. The inhabitants number about 30,000 and profess the Mohammedan religion. Their chief industry is catching and salting fish for the Ceylon market, the [illegible] of cured and salted fish to Ceylon amounting to about 200,000 hundredweight a year, valued at about $500,000. Cocoanuts are grown on the islands and a considerable quantity of copra is sent to Ceylon to be exported with Ceylon copra to other countries.

AGONY ON OPERATING TABLE

Did Not Remove Stone In Bladder GIN PILLS Passed it.

JOLIETTE, P. Q. CANADA.

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone In The Bladder. He decided on an operation and was assisted by another doctor. They said the calculus was larger than a bean and too hard to crush and they could not take it out.

I returned home suffering greatly and did not know what to do but was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS. I bought a box and found relief from the pain at once. I took a second and third box of GIN PILLS after which I went back to the specialist. He told me the calculus was reduced in size, still he could not relieve me of it although he tried for two and a half hours.

I returned home again and continued to take GIN PILLS as they reduced the pain very much, but I did not expect that they would relieve me of the stone but to my great joy, I passed the stone on October 3rd., and am now a well man and very happy.

I am sending the stone in to you so that you can see for yourself what a great work GIN PILLS did for me. GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did so much for me, I will recommend them all the rest of my life."

J. ALBERT LESSARD.

What glorious news to those who are almost going insane from the pain of Stone In The Bladder! Here is ease and comfort! Here is relief! Here is a certain means of getting rid of the stone without being cut to pieces by the knives of a surgeon. GIN PILLS dissolve Stone or Gravel in Kidneys or Bladder because GIN PILLS are the greatest solvent for uric acid the world has ever known.

If your trouble is like Mr. Lessard's, follow his example and take GIN PILLS. Money refunded if they fail to give relief. At all dealers, 50c a box—6 for $2.50. Sample free if you write us, mentioning this paper.

Galvanized Into Galvani.

"Shortly after Galvani's invention came out he visited America and with a letter of introduction called upon Dr. Doane, medical officer of the Bank of New York," writes a correspondent of the London Chronicle. "He found the family in distress at the death of the infant son. Galvani asked to be allowed to try his battery. The child revived, was christened Galvani Doane and is probably alive today. At any rate, he was three or four years ago. His father was a cousin of Longfellow."

Schools of Honor.

If there is a place in our land where a boy stands on his own merits, both in his preliminary examination for entrance and in his subsequent work, it is at West Point or Annapolis. These are our schools of honor, and honor of a nation or an individual was never placed in safer hands than in the authorities of these two schools.—From a Speech by Representative Miller of Minnesota in House.

LEAL—HORR.

A very pretty wedding took place at the First M. E. Church, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when Miss Eda Louisa daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Horr of 313 West Second street, became the bride of Mr. Ernest E. Leal of Tweed, Ont. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Jabez Stallwood, pastor of that church. Mrs Steeper presided at the organ. The bride was prettily attired in white embroidered net over white silk and carried a bridal bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid also wore white net over white silk and carried pink roses. The bride was attended by Miss Clara Belle Sheridan, while Mr. Harold E. Leal, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful lavalliere set with diamonds. The gift to the bridesmaid was a gold brooch set with pearls and to the groom's attendant was a set of gold cuff links.

After the ceremony a wedding reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

The happy couple left on the 9.15 train for a bridal trip to Oxford, Maine. Their many friends extend hearty congratulations. The bride's travelling suit was tan voile with picture hat. Among the guests were Mrs. Leal and Mr. Harold Leal, of Peterborough, Ont., mother and brother of the groom.—From Oswego Times, Sept. 22th.

The reception to be given by the Women's Teacher's Guild to the new teachers in the city has been postponed from Monday until Tuesday evening. It will be held in the kindergarten room of the old Collegiate building. A cordial invitation is extended to all the women teachers in the city.

An interesting "Musicale" was given last night by Mrs. Lloyd, on King street, to a number of musicians in the city. The impromptu program comprised numbers from standard operas and glees, both vocal and instrumental. Some music in lighter vein was also performed. Lunch was daintily served at 11 p. m., and a pleasant gathering broke up shortly afterwards. It is to be hoped that these gatherings will be frequently held.

Mr. T. D. Adams, of Toronto, is in the city.

Mr. Leo Skyworth, of Lindsay, is a guest at the White House.

Messrs. A. B. Rutherford, R. Wright and E. E. Melden, of Montreal, are among the visitors in the city.

J. B. Pearce, Esq., postmaster of Norwood, was on Wednesday a visitor at the home of Mr. Alexander Edmonds, Stewart street.

Mr. Harold Morrow, of the Royal Bank, has been transferred to the Kingston branch. He leaves for Kingston on Monday.

OLDEST RESIDENTS OBSERVE THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Trotter, celebrated their golden wedding on the 21st, says the Bobcaygeon Independent. The family at one time consisting of eleven, is now seven, three sons and four daughters, but they are so scattered over the continent, that the eldest daughter, Mrs. Cotillier, was the only one who could be present to personally congratulate her parents. They were married in 1863, at Dunsford, by Rev. Mr. Patterson, the old Presbyterian minister. At that time there was just one vehicle outside of ox sleighs and jumpers, and as that was not available the young couple walked to Dunsford, and were brought back by boat from the Scotch line. They at once took up residence in Bobcaygeon, and have remained here since, being now the oldest continuous residents in the village. They are much respected and esteemed, and their host of old friends wish them a continuance of their autumn days, accompanied by all the enjoyments that life can give.

NO MORE DRY SWEEPING; SPITTING IS PROHIBITED

Prosecution Will Follow, When By-laws Are Violated

Any one found guilty of dry sweeping on the sidewalks will, upon conviction be subject to a heavy penalty. The restricted area is along George street from Charlotte street to the south side of Brock street, and between Water street on the East side to Aylmer street on the west side between Brock and Charlotte street. Within this area the sidewalks will have to be wet or dampened, and unless this by-law is adhered to, prosecution will follow, as Chief Thompson intends carrying out the by-law.

As soon as the notices prohibiting spitting in public places, or on the streets, are procured and erected, this by-law will also be strictly enforced. The habit of people spitting in public places and on the streets is detrimental to the health of the public.

At the last Board of Health meeting Dr. McPherson was instructed to get prices of signs and report at the next meeting.

Salvation Army.

Very special services are being conducted by Brigadier Hargraves, Young People's Secretary for the Dominion of Canada, assisted by Staff Captain Walton, of Montreal, at the Temple.

The Brigadier is making a tour of the Dominion and has covered east and west and is now doing Ontario and Quebec.

He will no doubt be very interesting and profitable in his addresses on the Sabbath.

Staff Captain Walton is an old officer and friend of Peterborough and all will be glad to see him.

The Harvest Festival effort goes on apace and notwithstanding Adj. McElhoney has been laid aside for a few days, all is going well.

A great sale of harvest festival goods will take place on Monday evening, 29th inst., at the Temple at 8 o'clock.

UNITY OF CHURCHES DR. SYMONDS' APPEAL

Universality the Key-note of Christianity—Co-operation—Peterboro Branch of Church Unity League Inaugurated

Last night in the school room of St. Luke's church, Dr. Symonds of Montreal, gave a lecture on Christian Unity; Rev. F. J. Sawers occupied the chair and there was a good number present.

Rev Dr. Symonds is an enthusiast upon the question of unity of the churches, and indeed the movement as far as it affects the Anglican church in Canada owes its inception and its promulgation to his advocacy.

UNIVERSALITY.

The lecturer began by emphasizing the note of universality in the New Testament. The key-note of christianity was struck in the words of its divine founder; "God so loved the world." The central teaching of the christian religion was the brotherhood of mankind.

But it was not sufficient to have spiritual unity here in Canada, there must be some kind of external expression of unity. Mankind is one, because the Father is one.

That was the theoretical side, but he wanted to deal with the practical side. Dr. Symonds went on to speak of the modern tendency to universality of thought and action. The world is smaller to-day on account of rapid means of communication and transit. The many nations of the world are coming to understand each other and work together. The word "heathen" is fast dying out and our missionaries are coming to respect the good that is in some of what it is stigmatized as heathenism and hold up the gospel to them as something better. The word "foreign" is another term that will have to go.

THE CITY.

The growth of the city is another phase of modern life which calls for a closer unity of the forces of religion. There are the Methodist, the Presbyterians and the Anglican all working side by side among the people, and one does not know what the other is doing. Whereas if they could by some means co-operate they would be able to cover the whole of the community. The Laymen's Missionary movement is an example of what might be done among ministers by the unity of effort.

SERMONS IN A SACK.

Whatever differences may have existed in the past in theology these are all removed. If you were to put all the sermons that were preached in Toronto in one week into a sack and shake them up any minister of either of the churches could take one at random and preach it, so far as doctrine was concerned.

The old grounds of division have disappeared. There may be different types of worship said the lecturer even as there are different kinds of food for different tastes. Variety is not opposed to unity of unity of council and operation.

Competition may be good in business, but the spirit of co-operation is coming more into the business world, and co-operation is the true note of Christianity. An army that is divided is useless; there may be different regiments, but if those regiments do not work together with a common purpose, no organized and effective work is accomplished.

DIVERSITIES.

St. Paul has said, "Now there are diversities of gifts, but one spirit." It was for the purpose of bringing all these Christian forces into one united campaign in the world that the Church Unity League was formed. Three hundred clergymen in Canada had put their name to the movement. It was true that they had not received much encouragement from the Bishops, but the majority of these were not opposed to its object, but did not quite see and agree with the form and means of carrying it on.

"We are not doing anything underhand," said Dr Symonds. "We intend to go on, to get out literature on the question, and I hope that every member of this church and other Anglican churches in the city will join the League. We have already established a branch in Port Hope and I want Peterborough to be the next."

SACRIFICE.

This movement will mean some sacrifice, but self-sacrifice is necessary where higher good is to be secured.

The lecturer finished with a quiet but eloquent appeal for all to take up this work which was to bring about the fulfilment of the prayer of our Lord—"I pray that they all may be one—that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me."

BUSINESS.

The meeting then got to business and it was unanimously agreed to start a Peterborough branch of the League.

Rev. Canon Davidson was nominated Hon. President; Rev. F. J. Sawers, M.A., President; Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A., Vice-President. Mr. Frank Dawson was appointed Secretary-Treasurer.

A large number of names were taken by the secretary at the close and the second branch of the Church Unity League may be said to be well started.

The League is confined in its membership to members of the Church of England. But this is not out of any spirit of narrowness or exclusiveness, but rather the opposite as it is believed that this is the most practical way of promulgating the ideals of the League among their own people.

A SUGGESTION.

Dr. Symonds deserves the support of all broad-minded churchmen, and if the other churches wish to co-operate from their side they can do so by forming Church Unity Leagues among themselves. This may not be a new suggestion, but it is one which we offer to the other churches as a result of last night's lecture.

"THE PINK LADY"

"The Pink Lady," which won enormous success in New York City, and was also well received in London will be presented at the Grand next Friday, Oct. 3, under the management of John C. Fisher and B. D. Stevens, who announce that they will offer the original production, which was on view so long at the New Amsterdam Theatre in New York. It was after the success of "The Pink Lady" in America that it was produced in England and met with favor at the Globe Theatre, London.

In its original form, "The Pink Lady" was a French farce written by Georges Berr and Marcel Guillemaud and was made into an English musical comedy by C. M. S. McLellan, who provided the book and lyrics and Ivan Caryll, who composed the music.

"The Pink Lady" is rich in catchy and popular musical numbers. Among the more famous are "I'm Going to be Married in June," "When Love Goes Astraying," "The Girl by the Saskatchewan," "The Kiss Waltz," "Donny Did, Donny Didn't," "Hide and Seek" and of course the one number which has been heard every place, the waltz song "Beautiful Lady."

The company which is brought by Messrs. Fisher and Stevens, is one of the largest organizations travelling and is made up of clever comedian singers, and dancers, not forgetting a goodly array of chorus girls.

Among the principals are Olga De Baugh, Georgia Harvey, James McElhern, Elsa Von Bosch, Louise Kay, Abbott Adams, Mortimer Meyer, Chas. J. Hines, Russell Lennon, Alfred Derry, Alice Moffatt, Jack Ryan, Lucie Carter and Jack Hall. 51

MURDERERS CAUGHT AND LYNCHED

Three White Men, Three Negro Men and a Negro Woman Are Murdered by Walter and Will Jones at Harriston, Miss.

HARRISTON, Miss., Sept. 29.—Two drug-crazed mulatto boys, brothers, began a reign of murder here yesterday morning that ended only after three white men, three negro men and a negro woman had been killed. Twenty persons were wounded and the two boys lynched. A serious clash between the races was prevented by the arrival on a special train of a company of National Guardsmen from Natchez.

The trouble started about two o'clock Sunday morning and continued intermittently until 10 o'clock, when Walter Jones, the elder of the two boys who started the firing, was lynched just as the soldiers arrived. His brother, Will Jones, had been shot and killed by citizens earlier in the day. Citizens of the town who had barricaded themselves in their homes then began to emerge, and by noon the town was quiet. No more trouble is feared.

The dead are: Sheriff G. B. Hammett of Jefferson County, white; former Constable Frank Keinstly, white; Claude Freeman, white, of Fayette, Miss.; Johanna Aiken, Tom Weeks, Jesse Thompson and Thead Grayson, negroes, killed during promiscuous shooting.

The shooting was started by Walter Jones, aged 20, in the negro quarter, when the negro woman and Thead Grayson were shot and killed. Walter then went to the home of his mother and aroused his 10-year-old brother. Together they proceeded through the main street of the little town, firing at everyone in sight. Citizens, aroused from their slumber by the shots, peered out of the windows and then hastened to cover, believing that riots of more serious proportions had broken out.

The boys went to the home of former Constable Frank Keinstly, and when he responded to their calls to come out, he was shot through the head by Walter Jones. Keinstly's son William saw his father fall and reached for a gun, but before he could fire he received a bullet in both of his hands.

The Yazoo and Mississippi Valley depot is near the Keinstly home, and the two negroes walked in that direction. A train had arrived from Natchez just a few moments before and Conductor E. B. Appleby was standing at the station talking to Flagman W. C. Bond. Without warning the two negroes fired on them and both fell. Then the negroes directed their fire at Claude Freeman, who was waiting for a train to take him to his home at Fayette, Miss. He was instantly killed. The negroes then fired into the train, terrorizing the passengers.

A sleeping car from Natchez is left every night at Harriston until the through train from Memphis to New Orleans arrives. After the train from Natchez had departed this car was a target for the fire of the two negroes.

With the bloodlust at the highest pitch, the negroes made their way to a cotton-seed house nearby. Frightened citizens by this time had telephoned for Sheriff Hammett at Fayette. Sheriff Hammett, heavily armed, started for the seed house, whereupon Walter Jones went to the tall grass nearby and as Hammett approached, the negro fired, killing him instantly.

By this time the countryside had been aroused and the farmers came pouring in from every direction. A general fusillade of shots was directed at the seed house. A call was sent to Governor Brewer for troops.

Finding his hiding place too precarious, Will Jones started to run toward a coal chute nearby, but had gone only a few steps when a bullet ended his life. A rope was placed around his body, it was strung up to a telegraph pole near the station and became a target for everyone not shooting at the seedhouse.

Soon after, Will Jones was killed, Walter Jones picked Tom Weeks, a negro, off the coal chute by his deadly aim. Weeks fell to the ground dead.

Not long after Weeks was killed, the special train bearing the Natchez National Guardsmen, arrived. While the soldiers were detraining, the crowd rushed the seed house.

Not a shot greeted them, and as the leaders went into the place with drawn weapons, they found Walter Jones completely unnerved, but not injured. As the negro was drawn up the rope broke and the negro's body fell to the ground. Not a word of protest came from Jones when a larger rope was drawn about his neck and his body pulled up.

OUTBREAK AT LISBON

Canadian Press Despatch.

LISBON, Sept. 29—Resistance to the arrest of a number of political suspects at Terres Vedras to-day resulted in troops being called out when eight men were killed, twenty-two were wounded and many arrests were made.

The government has suppressed all hostile newspapers and syndicalists have decided on a general strike within the next twenty-four hours.

PAPER IS BLAMED.

Faithful Must Not Read Godfrey Langlois' Le Pays.

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—By a mandement read yesterday at high mass in the Roman Catholic churches, Archbishop Bruchesi placed a ban on Le Pays, the French weekly newspaper, edited and published by Godfrey Langlois, M.P.P., for St. Louis division, Montreal.

Mr. Langlois has been conducting an active campaign for educational reform in Quebec, and the attitude of his paper has been regarded as anticlerical. The ban of the church means that the faithful are forbidden to read the paper.

NEARLY ASKED FOR REPEAL

Labor Congress Decided for Continuance of Lemieux Act

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—For the third consecutive year the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress has been dragged into a controversy over the Lemieux Act and this year narrowly escaped asking for its repeal.

During Saturday morning's session a resolution that the act be repealed was rushed through to passage upon the recommendations of the resolutions committee.

Several minutes later Secretary Draper found that the resolution had been passed, and he moved that it be again put to the council. Scarcely had he commenced his argument when Delegate Miller, of Toronto, appealed from the decision of the chair in recalling the resolution. The chair was sustained, and Secretary Draper once more started out to urge the retention of the Lemieux Act. He explained that the present Government had practically promised they would listen to suggested amendments to the act and enact these so far as advisable, but would not repeal the measure.

Vice-President Bancroft finally construed the section to mean that the repeal of the act was asked, only if amendments were refused.

The final resolution dealt with by the congress was the one recommending that the resignation of Hon. T. W. Crothers be asked for. The committee recommended non-concurrence. "While the work of the Minister has been unsatisfactory as a whole," said Mr. Rigg, "we feel that we cannot recommend concurrence in this resolution."

The report of the committee was adopted without discussion.

The congress in 1914 will be held in St. John, N.B.

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—During Saturday afternoon session of the trades and labor congress, the election of officers was held, resulting in the re-election of President Watters of Vancouver, Vice-President Bancroft of Toronto and Secretary-Treasurer Draper, of Ottawa.

Ballots had to be taken on the Ontario and Quebec executives, as the caucuses held in the morning had not resulted in a manner entirely satisfactory to all the delegates from those provinces. The results follow:

Saskatchewan: Vice-President, W. Rigg, Winnipeg; and Delegates Rember, McGill and McGrath as executive.

Ontario— Vice-President, T. Patt of Toronto; and Delegates Ricketts, Parker and Urry as executive.

Quebec— Vice-President J. T. Foster of Montreal; and Delegates Arcand, Lesperance and Brunet as executive.

Nova Scotia— Vice-President, J. P. Joy of Halifax; and Delegates McLelland, Quinlan and Brooks as executive.

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—While opposed on principle to union men belonging to the militia because it is always called out in case of strikes, and sometimes used against the men, the Trades Congress Saturday morning showed it was not prepared to go any further than it did the day before, when it simply approved of the action of certain international unions which forbid members joining the militia.

The Resolution Committee this morning refused to endorse a series of recommendations which attempted to bind Congress to pass a by-law compelling unions to expel their members if they did belong to the militia. The action of the committee was endorsed by a large majority, although one Montreal delegate regretted the recommendations could not be accepted, and he told of the humiliating, not to say horrifying experiences, when as a member of the militia, he was called out during a dock strike, and with ball cartridges in a pouch, had been ready to shoot down his fellow worker, who was merely demanding his rights.

WILL GO TO PRISON.

New York Reformer Wants To See What It's Like.

AUBURN, N.Y., Sept. 29.—Thomas Mott Osborne, chairman of the State Commission for Prison Reform, yesterday announced to the convicts in Auburn prison that he will begin to serve a self-imposed sentence among them to-day for the purpose of studying the effect of discipline, food, labor and the general system on a convict's mind.

Mr. Osborne will enter the prison to-day as a new convict, will go through the routine, such as being taken for a bath, a session with the prison barber and the prison tailor, and will have to go through the same grind as a convicted felon.

In reply to a question, Mr. Osborne said he was ready to take all his medicine and would not balk at the dungeon, should his conduct at any time justify his incarceration in that place. The sentence will be indeterminate, but will not be less than a week. The results of the study will be embodied in a report to be made by the commissioner that is now studying reform with a view toward legislation next year.

MOVED TO ASYLUM.

Mrs. Taylor Is Taken From Cornwall Jail To Brockville.

CORNWALL, Sept. 29.—Mrs. Taylor, the Montreal woman who shot her daughter and granddaughter at Alexandria on Sunday, Sept. 21, while in a state of unsound mind, and then turned the revolver on herself, was removed from her quarters in the Cornwall Jail on Saturday and taken to the Brockville Asylum, in charge of a nurse and attendant from the asylum.

Sheriff Mack received instructions from E. R. Rogers, inspector of prisons and asylums, to deliver the woman to the asylum authorities. Mrs. Taylor was brought to Cornwall last week and was fortunate in the fact that the fall assizes were in progress at the time or she would have been detained here until the January sittings of the court. Mr. Justice Britton pronounced the order for her committal to an asylum.

GEN. DIAZ IS RECALLED

Former Mexican President Invited Home by Huerta

It Is Expected That He Will Become Head of the War College and Direct Operations Against the Revolutionists—Col. de la Fuente Is Named as Liberal-Republican Candidate For Presidency.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 29.—Gen Porfirio Diaz, ex-President of Mexico was requested Saturday by the Huerta Administration to return to his Republic and re-enter the service of his country. The general is in France. He sent a reply from Biarritz in which he asked the Minister of War to defer further action pending receipt of a letter which he was sending to that official.

It is believed in this capital that the return of ex-President Diaz has been asked for the purpose of making him president of the war college to be established here. The college will be composed of the elder division generals of the army, and will devote itself to directing general moves in the campaign.

A rumor that Porfirio Diaz soon would be recalled to Mexico was circulated here on the arrival of Gen. Geronimo Trevino several weeks ago. It was stated at that time that if Gen. Diaz should decline to preside over the war college Gen. Trevino would be invited to take the post.

Diaz Hasn't Heard.

BIARRITZ, France, Sept. 29.—Gen. Porfirio Diaz, the ex-President of Mexico, declared Saturday that he had received no communication from the Mexican War Department recalling him for service. He expressed the opinion that any report regarding his recall must have arisen through confusing him with Gen. Felix Diaz.

The ex-President said he would remain here until the middle of October.

Third Man Running.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 29.—Colonel David de la Feunte, former Minister of Communications and Public Works in Gen. Huerta's Cabinet, has been put forward as Presidential candidate by the so-called Liberal-Republican party. This makes the third nomination for Presidential honors.

The Liberal-Republican candidacy was first offered to Gen. Aurelio Blanquet, the Minister of War, but was declined by him with the assertion that he was not ambitious to enter the race and would not accept the candidacy of any party. Dr. Gregorio Mendizabel, a former Senator was named for the vice-presidency with Col. de la Fuente. Both have accepted.

The naming of this new ticket is not generally regarded as a matter of great political importance, since the speech of influence of the Liberal Republicans is confined to the capital and neither candidate has any great following.

The party has no definite organization, but consists chiefly of the adherents of a group of Congressmen who constitute a wing of the opposition in the Chamber of Deputies to the Catholic party.

Lively interest is centred in the latest development of the internal situation, the announcement of the recall to Mexico of the ex-President Gen. Porfirio Diaz, coupled with Gen Huerta's announcement to the Mexican diplomats abroad that the revolution has finally been suppressed. It has given rise to all sorts of speculation, the chief line of which is to the effect that the ex-President would be asked to resume his place in the army so that his services would be available for the war council in the event of a general outbreak of hostilities.

WASHERS FOR DOLLARS.

Sixty-One Millions Must Be Counted To Discover Thefts.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The United States mint at San Francisco has been robbed, although it is believed the amount is small. Treasury officials Saturday confirmed reports of thefts from the coinage plant on the Pacific coast. It will require a dollar-to-dollar count of the $61,000,000 of silver stored there to discover the exact loss.

Only $7 has been found to be missing up to this time, but the circumstances indicate that the sum will be increased. George E. Roberts, director of the mint, said undoubtedly that there had been a scheme of "petty pilfering," but he was confident no great amount had been stolen. The stealing, he added, was from the great stack of silver dollars stored in bags containing $1,000 each. In a few of these bags it was found that one or two dollars had been taken, and iron washers substituted.

EXPLORERS SAFE

American Party Not Killed by Cannibals as Was Reported

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—According to a telegram received here yesterday by P. R. Perkins of this city, the four scientists who were reported killed by cannibals in German New Guinea, are safe on Murray Island off the coast of Australia.

Dr. Aldred H. Mayer of Carnegie Institution, Washington, was in charge of the party, which left last July for coral investigations in Torres Straits. Others of the party are Dr. David Hill Tennent of Bryn Mawr College; Dr. F. Newton Hardy of Princeton and Dr. H. L. Clark of Harvard.

Dr. Hardy is a brother of Mrs. P. R. Perkins. Her husband interested the State Department in a search for traces of the party and was rewarded Saturday by the receipt of the following message:

New Model Monoplane.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—A Santos-Dumont, one of the pioneers in aviation, has constructed a monoplane on a new model, which was tested Saturday at Villacoublay, with excellent results. It demonstrated its exceptional ability. A peculiarity of the Santos-Dumont monoplane is that the body hangs nearly three feet below a long single wing.

Warning To the Too Sanguine.

BERLIN, Sept. 29—Concerning the new cancer remedy discovered by Prof. Hahn, known as radium-mesothorium, Prof. Brauer, the chief surgical authority in Hamburg, issues a warning against the purchase of this new substitute for pure radium at the present enhanced prices. More than one hundred cases of cancer have been treated with mesothorium, and with few exceptions there has been no recurrence of the disease after eighteen months.

Prof. Brauer considers that, though plenty of cases are recorded as cured, there is danger that the mesothorium craze may equal the popularity of tuberculin and perhaps result in similar disappointments.

Dr. Wm. J. Beattie Killed.

MANCHESTER, N.H., Sept. 29.—Dr. William J. Beattie, who introduced the Piorkowsky turtle serum cure for tuberculosis from Germany a few months ago, was killed yesterday afternoon at his home in Littleton, N.H. The doctor crossed the street in front of the Crawford Hotel to pay a professional call, when an automobile hit him a fatal blow.

Dr Beattie was one of the leading doctors of the state. He headed the Roosevelt ticket in the Presidetnial primary here a year ago, and after the election went to Germany to study the tuberculosis treatment.

MOVEMENT CRITICIZED

Employers' Defence Union Unfortunate Say Many

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The formation of the employers of the United Kingdom into a defence union is the subject of considerable criticism from the point of view of both employer and employee.

Some employers, like Sir Benjamin Browne, the engineer and shipbuilder, doubt the wisdom and usefulness of the proposal of a general agreement, and think that the leaders of the movement should make is perfectly clear that they are not undertaking to attack what is understood by the phrase "legitimate trades unionism."

With the proposed guarantee fund of £50,000,000 one might have supposed that all the great employers of labor in the country had decided to take common action with those who had "approved" the formation of the union. This is far from the case. The names of those approving include the Duke of Bedford, Lord Avebury, Lord Dysart, Sir P. Magnus, Prof. Flinders Petrie, Prof. E. C. Clark and Sir John Bingham, but there is an entire absence of the heads of the huge industrial concerns of the country, of men representative of the great railway companies, of the large colliery undertakings, and of the all-important ship-building industry.

What action trades unionism will take in the matter is not yet known, but the London Trades Council will meet specially in early October to consider the situation created by the new movement.

Commercial circles in London do not welcome the employers' combination, the general view being that at the particular moment it is most unfortunate.

POPE UNWELL

The Pontiff's Health is Giving Rise to Anixety

ROME, Sept. 29.—The condition of Pope Pius X. is giving rise to some anxiety. Although not suffering from any specific malady, the state of his health is unsatisfactory. It is believed, however, that rest and time will restore him unless some unforeseen complications arise.

Audiences have not been officially suspended, but the attending physicians have agreed to discourage receptions of any kind until the pontiff has entirely recovered his strength. In view of his present weakness, it is not considered probable that the Pope will preside, as originally arranged, at the great function at the closing of the Constantinian jubilee on Dec. 8, the feast of the Immaculate Conception.

Plans Tax-Payers' Suit.

CONCORD, N.H., Sept. 29.—In order to bring about his legal removal to Pennsylvania, in the event that the request of the New York authorities for his extradition is denied by Governor Felker, a taxpayer's suit against the State of New York is planned by Harry K. Thaw.

Thaw said Saturday that a report had reached him from New York that William T. Jerome intended to take no further steps in the case here if the executive refused to grant extradition. Replying to the suggestion that this might necessitate his permanent residence in New Hampshire, Thaw said he was confident that a tax-payer's suit to prevent further expense to New York, on account of a citizen of another state would bring about his legal removal to his home state.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—While it is evident that the English leaders of both parties are in a conciliatory mood toward the home rule question, it is also evident that the Irish leaders are not. John E. Redmond, in two speeches at Cahirciveen, County Kerry, Ireland, yesterday gave a calm but uncompromising answer to Sir Edward Carson's defiance.

The Irish Nationalist leader met with a warm reception and was presented with addresses by the Kerry County Council, the district council, and other bodies. He ridiculed the Ulster Provisional Government and Sir Edward Carson's army, and declared that the home rule cause had won.

Mr. Redmond has made an offer to Sir Edward Carson to discuss with him every provision of the Home Rule Act and to meet the needs and desires of Ulster, if the Ulster leader would concede the principle of a local Parliament for Ireland.

Answering this offer, Sir Edward Carson has telegraphed to The Daily Express announcing his willingness to discuss any measure for the improvement of the existing government of Ireland, provided she retains her position under the Imperial Parliament.

Services were held yesterday in many of the churches throughout Ulster, representing the Church of Ireland and the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational, in commemoration of Ulster Day, when the Home Rule covenant was signed. Sir Edward Carson attended services in Belfast.

The Presbyterian preacher, Rev. Mr. Patterson, said that if King George had been present at Saturday's review he might have said that he was not afraid of Germany or any other country so long as he had these Belfast fellows at his back.

Three thousand Protestants paraded and held services in Liverpool.

The impression in London to-day is that the conference which Premier Asquith is holding at Brodick Bay, Scotland, with David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, and Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Agricutlure, concerns the Chancellor's proposed land campaign, since the Minister of Agriculture is participating, while the Chief Secretary for Ireland, Augustin Birrell, is absent. The Cabinet's hands are really tied in the matter of a compromise, as the Nationalists, under John Redmond, have voted for all the important Cabinet measures under the agreement that they be repaid by the passage of the home rule bill. Therefore, it is doubtful if any conference can find a basis for agreement.

After the review of Sir Carson's army Saturday, a party of Nationalists pulled a small Union Jack from an automobile, and one of the occupants shot a boy in the leg.

Volunteers Parade.

BELFAST, Sept. 29.—Fourteen battalions of Ulster volunteers, comprising 11,000 men of the "No-home-rule army," marched through the streets of Belfast Saturday, with colors flying and bands playing, and received a rousing reception from the citizens of the northern Irish capital.

Besides the four Belfast regiments, each of them commanded by a retired army or militia officer, the "Ulster war staff," consisting of General Sir George Richardson, two retired colonels and two retired captains paraded. The volunteers were armed with dummy rifles, as the carrying of firearms by unlicensed persons is prohibited in the British Isles.

Fully 20,000 spectators, drawn from all parts of the north of Ireland taxed the capacity of the review ground, where the army was drawn up for inspection under the command of General Richardson.

Hope To See Conference.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Sept. 29.—The Rt. Hon. Alexander Ure, Lord Advocate for Scotland, addressing his constituents Saturday, referred to the Ulster question. He said that the proposed Provisional Government would be treated by the banks in the same way they would treat a South American republic and would collapse of its own weight in a few weeks.

Regarding the suggested conference of the political parties, he said that provided the principle of home rule was accepted by their political opponents, the Government would be willing to enter the conference and ready to negotiate upon the question of greater representation for Ulster in the Irish Parliament. They would so listen favorably to proposals giving Ulster absolute control of its education and religious affairs. They would have it put into words so as to remove all doubt and timidity on the part of the Ulster people. He rejoiced to observe indications, which he hoped would be stronger next week in the direction of a conference for a friendly compromise.

Change of Venue Is Given.

NANAIMO, B.C., Sept. 29.—Attorney W. I. Rubinowitz, Walter Pryde and W. H. Moore, committed by Magistrate Simpson on Friday afternoon on a charge of picketing and thereby intimidating Sam Davies, a workman, appeared before Judge Barker in chambers Saturday morning and elected to take jury trials. The accused will likely be tried in New Westminster, as a change of venue has been granted in all the jury trials in cases arising out of the labor troubles in this district.

The Daily Review.

MONDAY, SEPT. 29, 1913.

THE BASIS OF AGREEMENT

The Hamilton Spectator sees what we have seen and mentioned before in this column, that the Borden Naval Bill was not without its effect upon German Naval tactics, despite the temporary hindrance by the Senate of the Government's intention.

Europe knows, as well as every loyal Canadian knows, that Canada's hand and heart are firm and warm in support of the British Empire, whether on land or sea. These differences which prevail and tend to obscure the inner unity of both political parties, while they are unfortunate, they are inevitable. Canada is loyal to a man. Some do not gush about it, while others are so eager lest they offend the Motherland that they would sing Rule Britannia on every possible and impossible occasion.

What Britain requires is not gush, nor long-winded assurances of loyalty, but practical co-operations. This is the only expression of loyalty that is of any value either to Canada individually or to the Empire as a whole.

The difficulty is as to the form or method of this co-operation. We all desire to co-operate, or rather to continue to co-operate, for the Empire has been built up by the co-operation of the nations of which it is composed.

It would be much better if the naval question could be settled outside of party politics. But this can never be done while the Liberal party is so imperative and autocratic in its demand for a cut and dried naval policy. What is wanted is naval defence, not policy. The naval policy of 1909 proved to be only a policy and nothing more. It was an effort to do something big, to walk before we crept, and we fell down and looked foolish in the eyes of the world.

The nationhood of Canada is not established by putting two ships on the Atlantic or the Pacific, and calling them a "navy." That is only playing at nations.

The first thing to consider is: who is defending Canada at this present moment? The second is: who is paying for this defence?

The answer to the first question is: the British navy. The answer to the second is: the inhabitants of the British Isles.

If then we are under the naval care of the British Government, surely the only decent and honest thing to do is to consult with our defenders as to the best means of relieving them of their burden, and at the same time of making good our boast of nationhood.

We are not in a position to be saucy. If the British navy went to smash, we would be on a par with Fiji, so far as nationhood is concerned.

Let all parties acknowledge these facts and there will be some basis for agreement, and we will be in a fair way to a wise and statesmanlike solution of the naval problem.

REPORTERS

Lord Northcliffe's criticism of the Canadian Press has not met with much approval by the Toronto newspapers. The Globe is particularly sarcastic in its references to the great newspaper man's gentle strictures.

His Lordship may be mistaken on certain points because he does not know the Canadian press from personal experience. It may be that the Globe possesses a tribe of short-hand reporters, as it asserts, but a knowledge of shorthand is not so indispensible a qualification with Canadian reporters as it is with English.

We are inclined to agree with the Ottawa Free Press that shorthand is not an unmixed blessing with reporters. It is a mechanical gift or acquirement and may be learnt by persons who have absolutely no journalistic instinct.

If it is combined with this instinct it is certainly an advantage, if it can be used without hampering the mental freedom of the reporter. There is nothing so boresome as mechanical journalism. You might as well sit down and read a blue book as read a newspaper that is compiled by a stenographer.

The personal touch, even though a man may have some kind of mental impediment, is essential to touching the persons who read the newspaper. If ninety-nine per cent of the speeches or sermons that are delivered extempore in these days were taken down and printed verbatim the public would not read them, and the speakers and preachers themselves would lose some of their conceit.

Some speakers are easier to report than others. The bane of every reporter is the man who will not stick to his text, and who harks back upon what he has already said, and does not marshall his facts and his argument and march straightforward to his goal.

There was a report the other day in the Review of a speech by a well known gentleman. The same speech was reported in the Examiner at greater length. The Review's report was misty enough, but that of our contemporary was thick fog.

Readers may have supposed that these two reporters were drunk at the meeting. But the truth is they were both very sober. The reason for the fog and mist was that they both tried to give a faithful account of what the speaker actually said, and the most faithful of the two reporters suffered because he wandered further into the fog of words than the other.

What every reporter should cultivate is not an ear for words, but a "nose for news," the faculty of absorbing or grasping and representing ideas. Public speaking is more of a fine art in England that it is in this country, and reporters in Canada are more to be pitied than criticized.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A workman on a staging in Paris sneezed. The sneeze made him drop a stone, the stone dashed a man's brains out, and the man's falling body dislodged four other workmen who occupied lower stagings. This fatal sneeze occurred fifty years ago and the item is reproduced from the Globe of September 1863.

The Review has just received a clipping from the Manitoba Free Press of an editorial in which the editor is not at all complimentary to our views on Canadian Nationhood. Let it be confessed here that we do not pose as being the receptacle of all the wisdom and foresight of the ages. We may be wrong. The editorial appearing above on "The Basis of Agreement" may make our point clearer. It was written without the slightest knowledge of what the Manitoba paper had said, for we do not get the Free Press these days in our exchanges. We hope the disintegration we prophesied has not already begun!

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

That the new Government elevator at Port Arthur would be handling grain by Oct. 10, was the statement made by the Grain Commission.

The British steamer Tyrone, from Liverpool for San Francisco, is ashore off Otago Head, near Dunedin, and it is feared the vessel will be a total loss.

Fire which is believed to have been of incendiary origin swept the principal business block at New Straitsville, Ohio, Saturday. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

Deputy Henri Chas. Etienne Dujardin-Beaumetz, for many years Under Secretary of State for Fine Arts in the French Cabinet, died at Limoux, Saturday at the age of 61.

Information from a good source warrants the belief that a Franco-Spanish military convention will be signed in Madrid on the occasion of President Poincare's visit to Spain.

The remains of Major Cready, a laborer, who resided on Albion street, were found on the G.T.R. main line four miles west of Brantford, Saturday afternoon by a section man. His skull was knocked off.

King Constantine of Greece conferred for a considerable time Saturday with Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, on the situation in the Turkish Province of Thrace and in Albania, where a third war is in prospect.

Elizabeth Taylor, 16 years old, was killed Saturday while trying to escape from the House of the Good Shephard, a place of detention for unruly girls at Newark, N.J. She leaped for the clothesline, missed it, and fell to her death.

The authorities, acting upon instructions received from Sheriff Ross, are refusing to allow anyone to see Taylor, the murderer of the Dawson boy, awaiting trial in the Brantford county jail. Exception will be made in the case of Ensign Trickey of the Salvation Army, his spiritual adviser.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUT OF THE DEPTH

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—The sermon by Mr. Webb in the Baptist Church tries to find fault with what was said at the church at the Consecration. Now, no matter how kind Mr. Webb feels he makes mistakes. The Catholic Church and Clergy can make no mistakes, so what is the good of a man who makes mistakes finding fault with men who can make none. The father thanked all who had helped to make the procession and ceremony of respect a success, and thanked the Aldermen. He refers to and made special mention of the Mayor, for what the Mayor did was like the city recognizing the Church and the papal delegate. It was good and true. So Mr Webb cannot find fault with that. St. Paul did not speak in English, so what is Mr. Webb kicking about? Latin is a language and does not change like English, and never will change. That is why is is used, and so in science works. Mr. Webb has the ceremony of baptism, but will not let others have their pet ceremonies. Sure one is as good as the other. If the latter killeth and the spirit alone gives life, why insist on water? I think Mr. Webb has gone out of his depth.

Yours,
ONE OF THEM.

STARTLING APPEAL OF FRENCH PAPER.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—We have often heard about Sir Wilfrid Laurier's desire to allay racial feeling in Canada, but I have no hesitation in saying that there never was a time when racial feeling is being appealed to more cunningly and more dangerously than at present and I would call your attention to the following extract from "Le Canada" which is the most important of all the journals in the Proinvce of Quebec standing tor French predominance in Canada. Here is what the Globe reprots that journal's language to be;—

"Le Canada has asked Chateauguay electors the following questions;

Have we to ask ourselves why our influence has come to nothing in Ottawa?

Why has our representation in the Government been reduced?

Why was the portfolio of Public Works taken from us?

Why did we lose the post of Solicitor-General?

Why have we lost positions in the civil service, and even on the Bench?

Why are we losing influence everywhere?

Why is the business of the Transcontinental taken to Toronto instead of Quebec?

Why was Hon. Mr Parent repleaced by Major Leonard.

Why are our compatriots insulted and ill-treated at Ottawa?

Le Canada answers its own questions by saying the victory of September 21, 1911, was a victory against Quebec, which has been made to feel it cruelly ever since.

Nothing can indicate more thoroughly than this the desire of certain classes of French people to rule at Ottawa regardless of the fact that we are all Canadians in common. However, since we see what this powerful journal demands it is a fair warning that no doubt Canadians of all other extractions will take note of.

Yours,
OBSERVER.

Capt. Bernier Is Home.

QUEBEC, Sept. 26.—Spick and span with the British ensign flying from her main topmast as if returning from a pleasure cruise instead of a fifteen months' voyage in the ice floes, the schooner Minnie Maude, commanded by Capt. Bernier of Arctic fame, arrived here yesterday afternoon from the Hudson Bay and other icy localities. The Minnie Maude left here some fifteen months ago, and although she encountered great quantities of ice since, she does not appear to have suffered much, if any, damage from it.

HER FIRST HUSBAND

What Happened to Dipsomaniac Who Tried to Blackmail a True Woman.

By H. M. EGBERT.

The woman stood at the door of the cottage and peered out under her extended hand into the darkness, flecked with specks of light from the street lamps in the mining village. The prospect so far as it could be seen in the light of the setting half moon, was a dreary one. To the right the village extended, a full half mile of shabby frame houses fringing a shabby street. Out of this region came the faint shouts and oaths of the miners as they drank away the contents of their Saturday pay envelopes. To the left the road wound over the flats and marshes in the direction of the factory, and across the river, over which stood the power house. The factory never closed. There the by-products of the coal pits were transformed into aniline dyes and drugs. And there her husband, Edward Chambers, worked as a night inspector.

Presently a knock outside—a faint tap, sounding almost like the peck of a bird upon the telegraph posts that studded the landscape, startled her from the reverie into which she had fallen. She sprang to her feet and stood alert, listening. It sounded again, and cautiously the woman unbarred the door. Outside stood a man.

One glance at his face and she was reeling backward against the wall of the little narrow hall. The man grinned and stepped inside noiselessly. As he did so he removed his hat and glanced round him. The lamp within the parlor drew him as it had drawn the white moths that fluttered upon the cheap table beneath it. He entered. Now it could be seen that he was in the last stage of decrepitude; his clothes hung in loose rags upon his bony frame, and his eyes were the bleared eyes of the dipsomaniac.

"Well, Jane," he said, a little sheepishly, "don't be scared of me, my girl, like you used to be. I ain't drunk now, though I do look like a hobo. I heard you were living here and that your man worked away all night; so I thought there wouldn't be no harm in paying you a friendly visit, Jane, my dear."

The woman had followed him in and now stood facing him on the opposite side of the table, which she had placed instinctively between them.

"What do you want?" she gasped. "Why have you come? Haven't you wronged me enough?" she continued, clenching and unclenching her fists in impotent anger. "Come to the point—what do you want, Jim?"

The man grinned again and sat down. "Well, I must say you ain't over cordial, Jane," he mumbled. "I heard you were here quite by chance—from a mining fellow in the state penitentiary, who was my cell mate. "Ho!' thinks I' 'she used to be my wife. And is, too, for the matter of that, since the knot was never untied,' Say, Jane," he interposed, "what would your man say if he found out that you wasn't his at all?"

"He'd kill us both," she gasped, thinking of her husband's faith in her. That he should ever learn of this was impossible. It must be made impossible for the sake of their baby.

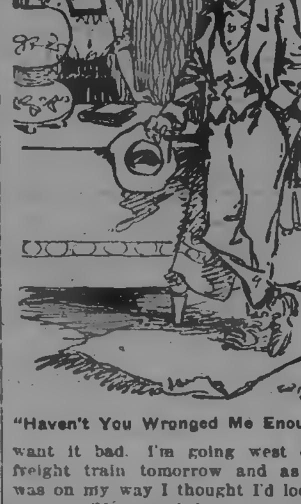
"Well, Jane, I don't want to hurt your feelin's," the tramp grumbled, filling his pipe with a foul-smelling weed which, when lit, diffused a rank aroma through the tiny house. "I ain't saying as I treated you altogether on the level during the six months you and me lived together. Say, why didn't you get a divorce?" he went curiously.

"I couldn't; you know that. I found help in the church when you ill-treated me and left me."

"Ho! Then you're sinning against the church as well as against me," he said tauntingly.

"I'm not sinning in the eyes of God," the woman cried desperately. "I've been a good woman to Ed, and he believes in me. I'm glad I found him—yes, even if I did deceive him and made him think you were dead. And now you've come back. What do you want? Have you just come here to gloat over me? Better not let Ed find you," she said defiantly.

"Well, I'll come to the point, Jane," the man grumbled, somewhat abashed by her outburst. "I want money—



"Haven't You Wronged Me Enough?"

want it bad. I'm going west on a freight train tomorrow and as this was on my way I thought I'd look in on you. How much have you got put away? Come, no lies now. I know you folks don't trust no banks here since the Consolidated bust."

"I haven't a penny," cried the woman desperately.

"Oh, come, Jane," said the man reprovingly. "You was always a good hand to save. Wish I'd stuck to you," he added viciously. "I don't know as I won't take you back yet. But come, now, make it a hundred and I won't never trouble you again."

"A hundred? You're dreaming!"

"Fifty then. Fifty down and fifty to be sent to the postoffice at Denver when I get there. Come, now, ain't your home worth it, Jane?"

"I haven't a penny in the house, Jim," she said trying to assuage him. "Maybe I can let you have twenty-five tomorrow by holding up the furniture man. You see," she faltered, "Ed won't be home with his week's pay till morning."

"Well, if that's all you can let me have I'll have to take it," mumbled the man. "But I'll take the rest, or I'll hound you down, mark my words. Twenty-five tomorrow and seventy-five inside of three months at Denver. Is it a bargain, Jane?"

"Yes," she said helplessly.

"Where'll I meet you? I don't want to show myself in town. That fellow Jones I told you of, my cell mate—he's back here."

"Do you know the maple trees near the first saloon?" she asked. "Well—there. At nine o'clock tomorrow night."

The man shook out the burning ashes of his pipe. In the next room the child, awakened by the evil stench of the tobacco, awoke and cried feebly. Instantly the man was alert.

"Yes, mine. Mine and Ed's," she cried, springing to her feet. She made her way into adjoining room, took the babe in her arms, and began rocking it. The man followed and stood looking at her, still grinning.

"Ho, Jane, you didn't tell me about the kid," he said, as if she had done some injury by concealing the fact of its presence.

"No. Why should I tell you?" she asked, putting the sleeping child back into its cradle. "Why should I let you share any part of my life?"

The other leered at her. "Because, my dear Jane," he said, "I've got double hold on you now—that's why. So long as there was only your man—well, he mightn't have cared. But with the kid it's different. I guess it'll be worth more than a hundred to you now, won't it, Jane?"

He had drawn near to the sleeping infant and now stood over it. Clumsily he put forth one grimy hand and stroked the little arm that lay outside the coverlet. The woman sprang at him like a tigress.

"Don't you dare to touch him," she cried. "Don't you lay a finger on him or I'll kill you!"

The man slunk back. "All right. have it your own way, my dear," he said quietly. "But now it's going to cost you just twice as much—see? Fifty down—"

"I haven't fifty. I can only get twenty-five."

"Twenty-five," she panted, "and never a penny more. For twenty-five I can hire a man to kill you. And I'll do it, Jim, sooner than lose my home."

"All right; I suppose it'll have to be twenty-five," he answered.

She led the way to the door along the tiny hall, and they stood there a moment, gazing out into the darkness. For the first time a shade of pity for this degraded man welled up within her. She had loved him in the old days, and when he had abused and beaten her she had loved him all the more until—until that other woman. She would not think of that.

"Where are you going to sleep tonight Jim?" she asked quietly.

The man laughed. "O, under some freight cars, I reckon. I'm used to that sort of bed. Maybe I'll find a heap of coal."

"You promise not to go into the town?"

"Sure! That's part of the bargain, ain't it? I'll keep out of the way, don't fear. Which way are the cars?"

"The cars are over yonder, at the back of the factory," she said more mildly. "I guess you know the way. It's no longer than through the village—and you can take care of yourself in the dark, I reckon."

"I reckon so, Jane," he answered "Good night, my lass." He pressed his hat down on his head and started out along the road. In a moment the darkness had swallowed him up—he was gone even while she heard his footsteps in the mud.

Suddenly she staggered back as a tremulous thought blanched her cheek and set her heart beating furiously. The bridge! The bridge was up. He did not know. He would walk confidently there where the firm girders ran, offering their treacherous support, and he would walk into nothingness. And those currents!—the currents in her own heart! She who had risked all might win all; her man, her child, her home, for this one worthless life.

The impulse to run after him mastered her, but suddenly a low wail from the room behind recalled her. And she crouched there, not stirring until he was out of earshot.

NAMES FOR THE KNIVES.

The Small Boy Had Them All Down Pat For the Preacher.

The small boy of today is often credited with a predilection for saying the wrong thing in the presence of an honored guest. The following true incident shows that he also had to be reckoned with more than seventy years ago.

In the pioneer days of Michigan Deacon Brewster was noted for his large family and his hospitality. One day Elder Allen, the circuit rider, young, good looking and, moreover, a bachelor, arrived at the deacon's in time for dinner. Presently a bounteous meal appeared upon a board rather scantily furnished. It must be owned, with certain necessaries in the way of table ware. After all were seated and the elder had asked the blessing Miss Betsy, the eldest daughter, thinking to apologize, blushingly began:

"I'm sorry I couldn't find a better knife for you, Mr. Allen. The children carry them out to dig with, you see, and forget to bring them back."

"Why-y, sister," piped Johnny's shrill voice, "they're all here! The elder's got No Handle, dad hez Butcher and mammy Stub! He'll jest have to take turns eating with the rest of us."—Woman's Home Companion.

Toward the Pole.

Ice eight feet thick on the ocean and snow falling even in summer—such is the weather experienced in the polar regions. When the air is dry and still it is remarkable how low a temperature can be borne with ease. One explorer tells us that with the thermometer at 9 degrees it was too warm for skating. The summer weather in this region is, moreover, in some respects pleasant and healthful. Within the arctic zone there are wonderfully colored sunrises and sunsets to be seen. They are both brilliant and impressive. But the nights—the nights are monotonous and repelling. A rigid world buried in everlasting snow, silent save for the cracking of the ice or the wail of the wind. Travelers in these regions experience many discomforts. The keen air causes their skin to burn and blister, while their lips swell and crack. Thirst, again, has been much complained of, arising from the action of the low temperature on the warm body.

How Zulu Servants Are Fed.

Zulu servants live in a detached house in the yard, and each receives the following rations: A half loaf of bread per day, one can condensed milk per week, one-quarter pound of tea per week, two pounds of sugar per week, two pounds of corn meal per week, fresh meat once a week. This meat consists of a shilling's worth of "boy's meat," probably a pound and a half of beef, which is boiled with vegetables, usually carrots, which the Zulus love. The black servants are known as "boys," and the butchers sell a special kind of meat for them, which is called "boy's meat."—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

RAMBLINGS OF A CHECK.

The wife won—which was foreordained.

The man wrote the wife a check for $5 in payment of the bet—which was sad.

The grocer despite the lack of endorsement, paid it to a packing house collector—which was careless.

The packing house collector turned it in—which was all in a day's work.

The packing house office man discovered the lack of indorsement—which was good work.

He handed it back to the driver and docked the driver's salary—which was system.

The driver placed the check in his white duck coat and sent it to the laundry—which was unwise.

The laundry mutilated the check beyond recognition—which was to be expected.

Which is why the driver asked the cashier to ask the grocer to ask the man's wife to ask her husband to write a duplicate check. Which is why the man feels like he is paying that bet twice.—Kansas City Star.

The Change.

Facing a Waterspout.

What it means to encounter a waterspout in the south seas is described by a writer; "First of all, a black trunk, like an elephant's, began to feel blindly about in midair, hanging from a cloud. It came nearer and nearer with uncanny speed, drawing up to itself as it came a colossal cone of turbulent sea until the two joined together in an enormous black pillar some quarter of a mile broad at the base and probably a good thousand feet high, uniting as it did the clouds and the sea below. Across the darkening sea, against the threatening copper crimson sunset, came this gigantic horror, waltzing over troughs of torn up water in a veritable dance of death, like something blind, but mad and cruel, trying to find and shatter our fragile little ship."

BRIDE IS MURDERED.

And Farmer Husband Is Charged With the Crime.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Everett A. Rexroat, son of a Macomb, Ill., farmer, was named in a warrant issued last night as the murderer of his wife, Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat, a Chicago dancing teacher, who Saturday was shot to death near Wheaton, Ill.

Eighty photographs of finger prints were taken yesterday, many of them bloody found on a score or more mailing cards discovered scattered along the railway track for a distance of 50 feet from the place the body was found. The police are looking for a rattan suitcase containing a pink silk dancing dress and pink pumps, which was carried by Mrs. Rexroat when she left Chicago.

Rexroat's parents and friends at Macomb declare they will have no trouble establishing a complete alibi for him. "He has not been in Chicago for two months," said his father. "He brought his bride here six months ago, but she was a city girl and would not adopt farm life. She left Aug. 26. They were still good friends."

MARRIED ON THE STAGE OF THEATRE

Staff Captain Walton Wedded Army Workers

Staff Captain Walton who was in the city over Sunday, in connection with services at the Salvation Army Temple, officiated at a wedding in Cobourg last week when Miss Annie Gordon Williams of Campbellford and Mr. Albert Cowin of Cobourg were married on the stage of the Opera House.

The bride wore her Salvation Army costume. She had been engaged as supply officer and after the ceremony she gave an address relating to her conversion and call to the work.

FINE OF $10

At police court this morning Magistrate Dumble imposed a fine of $10 and costs in an assault case and ordered that the defendant contribute an additional $5, this being the amount of the doctor's bill for services given to the complainant, who lost part of one ear in the hostilities which broke out near an hotel.

Rally Day Services

Bright and interesting rally day services at several Sunday schools yesterday afternoon, were attended by an increased number of young people and their parents. All the Sunday schools are now observing the afternoon session.

Sale of Offerings

The week-end services at the Salvation Army temple were of great interest. Staff Captain Walton led the open air service at the corner of Simcoe and George streets, Saturday night and as Brigadier Hargrave arrived in the city that night, splendid addresses were given at the Temple Sunday. There was a large display of harvest offerings and a sale will be held to-night. The visiting officers left to-day for Port Hope and other points.

RALLY DAY AT GEORGE STREET

Mr. Wilson Taylor, the New Superintendent of Sunday School

Rally day was observed in George street church yesterday, with Rev. R. G. Peever, the pastor, occupying the pulpit.

The special feature of the services was a sermon in the morning by the pastor to the parents and teachers of the church. Mr. Peever took for his subject text "The Church and the Household, or Family Religion."

Mrs. Renwick rendered a solo in her usual capable manner.

The Sunday school service was conducted by Mr. Wilson Taylor, B. A., of the Collegiate staff, who is the new superintendent, appointed at the last meeting of the Quarterly Board. Mr Colling, of the Public school teaching staff, also gave an address.

Miss McKee and Mr. M. Park gave solos and Mr. and Mrs. McCarroll rendered a duet.

At the evening service Mr. Peever delivered a special sermon to the young people of the church. All three services were largely attended.

Messrs. Carruthers, T. W. Robinson and Rev. Mr. Peever have been appointed by the Board to attend the Missionary Congress which is being held in Toronto next week.

The Sunday school will also send two delegates to attend the Provincial Sunday school convention, which is to be held in Ottawa about the middle of next month.

MYSTERY OF THE TWO AUTOMOBILES

A Lot of Trouble and Much Speed; Over Chimney Fire

About four-thirty on Saturday afternoon pedestrians on George st. were greatly excited when two automobiles rushed southward. Many people were trying to find the cause.

The explanation is that on Saturday afternoon, a lady who resides on Hartley street, outside the city limits on the north, discovered the chimney of her house was on fire. She became excited and ran to a telephone and told the proprietor of a grocery store on the south end on Rubidge street to acquaint her brother who resides next door to the store with the fact that her house was on fire. The proprietor did and the brother rushed to the 'phone and called the fire hall. When the fireman on watch went to take the message the brother had lost control of himself and couldn't tell him where the sister lived. When asked her name he said "Sarah my oldest sister who lives up by the Normal School, and with these directions the brigade started.

After traversing the hills in the northern section of the city for about half an hour with no results the Chief and some of the firemen borrowed two automobiles and broke all speed restrictions in getting to the grocery store in the south end, from where the alarm was sent in. In due time the brother was found but he could not throw much light on the subject, for he never had been up to his sister's home. When requested by the Chief to accompany the firemen up toward the Normal School in the hopes that he might possibly know the place, this affectionate brother remarked: "I would but I really haven't the time."

It is needless to say that the firemen lost no time in returning to the station. It was learned afterwards that the fire had been easily extinguished by some neighbors.

READY FOR ATLANTIC

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The Chronicle's Paris correspondent says that Garros, the hero of the non-stop flight across the Mediterranean, who has now returned to Paris, thinks crossing the Atlantic in an aeroplane is now well within bounds of possibility. With a few slight improvements in the average aeroplane motor, he says, there would be nothing to prevent it. Garros has, indeed, sketched out a suitable route from the north of England to Ireland, which would be the first supply station, thence to Newfoundland and the mainland.

THE SPORTING WORLD

GLAZIERS LEAD

Have Two Wins in the Football Competition

By winning from the Maroons by the score of 8 to 3, the Glaziers lead the recently formed football league with two wins and no losses. The Costers defeated the Cockneys by 1 0.

This competition is providing great sport for the players. The games are played at the exhibition grounds.

SPORTING GOSSIP

In rugby and hockey, Peterboro will miss the services of Harold Morrow, who has been moved by the Royal Bank to Kingston.

The Brantford Expositor is having quite a time giving suggestions as to how the Canadian League should be conducted. The Petes played before an attendance of 105 in the Telephone City, this past season.

The candidates for positions on the rugby team had a splendid workout at the Oval Saturday afternoon. The practices will be continued this week. Capitals of Toronto play here next Saturday.

Cleveland Press: It's just as hard to get a big batting average in certain bush leagues as it is in the big show. Take this from George Dunlop, recruit shortstop secured by the Naps from London in the Canadian League.

Dunlop doesn't mean that it is no harder to bat in fast company. He is speaking of the official average you get for the batting you do.

"Why up there in Canada they score it an error is the ball touches an infielder anywhere," declares Dunlop. "There is no such thing as giving a hit to a fellow because a ball is too hot to handle. Bad bounds are never taken into consideration by the scorers as they are in the American League.

"If you try for a ball with one hand and don't get it do you think the batter is given a bingle up there? Not on your life. A ball could cripple you and you would draw a boot."

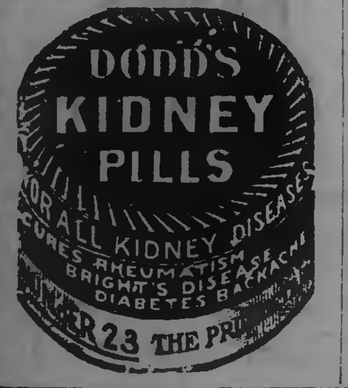
Hit By Boy's Wagon and Dies.

WOODSTOCK, Sept. 26.—While walking down the hill on Hunter street Wednesday evening, Charles Rush of Middleville, Mich., a former resident of Woodstock, was struck from behind by a small express wagon, in which three small boys were coasting along the sidewalk, with considerable speed. Mr. Rush fell heavily to the sidewalk, fracturing his skull. He was immediately rushed to the hospital, where he died during the night.



Kuntz's
OLD GERMAN LAGER
KUNTZ BREWERY

HURRY up with a bottle of Kuntz's Old German," said the man from New York. "It's worth a trip to Canada to get a drink of this corking brew. There's nothing like the "Old German" flavor in the United States, you know. Perhaps because the "Old German", process of brewing is so very costly. Anyway, you Canadians ought to feel proud of Kuntz's for brewing such a superb beverage. And I guess you are from the number I see drinking Kuntz's Old German.

THE BALL PLAYER.

He Faces Many Trying Ordeals In His Early Experience.

MAKING A BIG LEAGUE CLUB.

Tribulations of a Veteran Star Who Started In With a "Swelled Head" and Got Fired and Then Worked His Way Back Into Fast Company.

In the American Magazine Hugh S. Fullerton writes an article entitled "The Making of a Big Leaguer." It is a true story of the development of one of the greatest ball players in the United States as told by himself to Mr. Fullerton. This player, of course, began the game as a boy and passed through all the stages from amateur to minor league teams and then into the big league. In this early experience he became a great victim of the "swelled head," hit the first ball pitched when he went to bat after being told to wait for two strikes and finally lost his position on the big league team. After many vicissitudes he lost his "swelled head" and got into the big league again, where today, at thirty-four years of age, he is one of the great veterans of the game. Of his final entrance into the big league he says:

"In June I was purchased for a large sum by the club which then was the strongest in the country. I didn't say a word about money, although the club paid over $4,000 for me. The new manager sat down with me in the hotel the night I joined his team.

"'All I want,' he said, 'is for you to get out there and hustle and behave yourself. I've heard you're hard to handle, but I'll take a chance.'

"'You won't have any trouble with me,' I assured him. 'All I want is a chance to show that I can play.'

"'You'll get all the chance you want, he said quietly. 'You're in the lineup tomorrow.'

"Stage fright! Did you ever suffer it? I did that night. My nerves were jumping, and a thousand times I figured out plays—yes, and made them—in planning what I would do the next day.

"We were playing a game against a team which we figured we would have to beat out to win the championship. I pictured myself hitting home runs and making triple plays, and when I awoke in the morning I was nervous, a shaky, uncertain and scared ball player. In practice before the game every thing hit my way I either fumbled or threw wild, as my nerves were rags. The crowd seemed to be sorry for me when they weren't mocking. It was a relief when the game started.

"I was second at bat in the lineup on a foreign field and with a hostile crowd roaring. The first man flied out. 'Wait him out. Take two,' said the manager as I picked up a bat. The first pitched ball cut the heart of the plate. I saw it all the way up and knew it would have been easy to hit it hard, yet I let it go. 'Strike one,' the umpire yelled, and the crowd howled. I was cool as a Boston east wind. The second ball came whizzing up straight over the plate with nothing on it, and I itched to hit it, yet let it go for the second strike.

"Then I settled to hit, expecting a curve ball. The curve went wide. A fast one went high and wide. I figured that the pitcher thought he had a sucker at bat and would curve one over. He came with a fast ball a foot high and I swung at it and struck out. My heart nearly got spiked as it sank into my toes going back to the bench.

"'That's the boy,' said the manager. 'Wait him out. Make him pitch.'

"I could have kissed him for those words. I went to short with my nerves steady and my system full of confidence. The first ball hit was a sizzler over second. I got the ball with one hand, and there wasn't a chance to throw the runner out if I stopped to straighten up, so I threw without looking and without waiting and plunged forward onto my face. The yell from the crowd told me the first baseman had caught it, and as I scraped the dust out of my eyes and trotted back to position I felt at home.

"I wasn't excited nor elated, but the confidence that had carried me through the minor leagues came back with a rush and all fear was gone. I was a big leaguer—and knew it. The next time at bat I crowded the plate, jockeyed with the pitcher and watched. He whipped a curve inside the plate. I pretended to dodge and let the ball hit me. It hit hard and I squirmed, but as the manager bent over me I winked at him and, letting him lift me, I limped down to first—and stole second on the first ball pitched, sliding clear around the baseman. On my third trip to the plate I cracked a clean hit over second base and, after being sacrificed to second, stole third because I figured no one would expect a recruit to do that.

"In the clubhouse that night the manager said, 'You'll do, kid, if you don't get swelled.' And I replied, 'I've gone through that.'"

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

In New England are two colleges in close proximity; in one young men are educated, in the other young girls.

One day Edwin Langdon, a senior in the man's college, was strolling on a road not far from the women's institution when he saw a black spot above him. He watched it sink gradually till it appeared as a paper balloon rocking in the air and fell not a hundred yards from him. Going to where it lay, he took it up and noticed that to the cross wires holding a sponge that had been saturated with alcohol hung a piece of pasteboard on which was written in a feminine hand:

I contain a secret.

"Yes," said Langdon to himself, "and judging by your handwriting the secret is not to be kept. Some undergraduate of the women's college has sent you off for the purpose of telling her secret."

The student carefully examined the balloon in every part, but the secret was not found. Thinking it might lie under the pasted seams, he took it to his room and moistened and opened them. He was not rewarded for his pains.

"I have it," he exclaimed suddenly. "Some girl has written the secret with a fluid that requires a chemical agent to bring it out. I'll take it to the laboratory and apply tests." He did so and succeeded. By soaking the paper successively in several different acids he at last found one that brought out letters containing a message.

You are warm, but you haven't got me yet. If you do a kiss—

The writing stopped abruptly.

"Oho!" said Langdon inwardly. "So I'm warm, am I? That means that I'm on the right track. And a kiss is to be my reward if I get your secret. Only you didn't like to call kissing you a reward. Any man who wouldn't under such circumstances exercise all his wits to reach the goal is no man at all."

Ned Langdon tried all the chemical agents he could think of to bring out another message, but they failed. He puzzled over the matter for a week, then temporarily gave it up—that is as to investigation. He continued to think about it pretty much all the time.

One evening he was holding the balloon close to a gas jet examining the paper with a magnifying glass, turning successively different parts to the jet, when on the paper, very near the flame, out came brown letters. They were too faint to be read, but Langdon knew he had got the secret—that is, if there was no more of the problem to be solved. Heat was the element required to bring out the writing. Holding the paper very close to the burning gas, a message in deep brown letters appeared:

"Well, upon my word!" exclaimed Ned. "That's a round about way of making the acquaintance of a stranger. And to think that I didn't get on to the best explanation. That message was probably written in common lemon juice. But the "junior prom." comes off next week. In four days more I would have been too late."

That ended Langdon's studies till the "junior prom." had taken place. He had no thought but for the girl who had sent the paper balloon. So she would be known at the function by violets on her left shoulder!

And what must have been the feelings of that girl as the evening in question approached? There were few chances of the balloon falling into the hands of one she would care to meet. And if it did, would he have the ingenuity to extract the secret?

"I'll bother that girl," mused Langdon, "by pretending not to recognize the token."

He entered the hall late purposely and stood in the background till he saw a girl pass with a bunch of violets on her shoulder. She was as pretty as a peach. He was enraptured.

Langdon showed himself in the company of different girls for half an hour, then secured an introduction to the girl of the secret, pretending not to notice her violets. He made himself agreeable, however—indeed, paid her marked attention. After having been with her for some time he gallantly asked for a souvenir, looking wistfully at the violets. The girl did not take the hint.

There was a gallery at one end of the hall, used during religious services for the choir. Langdon invited the girl to go up there with him. She accepted, and they sat back where they would not be seen. Beneath them was that mingling of voices common at social gatherings resembling the running of waters.

Suddenly every voice stopped at the sound of a muffled shriek. Fortunately sound has no direction for the ear.

"Some girl has been kissed," remarked numerous undergraduates. The professors looked shocked.

The hero and heroine of this story have long been married, and their sons and daughters are now fitting for college. The mother dreads to send her daughters where she cannot overlook them. When she talks this way her husband replies:

"Will you kindly tell me, my dear, what avail it is to watch a girl? They say that 'love laughs at locksmiths,' but I once knew a girl who got a husband by sending up a paper balloon with a secret in it so concealed that"—

"Oh, heavens! Shall I never hear the last of that freak?"

Made Dash For Liberty.

OSSINING, N.Y., Sept. 26.—Five convicts at Sing Sing Prison, at work unloading a coal barge, overpowered a guard yesterday afternoon, jumped into the Hudson River, and attempted to swim to the other side. The shots of other guards halted them, however, and all five were recaptured. Billy Green, leader of the band, was brought back from midstream in a rowboat.

Green, who two years ago escaped and was brought back after being caught in California, hesitated a moment after the shots were fired, but continued toward the opposite shore when he saw the guards busy attending to his companions, Fred. Deharri, Joseph White, Matthew Loofice and Louis Price. Two guards in the small boat overtook him before he reached land, however, and he was captured without a struggle.

IMPRESSIONS ON THE CONSECRATION

Rev. J. R. Webb Tells of What He Saw and Heard at St. Peter's Cathedral

A very large congregation attended the evening service at Murray Street Baptist church on Sunday, when the pastor, Rev. J.R. Webb gave his impressions on the consecration ceremony as carried out at St. Peter's Cathdral on Wednesday morning of last week.

His subject was "The Mediator" and his text was from St. John 14-5 "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me."

The preacher said he was glad to have been included in the number receiving cards of admission to the Cathedral for several reasons— because it was a time of rejoicing wtih a large and respected portion of our community; because some of his own best friends are Roman Catholics; because of the manifest reverence in the sanctuary, which might well put Protestants to shame; because in Mr. Webb's opinion the man installed in the exalted office is as worthy of that honor as any man in that ancient church; and lastly because he was priviledged to hear a really great sermon by the Bishop of Calgary.

On the other hand there were, the preacher said, certain things which might raise questions in the mind of some of the listeners. It was no surprise to find the entire service in the Latin, but why was this when the Apostle Paul says "unless ye utter by the tongue speech easy to be understood, ye will be speaking into the air." The fact was, said the speaker, the service was not intended to be understood by the common people. It was a service for the eye not for the ear and the mind. There were some things in that Latin service which hundreds of Roman Catholics in Peterborough would themselves repudiate. For instance where the candidate is asked whether he is willing to curse everything that the Church of Rome considers heresy, and he replies "I do curse it." There are many Roman Catholics in our midst who have anything but such a disposition toward the non-Catholic bodies.

It was rather strange, the preacher said, to see the Mayor and City Aldermen present in their representative capacity listening to the public cursing of the cherished beliefs of the majority of their electors, and more strange to see these same men men presenting an engrossed address to the papal delegate, who had to demand this anathema from the bishop-elect. The Roman Catholic Church, he added, should have every attention and courtesy extended to that of other denominations, and no more.

The sermon, said Mr. Webb, was an exaltation of the priesthood. It put the priest between the souls of man and God, which, he contended, was in direct violation of the text in which Christ says; "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me."

While admiring the spectacular part of the service, the speaker felt that there was something pathetic and even grotesque about the use of Scripture in it—for instance—where the gloves are put on the bishop and the prayer is offered:

"As thy beloved Jacob his hands being covered with the skins of kids obtained the paternal blessing, so may this man."

Everybody knows that when Jacob received the paternal blessing with his hands covered, he was a deceiver, a rogue seeking to steal a blessing from his blind father, which was not his right. He was pretending to be Esau. He was acting the part of a hypocrite. Said Mr. Webb; "I as a fellow-citizen object to such a case being applied to my friend Dr. O'Brien. My prayer for him would be that he receive the paternal blessing in an altogether different way from that in which Jacob filched it."

Mr Webb said in conclusion: "To anyone who would criticize his attending the service, he would say that he certainly found much in the sermon that was true and helpful, and that he came out of the church a better man for having attended it. He was no more than in the past convinced of the authority of that church, nor of the sincerity of some who make unique claims for it; but he was most sympathetic for those who lived their life and passed into the other world with the idea that a priest was required as a mediator since Jesus had said; "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me."

LABOR GAZETTE REPORT OF PETERBOROUGH

Conditions Good—Turnbull Disaster—Shortage in Hay Crop Mills Busy.

Labour conditions were on the whole good but not as satisfactory as last month. The chief activity was in connections with the building trades and unskilled labor. The Henry Hope factory has been at a standstill for some time being held back by the non-arrival of the steel. This has arrived and the building will be recommenced on September 1. The Vermont Marble Company's buildings are complete, and the machinery is being installed. Contracts have been let for paving George, Charlotte and Hunter sts. This will give considerable work for outdoor workers. The cost will be about $63,000, and it is expected that the work will be finished this year. The work of installing the Hydro-Electric System is progressing favourably. The contract for building two reinforced concrete bridges has been awarded to Mr. W. H. Lytle. This work will also start this fall. The Canadian Pacific Railway are also putting a new freight shed and putting new sidings along the river front. The large departmental store of J. J. Turnbull's was being remodelled when it collapsed, five people being killed and several injured. It is expected that a larger and modern building will be built on this property, as it is one of the best business stands in the city.

The farmers of this section report a shortage in the hay crop and this source of feed supply is considerably reduced. The dry weather has added to the difficulty of handling cattle at present, and the conditions for watering cattle are decidedly unfavorable.

The mills are very busy at this season, and logs are being brought to the mills. The planing mills have had a busy season, also the shingle mills.

All factories are working full time, some are not working a full staff and are not as active as a year ago.

MANY CATCHY SONGS

In the Big Musical Comedy "The Pink Lady"

"The Pink Lady," an international musical comedy success and a play which exceeded all expectations comes to the Grand next Friday, Oct. 3. It is unlikely that there ever was a musical comedy produced which furnishes more real musical and comedy amusement than this one. Musically "The Pink Lady" is one of the most alluring achievements in years in the field of light composition. The haunting melody of "Beautiful Lady," the irresistible humor of "Donny Did, Donny Didn't," a capital part song, the whistleable air of "The Girl by the Saskatchewan," and the delicious "Kiss Waltz," are a few of the

At the request of the Young People's Society, Rev. J.R. Webb will speak to-night in the lecture hall of Murray Street Baptist church on the experience of Dan Crawford, who, one year ago emerged from Central Africa where he had worked alone for 22 years.

Dan Crawford's work was on that part of Africa which David Livingstone sought, but failed to reach.

BLACKLISTER AND HIS FRIEND FINED

Lister is Assessed $10 but the Other Has to Pay $25

Ed Hearn, charged with being drunk while on the black list, pleaded guilty and was fined $10 at Police Court this morning.

Hearn said he was supplied with liquor by Robert Sheridan.

Sheridan didn't remember anything about supplying Hearn and he claimed he must have been drunk when he did it. His excuse, however, fell on deaf ears and he was assessed $25 to be paid forthwith.

Herbert Hill, who claims he came from Port Hope, appeared in Police Court this morning charged with vagrancy and begging. When questioned by Chief Thompson, Hill admitted that only recently he was liberated from Central Prison, where he served a term for vagrancy and drunkenness.

However, the Chief has some information from Cobourg as to the behavior of the man and as a result he was remanded for a week.

The case of Wm Sloan, charged with vagrancy, was enlarged for a week and if accused has not obtained work by then he may be given a term in Central Prison.

Sloan has often appeared before the Magistrate on different charges. As he was leaving the court room Sloan remarked that if he could get money enough he would leave the city forever.

Chief Thompson told him that it wouldn't hurt their feelings in the least. Some time ago Sloan was let out on suspended sentence by Judge Huycke on a theft charge on his promise to keep away from hotels and stop drinking.

Herbert Sweeney, charged with vagrancy, was given a week to get employment.

SMALL BLAZE AT HARNESS SHOP

At 6.53 this morning a blaze originated in Godfrey's harness shop, 121 Hunter street. Defective electric wiring was the cause. The fire brigade were called out, and the damage was confined to slightly over $100.

T.A.S. MEMBERS AT COMMUNION

Over 600 men representing St. Peter's and Sacred Heart T.A.S. attended eight o'clock mass yesterday morning at St. Peter's Cathedral. The men assembled in St. Alphonsus Lyceum and marched to the church.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien said mass, and at the conclusion spoke a few words. "I am certainly impressed this morning when saying my first mass at St. Peter's Cathedral as a bishop, to find so many at the request of the officers of the St Peter's and Sacred Heart T.A.S receive Holy Communion in a body," the new bishop said. He assured them that it was more than encouraging to him to receive this token of their co-operation in his work and that success is a certainty, was amply proven by the large number present.

"It is a grand way to show your hearty co-operation in my every desires and I hope and pray that you will be earnest in keeping your pledge and getting others, who have not as yet taken the pledge or who have, through frailty, broken or fallen away to join again. May God Almighty bless you then, and I trust and pray to God that the graces you this morning receive, will assist you in pleasing and serving God, which is the password to heaven."

Rev. Dean McColl, spiritual adviser of St. Peter's T.A.S., also spoke a few words at the conclusion of which prayers were said for the Holy Father and the pledge was renewed.

A GROWING CITY

Returns of the City Assessor Show an Increase in Assessment of $1,065,532--Population Now is 20150

The capitulation on the returns of the City Assessor, which appears on the first page of to-day's Review, shows that Peterborough is enjoying growth and prosperity. The total population is given as 20,150, being an increase of 391 over the previous year. It will, of course, be understood that as the growth of the city has been to a very large extent in the south end, this section of the city has attracted a large percentage of the people who have come to Peterborough, and they have settled in Brownton and in other parts of North Monaghan, which has not as yet been incorporated in the city.

The total assessment in the city is $13,415,464, which is an increase of $1,065,532 for the year. There were 366 births and 118 deaths. The total number of canines, male and female, is 606. At the same time only 520 tags have been issued.

FISHER IS NOMINATED

Will Carry Liberal Standard in Chateauguay

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—Hon. Sydney Fisher, ex-Minister of Agriculture, was yesterday nominated a Liberal candidate for the Chateauguay bye-election, which takes place on Oct. 11, by the party organization of the constituency, which met at St. Martine.

At the outset Mr. Fisher's name was submitted with those of A. F. Leggatt, Thomas Gebble and Robert Ness, the ex-Minister of Agriculture receiving a majority of votes on the final ballot.

Liberal Leader To Speak.

OTTAWA, Sept. 30.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier will speak at St. John's, Que. on Saturday. He will also address the electors of Chateauguay at either St. Martine or Chateauguay Town, some night next week on behalf of Hon. Sydney Fisher, who was nominated yesterday.

Premier Borden will not go to Chateauguay, nor will any but the Quebec Conservative leaders take part. Hon. Judge Doherty has been wired by James Morris, the Government candidate, to return in time to hold one meeting.

COL. MITCHELL

The local corps of the Salvation Army anticipate a treat on Wednesday night, when they will welcome to the Temple Col. Mitchell, who is the bandmaster of the International Staff Band, the premier band of the Army. Col. Mitchell is also at the head of the financial department of the Army.

He will arrive from Toronto on the 7.57 C.P.R. train and will be escorted to the Temple by the local band. There, a service will be held, after which Col. Mitchell will attend a practice of the band and later be entertained at tea.

Col. Mitchell is in Toronto making arrangements for the visit of General Bramwell Booth. The general's visit in Canada will be of short duration and he will not be able to come to this city.

SENTENCED TO BE HANGED

New Trial Failed to Save Jesse Hammond

Canadian Press Despatch.

SASKATOON, SASK., Sept. 30.—Judge Newlands last night sentenced Jesse Hammond to be hanged December seventeenth at Prince Albert. Two years ago Hammond was apprehended for contributing to the death of an infant child of his wife's sister of which he confessed to being the father. He was tried and convicted and sentenced to be hanged last January but he secured a new trial.

HE WANTED AN EDUCATION

So New York Errand Boy Stole $1,400 From Employer

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—In order to satisfy his ambition to enter Oxford University, Wilbur Foerste, a 17-year-old errand boy, stole $1,400 from a Cleveland, O., department store, he told detectives yesterday who arrested him. Foerste explained that he planned to sail on the Mauretania for England and to enter a preparatory school to fit himself for a course in Oxford.

Young Foerste will be arraigned on a charge of grand larceny. Foerste said that he would plead guilty on his return to Cleveland and throw himself on the mercy of the court.

"If that is true—if the boy really wants a university education and has the mental qualifications, I'll see that he gets it," said Charles A. Strong, jr., vice-president of the department store.

The boy's parents had taken him from Glenville High School during his sophomore year, and he longed to be able to get a university education.

Eight Killed In Riot.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—A cable from Lisbon says:

Despatches from Torres Vedras, near the northeastern frontier of Portugal, report an uprising yesterday when the police, following instructions from the central government, tried to arrest a number of suspected radicals.

They resisted, troops were called out, and a fight followed, in which eight men were killed, and twenty-two, most of them civilians, were wounded. Many arrests were made.

The syndicalists have decided in favor of a general strike as a protest.

Apply a Week Ahead.

Guelph, Sept. 30.—There are only 12 cells for men in the new county jail, one of these being a padded cell for lunatics. When the three hoboes who were arrested Sunday night were taken there all the cells were occupied with the exception of the padded one. Governor McNab suggests that from now on applications for rooms at the county castle might be made a week ahead of time.

Arson Squad Busy Again.

YARMOUTH, Eng., Sept. 30.—Militant suffragette "arson squads" were again busy Sunday night, when they destroyed the greens of the municipal golf links with acid.

The women left a confession of their crime on the ground and a note saying: "The timber yard was set fire to by us." This had reference to a fire which on Saturday had destroyed $175,000 worth of timber at a lumber yard in this city.

Other cars were found on the links bearing the message: "No vote no sport, no peace, no property safe."

Princess Is Recovering.

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—Ex-King Manuel's bride, Princess Augustine Victoria, of Hohenzollern, is recovering very slowly.

She has not left the hospital at Munich, reports to the contrary notwithstanding, and Manuel has taken up his temporary abode in the institution in order to be constantly near her.

CONFESSES TO MURDER

Suspect Admits Brutal Slaughter of Small Boy

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—Joseph O'Brien, who was arrested Saturday night on suspicion of having attacked and killed seven-year-old Israel Goldman, and then thrown his nude body among some bushes on the golf links of the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club, yesterday confessed that he had committed the crime, according to the police.

O'Brien, the police announced, admitted having taken the boy to the outskirts, where the deed was committed, after a street car conductor had identified him as the man who was with the boy Friday night. According to the police, the prisoner said he had killed the child because he had called his (O'Brien's) mother a foul name.

The murder of the child was a particularly brutal one. His head was battered, there were bruises all over the body and a shoestring was tightly drawn about the neck when the body was found on Saturday morning. The boy's clothes lay near the scene of the crime.

Montreal's Crazy Firebug.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—Damage to the extent of $500,000 has been done to property here during a month's operations by an incendiary. Up to yesterday this firebug had contented himself with firing factory premises, but yesterday morning he started blazes in seven houses on St. Paul street.

The police have received a description of the incendiary and once he was caught by a janitor of a building in which he was operating, though after a desperate struggle he managed to escape. The police think the man is insane.

Fears For Missionaries.

PEKIN, Sept. 30.—Edward T. Williams, charge d'affaires of the American Legation, made representations to the Chinese Foreign Office yesterday calling for the protection of American missionaries.

At the request of J. Paul Jameson, acting American consul at Hankow, Gen. Li Yuen Heng, vice-president of the Chinese Republic, is sending troops to the district, but Tsaoyang, where, it is hoped, the Chinese brigards will respect the captured foreigners, is a long distance from Hankow.

Chinese Pirates Active.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 30. — The C. P. R. liner Empress of Russia, Captain Beetham, which arrived from the Orient at five o'clock Saturday afternoon, brings word of piratical outrages on the Chinese River. These celestial bad men have been very active of late, taking advantage of the trouble between the Government and the rebels, and it has been left for British and American gunboats to escort river steamers up the west river and the Yangtse Kiang.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Curing a Cold.

The hydropathic treatment of a cold in the head is more reliable than any other and one which scarcely requires the aid of a physician. It is as follows: In the morning after rising and at night before retiring, wash the feet and legs as high up as the knees in cold water; then rub them with a rough towel and massage them till the skin is red and glowing. In addition to this, snuff tepid water up the nose frequently during the day and sip with a teaspoon a glassful as hot as can be borne an hour before each meal and at bedtime. A few days is often quite sufficient for simple cases and obstinate ones yield if the treatment is prolonged. No medicines are required. If taken in the first stages of the disease, a cold is broken up which might otherwise become a severe case of bronchitis, lasting many days or weeks.

MAY SUE PRELATE

Editor Langlois Replies to Mgr. Bruchesi's Mandement

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—"An unjustifiable attack on the liberty of the press," is the expression used by Godfroi Langlois, M.P.P., as an introduction to a denunciation he has issued of the action of Mgr. Bruchesi, Archbishop of Montreal, in forbidding Roman Catholics to read Mr. Langlois' newspaper, Le Pays, because, according to the mandement giving expression to the ban, "The paper is of nature to gravely injured religious interests and to cause a real harm, especially to the young."

Mr. Langlois, in his denunciation threatens to take legal action against the church authorities for damages should he find that he suffers from the ban, and to carry the case through to the Privy Council, if necessary.

FIVE FAMILIES ARE HOMELESS

Fire in Iron Block, Cornwall, Does Much Damage

CORNWALL, Sept. 30.—At a late hour Sunday night fire completely gutted the upper portion of the Iron block, Pitt street, a business block erected some years ago by the late Col. R. R. McLennan, driving five families out of their living apartments in their night clothes. Water and smoke damaged the business stands of Fawkes & Co. and Maggie Thomas on the ground floor, while the branch meat market, managed by W. F. Donihee, situated in the north store of the block, was also gutted.

The fire brigade did great work in confining the fire to the one building.

Wrecked Near Jarvis.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Wabash passenger train No. 4, St. Louis to Buffalo, was wrecked at five o'clock yesterday morning at Jarvis, east of Simcoe. Two coaches were derailed and two passengers, not Canadians, slightly injured, one suffering crushed fingers and the other an injured nose.

Neck Broken by Fall.

WOODSTOCK, Sept. 30. — James Hull, a prominent lumberman at Princeton, fell down the cellar stairs at his home in the village some time during the night, and was found at seven o'clock yesterday morning with his neck broken.

SULZER SCORES THREE.

Accused Governor's Counsel Prevail In Excluding Evidence.

ALBANY, N.Y., Sept. 30.—Governor Sulzer yesterday won a triple victory over his accusers at the trial of his impeachment.

Presiding Judge Cullen of the High Court barred the introduction of evidence to prove that the governor had made a corrupt political bargain with Assemblyman Patrie of Greene County, and held that the evidence brought forward to show that he had made similar bargains with other assemblymen was incompetent.

The legislation had to do in each case with improvements which the assemblymen had advocated in bills subsequently passed by the Legislature to which they were desirous of getting the governor's signature.

In the Patrie case, however, no charges were brought in the articles of impeachment, and it was on this ground that presiding Judge Cullen threw the charge out of court.

The other cases were specified in article 8 of the impeachment.

With the introduction of evidence of three more campaign contributions not reported in the governor's statement of campaign receipts, and of more evidence concerning the governor's alleged Wall street speculations, the assembly managers drew near the end of their case yesterday.

Strike Not Justified.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 30.—President John P. White, of the United Mine Workers of America yesterday held that the strike of the 3,000 Bay City and Saginaw, Mich., miners, was not justified as the original trouble was subject to arbitartion. The strike was caused by the discharged miners.

WILL SIGN ON FRIDAY

Tariff Bill Almost Ready for President's Pen

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30. — The Democratic traiff revision bill was advanced to its last congressional stage yesterday when it was brought back to the House from the joint conference committee with the unanimous endorsement of the Democratic conferees.

Leaders in both Houses of Congress were confident last night that the bill, practically complete now, would be signed by President Wilson before the end of this week. It will scarcely leave the centre of the stage before the currency bill, next in line, will be forced upon the attention of the country and coincident with this will begin the administration work upon the anti-trust and railroad control programs that are to be brought forward when the December session opens.

President Wilson is satisfied that with the tariff bill out of the way Congress will take up the currency question prepared to dispose of it before adjournment.

The tariff conference report went to the House yesterday soon after that body convened at noon.

The House will take up the tariff bill at 11 o'clock to-day, and it is believed that it will be passed before adjournment. It is expected to reach the Senate Wednesday and to pass that body by Thursday.

The cotton futures tax is still in dispute, the House refusing to accept the so-called Clarke amendment adopted by the Senate. Expressions from the White House and from Congressional leaders yesterday, however indicate that in the final conference over this feature the whole plan might be dropped from the tariff bill and taken up as a separate measure next winter.

TOO MANY FAKIRS.

Fall Fairs Overrun and Easy "Calls" Are Blamed.

TORONTO, Sept. 30.—The increasing number of gentry who start out at this season of the year with chance games of every variety, calculated to separate hard-earned silver from young Ontario as he gathers at the fall fairs, is occasioning a serious consternation in the Agricultural Department of the Provincial Government. More serious are the charges made by the officials to the effect of carelessness of magistrates in letting off on suspended sentence men convicted of law-breaking in this regard are merely fostering the increase of such undesirables. Ten cases of this nature have been brought up already this fall in different parts of the province, where the "fakirs" pulled up at one gathering and allowed to go with a warning, have hied them forth to new fields of harvest.

The matter is to be taken up seriously, according to J. Lockie Wilson superintendent of provincial fall fairs. Either pressure will be brought to bear on lenient judges or it will be recommended to the Attorney-General that their commission of office be removed. The detective force employed by the Department, they claim, is practically tied up. Their services in bringing the operators of games of chance to court are rendered fruitless by the practice of suspended sentence.

There are 100 fall fairs yet to come off and special efforts will be made to break up any games still running. With this aim in view the chief detective was in the city yesterday completing the organization of his staff.

COL. HUGHES HONORED.

Canadian Minister Officially Welcomes Britain's Guests.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Most of the Canadian officers who attended the army manoeuvres return home at the end of this week. The party visited Woolwich yesterday and to-day goes to the Hythe School of Musketry, and to-morrow will be the guests of the Admiralty at Plymouth.

Hon. Col. Hughes is yet undecided as to the date of his return, being busy with War Office conferences.

A notable compliment was extended to the Dominion services at the army council dinner to the foreign and overseas services. Sir John French requested Hon. Col. Hughes to welcome the foreign representatives on behalf of the British Government, being the first time such a pleasurable duty has been entrusted to a Dominion representative.

Will Shoot Wild Horses.

Edmonton, Sept. 30.—Alberta Department of Agriculture has a peculiar problem on hand, and to deal with it an act was introduced in the Legislature yesterday by Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture.

Settlers in the Peace River country have complained of the damage done on their farms by wild horses. Bands of these animals have attacked domestic horses, killing colts and enticing away valuable mares.

Provision will be made in a bill now before the House for shooting these mauraders.

Agreement Is Dissolved.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—A practical dissolution has taken place of the Chinese loan agreement, by which the five powers concerned, Great Britain, France, Germany, Russia and Japan, gave a monopoly to certain banking groups for all Chinese loans, and from which the United States Government withdrew its support.

The British Goevrnment took the initiative in the dissolution of the agreement because of the failure of the other powers to observe its spirit.

HYDRO BOARD NEEDS MORE POWERS, SAYS THE UNION

Resolution Passed at Meeting of Municipal Representatives Favors Giving Commission Control of Water-Power Properties—Lamps Too Dear, Declares Hon. Adam Beck.

TORONTO, Sept. 30.—"In view of the comprehensive scheme outlined by the Dominion Government for the creation and improving of waterways in connection with the St. Lawrence River, Welland Canal, French River, Sault Ste. Marie, Trent, Ottawa, and others involving the large expenditure of public money, and in view of the extensive developments which are possible in consequence thereof, also in view of the power requirements of the province, be it resolved that this association request the Dominion Government to put such water powers under the jurisdiction of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, to be developed by them for the use of the municipalities of the province for the benefit of the people."

The above resolution, moved by Philip Pocock, chairman of the London Hydro-Electric Commission, and seconded by Mayor Carter of Guelph, was unanimously carried by representatives of the different municipalities using hydro power at the Ontario Municipal Electric Union at the city hall yesterday afternoon. Mr. Pocock is an enthusiastic believer in the future of the Hydro-electric, and is one of Hon. Adam Beck's right-hand men.

"Private corporations are always after these valuable assets, and the Government is generally committed to some scheme or other before the people get a chance to express any wish to control them for themselves," said Mr. Pocock in presenting the resolution. "I move this resolution with the hope that it may forestall any contemplated action on the part of the Government."

The meeting was held under the chairmanship of Corporation Counsel Geary. Amongst those present were: Hon. Adam Beck, Chief Engineer Gaby, Mr. Couzens, Hydro-electric engineer, and Mayor Ellis of Ottawa.

"I do know that many municipalities are charging an excessive price for lamps to protect some competitor who is selling a lamp of a similar make," said Hon. Adam Beck in his address. In this connection Mr. Beck pointed out that the few cents more in the price often meant the loyalty or disloyalty of the purchaser of the Hydro-electric. "Let us have equity, sell the goods at cost to create the demand for power," declared he, asserting that this is the way big surplusses are piled up by increasing the consumption of Hydro power.

FARMERS' ROADS TO BE FIRST

After That the Auto Highway Says U.S. Secretary

DETROIT, Sept. 30.—Secretary Houston of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in an address before the American Road Congress yesterday, expressed his approval of the efforts of the organization and explained the interest of the Federal Government with reference to great transcontinental highways for automobilists, and at the same time he said he did not under-estimate the valuable service rendered by automobilists in the propaganda for road building.

"The suggestion of great national transcontinental roads appeals to my imagination, as does the suggestion of interstate roads, connecting capitals or cities of commercial importance, to my logical faculty and to the sense of pleasure that I experience in riding about the country in my friends' automobiles. But that the essential thing to be done is the providing of good roads which shall get products from the community farms to the nearest station and make rural life more profitable, comfortable, pleasureable, I entertain no sort of doubt; and it is obvious that the representatives of the people in congress are like-minded.

"That the suggestion of federal aid to road building raises grave questions and involves possible dangers no thoughtful citizens doubts. There are proposals before the public mind which would bankrupt the federal treasury and suggest possible abuses before which those of the worst pork barrel bills of the past would pale into insignificance.

Other speakers before the congress yesterday included: Logan Waller Page, president of the American Highway Association, and A. W. Campbell, Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals in Canada.

Mr. Campbell outlined the Canadian prospective Federal legislation to aid in the construction of principal roads, as submitted at the last session of Parliament, and said that interest in the highways movement had not terminated with the differences of political opinion which occurred over the terms of the measure of last spring.

Mr. Campbell impressed upon the congress the important of planning in a comprehensive way for the requirements of the state, the class of roads necessary, the materials to use and how to use them. He emphasized the maintenance problem and urged that construction should not be undertaken without providing adequate and systematized methods of maintenance—"protecting the people's investment," he called it.

Mr. C. A. McGrath and his fellow-commissioners, Messrs. McLean and Rankin, of the Ontario Board, are in attendance at the congress and have embarked on a busy week, gathering information and data from various sources. They are accompanied by Hon. Dr. Reaume, Provincial Minister of Public Works, and as a result of the facts which they are now tabulating it is not improbable that recommendations of a very comprehensive character may be made.

Tossed By Railway Train.

KINGSTON, Sept. 30.—Edward Farmer, night watchman at Anglin's lumber mills, was struck by a Grand Trunk suburban train as he was crossing the tracks near the mill at eight o'clock yesterday morning. Farmer had a miraculous escape from death, being thrown several feet. He was picked up for dead, but on examination it was found he had only suffered slight injuries.

AVIATOR GOES 124 MILES AN HOUR

RHEIMS, France, Sept. 30.—A speed of 124 1-4 miles an hour was made by Maurice Prevost, the French aviator, in the first half of the race here yesterday for the International Aeroplane Cup. The entire distance to be flown was approximately 124.28 miles, and Prevost's time for the half distance, just over 62 miles, showed that his speed was over two miles a minute.

Prevost was the second to start in the contest, having been preceded by the Belgian, Albert Crombez.

Prince Arthur as Governor-General?

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—A writer in The Daily Sketch yesterday said:

"I can confirm on very high authority statements made lately that Prince Arthur of Connaught will ultimately succeed his father as Governor-General of Canada.

"This is one of the reasons for his marriage being hurried forward, since it was made a condition when the appointment was first offered him that he must be married before he took it over."

St. Louis Man Decorated.

MAINZ, Germany, Sept. 30.—Adolphus Busch of St. Louis, was decorated yesterday by the Grand Duke of Hesse with the cordon and cross of the first class of the Order of Philip the Good in recognition of his philanthropy to the people of Germany.

STILL IN BALANCE.

Charles Gibson's Fate Not Yet Divulged at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Sept. 30.—The case of Charles Gibson, sentenced to hang for the murder of Joseph Rosenthal and to whom a reprieve was granted until Oct. 9, was considered in Cabinet Council yesterday afternoon. The result of the deliberation was not, however, divulged and Ministers refused to speak on the matter.

The administrator, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, is still absent from the city, but is expected back to-day. If any order-in-council has been passed it will not be announced until he has placed his signature to it. It is generally understood that the Minister of Justice has recommended that the law takes its course, and that Gibson expiate his crime on the gallows. This is believed also to be the impression of the majority of the members of the Cabinet who have read the evidence. However, it is seldom that sentence of death is carried out once a reprieve has been granted, and those who defend Gibson still have hope of a new trial or commutation of sentence.

Barrie's Fur News

Because of the unique position and superior advantages of Barrie's Limited as Extensive Furriers, briefly pointed out yesterday there is positively no necessity for our citizens going away from home to buy High-Class Furs. Exquisite creations of the latest models from the centres of fashion, equal in every respect to the best productions of the large cities, can be made up in our workrooms, and at prices which the large cities cannot afford to quote.

Many people in Peterborough do not yet fully realize the value of the Fur Service Barrie's Limited can give them. Quality—Values, we know for a fact, are the very best that money can secure; and styles are the most exclusive in vogue, owing to our familiarity with the leading fashions of London, Paris and New York.

The Daily Review.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 30, 1913.

PETERBOROUGH "ACTIVE"

The Labor Gazette contains a table showing the state of employment in Canada during the month of August, 1913.

Under each trade the words "Active," "Fair," "Quiet," indicate the condition of each industry in the city.

Peterborough has the distinction of being "Active" in all branches of her trade, in unskilled labor the report is "Very Active." There is no "Quiet" or "Fair" in the report of our trade.

According to this report Peterborough has no boot and shoe workers, tobacco workers, longshoremen, pulp and paper makers and no retail clerks. But as the city is "Active" these will all come in good time.

THE CURFEW LAW

A Peterboro lady recently wrote to the Toronto Star on the subject of the curfew law, asking if it had been enforced in Toronto and if not, why not?

The amendment referred to reads:

37.—(1) No child shall loiter in any public place after 9 o'clock in the evening, or be there, unless accompanied by parent or guardian, or an adult appointed by the parent or guardian to accompany such child.

(2) A child found in a public place after the hour named in subsection 1, unless so accompanied may be warned to go home by any constable or probation officer or officer of a Children's Aid Society, and if after such warning the child is found loitering in a public place, such child may be taken by the constable or officer to its home, or to the children's shelter.

(3) Any parent who permits his child to violate this section, shall for the first offence incur a penalty of $1 without costs, and for a second offence $2, and for the third or any other subsequent offence $5.

The Star is glad to say that this law is not enforced generally, and says it is a "policeman's law." "To give a policeman this power," says the Star, "may at times prove a decided inconvenience to the police, but it is likely to prove an instrument of tyranny over the poor and unfortunate." The Star goes on to say that it is "an immoral and unfair law."

Whatever may be said about this curfew law, this problem of city life, is certainly one that ought to be attended to at once. So far as we can see the amendment to the curfew law was an attempt to solve the problem.

Any policeman who knows his beat and has any sense, can distinguish between a child who is loitering in the street after dark, and one who is on an errand for his parents. The law was made for dealing with cases of parental carelessness in allowing children to be on the streets after dark when they can be up to nothing but mischief and wickedness.

There is nothing so annoying to a neighborhood than a bunch of boys who gather at corners and form a sort of bandit gang, whose object seems to be to molest passers-by or to indulge in horse play.

Apart from the annoyance of this sort of thing, the moral effect of this habit on boys is very bad. Something ought to be done to bring parents to a sense of their duty to their children, both boys and girls, in this connection.

There are complaints in Peterboro of children being out on the street up till ten o'clock at night in the neighborhood of Brock street rink. It is a habit with some parents to go out of an evening and leave their youngsters on the streets.

The proper place for children after dark is in the home, and if they are not put to bed they should be put to do something educative, interesting or amusing. If all parents would realize the importance of bringing up their children to love their home, by making the home interesting of an evening, there would be no need of the curfew law.

But the fact is a great many children stay out in the streets because they know they are in the road in the home and are bundled to bed out of the way. The Star is quite right when it fixes the blame upon the parents; but how are you to get at these in this matter, only through the children?

WHAT'S THE GOOD OF AIR-SHIPS?

Aviation is a remarkable development of the mechanical art and displays the wonderful ingenuity and ability of the mind and hand of man. It might be said with some amount of certainty that there is nothing in nature that man cannot imitate.

He has become a fish, and has descended into the depths of the sea. He has become a bird and ascended above the clouds. Not without an enormous amount of sacrifice has he imitated the Creator in these things. And now, having accomplished these wonders, the wonder is what is he going to do with them?

It is a very thrilling experience to be able to soar up into the sky; poets have desired to do it. But for practical purposes, from a mechanical and utilitarian point of view, what is the good of it all?

Here is Germany building large whale-like inflated bladders, with a stage and steering gear dangling beneath; and launching them upon the sky with apparently no other object than that of a boy flying a kite.

As for the use of aeroplanes or airships in time of war they would be more of a nuisance than a practical help. Even in times of peace they are an expensive and dangerous luxury, and would in war time be more of a menace to the nation using them than to an enemy.

It has been admitted that these air machines are absolutely useless in bad weather and the prospect of an invasion of England by German airships is too comical for anything to those who know the unreliability of weather conditions in the British Isles.

The Germans should study more closely the history of England and take to heart the lesson of the Armada which fared so badly at the hands of the weather three hundred years ago.

EDITORIAL NOTES

What has become of the love lyric? No longer does the poet sing of his lady love in the Poet's Corner of the newspaper. An English writer attributes the disappearance of love lyrics to the modern movement of womankind toward the ballot.

But are there no love lyrics today? Any music dealer will tell you that his "best seller" is the sentimental love song. And this notwithstanding the suffragettes.

Smoking is permitted in prisons in Belgium as a reward for good behavior. If such a rule were enforced in a newspaper office there would be no smoking.

PRICE OF FLOUR

Not Likely to be Lower Than at Present This Year

In speaking of the possibility of a decline in the price of flour, though the large crop in the west, a prominent flour and feed merchant gives the following statement:

"The crop in Canada does not make the prices," said he, "and there is no likelihood of lower prices. The latter are governed by the world's crop and are set in the European markets, particularly in the United Kingdom, which is far the largest consumer of wheat. The estimate made by the International Institute of Rome of the world's visible supply for this year is 3,330 million bushels, which is about four per cent. larger than last year. This increase is not a very large one, and will have practically no effect upon the prices."

The merchant explained that the increase in the Canadian crop was about ten millions over last year, and that the important feature was the general improvement in the quality of the crop.

DOWN ON THE DEAR OLD FARM

Young Farmer Has His Bath Tub in the Barn

While on a tour of inspection recently, Hon. Adam Beck called on a farmer who had a short time before installed farm equipment operated by Hydro-electric power. Entering the barn the Minister was surprised to find a young man enjoying a bath in a tub placed on the concrete stable floor. While the modest bather hastened to warn off the intruders, the Minister of Power stepped up to the tub to investigate.

"What are you doing here?" he asked.

"Oh, nothing, only having a bath," came the indifferent reply. "The women in the house haven't anything on us now. We put in Hydro power lately and now we have thirty gallons of boiling water in the barn any time we want it. Why, the women call on us when they want hot water now."

DAINTY TINY NESTS.

Those of the Humming Bird Are About the Size of a Walnut.

The most exquisitely dainty home built by the bill and feet of birds is that of the ruby throated humming bird. When completed it is scarcely larger than an English walnut and is usually saddled on a small horizontal limb of a tree or shrub frequently many feet from the ground.

This dainty domicile is composed almost entirely of soft plant fibers, fragments of spiders' webs sometimes being used to hold them in shape. The sides are thickly studded with bits of lichen, and practiced indeed is the eye of the man who can distinguish it from a knot on the limb. The eggs are the size of quinine pills.

Although the humming bird's nest is exceedingly frail, there appears to be nothing on record to show that any great numbers of them come to grief during the summer rains. It is, however, not called upon for a long tenure of occupancy. Within three weeks after the two little white eggs are laid the young have departed on their tiny pinions.—Craftsman.

Cold, Heat and Humidity.

In hot weather less food is needed; there is more blood in the internal organs, the skin acts more and the kidneys act less than in mild weather.

In cold weather more food is needed; the skin acts less and the kidneys more. There is more desire for active exercise.

Humidity reduces the actual heat of the air in summer, but increases its oppressiveness and makes people lethargic and relaxed. The perspiration does not evaporate and the pores get clogged. In cold weather dry air leaves the body free to retain or give up its natural heat according to its needs, but moist air brings about a leakage of bodily warmth that is difficult to prevent. Clothes will not do it, and wind increases it. That is why we feel damp cold so much more than dry.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

An Arab Honeymoon.

For seven days after the wedding the Arab bride and bridegroom are supposed not to leave their room. The bride may see none of her own family and only the women folk of her husband, who wait on her. She remains in all her wedding finery and paint and does absolutely nothing. The bridegroom generally slips out at night after three days and sees a few friends privately, but he persistently hides from his wife's family, and should he by accident meet his father-in-law before the seven days are over he turns his back and draws his burnoose, or haik, over his face. This is their view of a honeymoon, and they grow as weary of it as any European couple do of their enforced continental tour.—Wide World Magazine.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 29.—Wheat markets generally opened weaker on Liverpool early cables and heavy receipts. Later, with a keen demand for cash and export wheat, assisted by firmer closing cables than expected from Liverpool, prices advanced steadily, closing with a gain for October and December. May was at one time 1¼c higher, and closed ⅞c up.

The cash demand for all grades of wheat was excellent, and offerings heavy, while export enquiry was active, bids about in line, and some heavy sales were made.

Cash wheat prices closed unchanged, ⅛c to ¼c higher.

Oats opened unchanged and flax lower, both firming later in sympathy with wheat. Oats options closed ⅜c to ⅜c higher. New flax options closed ½c down for October and ⅜c up for December, with May unchanged. Cash oats closed unchanged, ⅛c to ⅜c higher. Cash flax closed unchanged.

Two days' inspections, Saturday and Sunday, totaled 2914 cars, of which 2244 were wheat, and offerings number 2014 were "contract." In sight on Monday for inspection were 1600 cars.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 27 were 4250 cattle, 6350 sheep and lambs, 3100 hogs, and 2100 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale amounted to 3100 cattle, 3900 sheep and lambs, 1800 hogs and 1600 cattle.

Supplies of all kinds of live stock continue to come forward very freely, the receipts for last week being the largest on record for any one week for many months past, while the offerings on the market this morning were in excess of anything for one day for a considerable time past, which is attributed to the continued good demand for common bulls, stockers and grass fed calves for shipment to the United States, there being over 50 carloads forwarded for the above market alone last week. From present indications the shipments will probably be even larger this week, as the demand from American buyers was brisk today, which resulted in a very active trade. There is no actual change in the condition of the market, prices being firmly held with sales of common bulls at $3.75 to $4; stockers at $3.75 to $4.75 per 100 pounds, and grass-fed calves at 3½c to 4c per pound. In addition to the above demand local packing concerns were also operating freely in common stock for canning purposes at $3.75 to $4 for bulls, and at $2.25 to $2.75 for cows per 100 pounds.

The supply of butchers' cattle was not large, but on account of the increased offerings of common grades there was no important change in prices to note, the market being firm for useful stock. The gathering of buyers was large, and owing to the continued cool weather and increased consumption of beef of late the demand was good, but on account of the scarcity of really choice steers buyers as a rule had to satisfy their wants with the next best grade of cattle, and sales of full carloads of good steers were made at $6.50, and a few small lots of picked choice steers as high as $7 to $7.25 per 100 pounds.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.00 to $7.25; do., medium, $5.50 to $6.50; do., common, $4.50 to $5.00; canners, $3.50 to $4.00; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5.50 to $5.75, do., medium, $4.50 to $5.00, do. bulls, $4.25 to $5.50, milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80, milkers, com. and medium, each, $65 to $70, springers, $55 to $65.

Sheep, ewes, $4.25 to $4.50; bucks and culls, $4.00, lambs, $5.75 to $6.15.

Hogs, f.o.b., $9.40 to $9.75; calves $5.00 to $15.00.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Cattle—Receipts 23,000. Market steady to 15c lower. Beeves, $7.30 to $9.50; Texas steers, $7.05 to $8; stockers and feeders, $5.40 to $8; cows and heifers, $3.85 to $8.75; calves, $7.75 to $11.25.

Hogs—Receipts 39,000. Market strong. Light, $8.40 to $9.05; mixed, $8.15 to $9.05; heavy, $8 to $9; rough, $8 to $8.20; pigs, $4 to $7.75; bulk of sales, $8.50 to $8.75.

Sheep—Receipts 38,000. Market mostly 10c to 15c higher. Native, $3.70 to $4.75; yearlings, $4.85 to $5.75; lambs, native, $5.75 to $7.80.

MARY'S FIRST LOVE

Accident in a Mine Is the Means of Settling a Lovers' Quarrel.

BY H. M. EGBERT.

The clanging bell had roused the countryside. It was no unaccustomed sound, the deep, dull reverberations which called the men to work in the gray hours of morning, struck sharply for the noon recess, and tolled more soberly—as it seemed—at six, when the day's toil was over. But those three sharp staccato calls, the seconds of silence, and again the three brazen alarms meant only one thing: There had been an accident at the mine.

It had been a fancy of old Pennyman to place a bell at the pit head in place of the accustomed whistle—perhaps because, in that overcrowded factory and mining region, whistles were too plentiful to be readily distinguishable. But for five years the bell had tolled each day, and never before had the three threatening calls resounded.

"Nine men cut off by fire damp," ran the word, and everyone knew what that meant. Volunteers were already below, searching among the galleries for the unconscious victims of that deadly outpour of asphyxiating gases from the clefts and seams.

One woman stood apart from the rest; unlike the rest, too, she had no child. She was an American, barely thirty, one would have said; she stood trembling, but with averted eyes. She had no wish to look down into that inferno. One of the guards approached her. He had not seen her for three years.

"You, Mary!" he stammered awkwardly. "Why don't you go home? Everything will come out right."

She raised her haunted eyes to his. "John, is my—my husband down there?" she asked quietly, and he bowed his head.

Three years before John Pascoe and Mary Evans had been sweethearts. Their marriage day had been set, even the house furnished, when the bitter quarrel arose which had destroyed their happiness. The cause was trivial, as often happens, but the quarrel became the harsher. Words passed—and Mary threw the ring into Pascoe's face.

"Never come back to me," she said as she turned away. She waited for him to return, but John Pascoe never did. He had the Welsh obstinacy in his nature, which makes mountains of molehills. Each waited for the other's advances. After three months Mary married Will Sturgis, a capable, middle-aged contract miner. He was kind, when sober, but he was seldom that. John had heard sinister descriptions of their relationship. He had done all but strike her; and if he had not done that, it was because he knew that the first blow would never be repeated.

Mary would have left him long since. She could not bear to think that John would know how disastrous her adventure had been. She hid her wounds and passed, in the eyes of her little world, as a docile, submissive wife.

John Pascoe knew the Pennyman mine like a book, for he had toiled in its multitudinous galleries for years before old Pennyman, struck by his build and air of refinement, had made him one of the guards—a privileged post. He seldom met Sturgis.

"Is my husband down there?" Mary had asked, and John Pascoe was silent. He bowed his head in affirmation.

"There's the elevator bell," he exclaimed suddenly. "The volunteers must be coming up with the bodies—I mean the survivors," he said clumsily. "No doubt your husband is among them, Mrs. Sturgis. Will you wait here while I go and see?"

For an instant her eyes met his, and he saw the agony in them. Even in his despair that involuntary glance sent a thrill through him. Mary still cared, then, even as he cared; he read her soul aright; there was no doubting. A little light gleamed through the dark clouds that hung over him. Even though that were their last meeting, what matter, so long as Mary loved him?

He forced his way through the screaming, frantic women, pushing them back as gently as was possible, and made his way through the guards to the pit head. The elevator was just emerging out of the cavernous gloom. Of the ten volunteers, but seven had returned; they brought five men with them—five living men. But there was no Sturgis there.

Four of the victims and three of the volunteers still remained below. In that gloomy, subterranean world, disorganized by the fact that the explosion had occurred at closing time, when all were making for the mouth of the shaft, it was each for himself. None knew where his comrade lay. As the elevator waited at the entrance Pascoe and half a dozen more volunteers climbed in. The button was pressed and the cage shot toward the earth.

It halted where the slope ceased, and the men disappeared in the gloom, shouting to one another. Pascoe did not hear them. They knew the scene of the accident—but he was bent upon a single quest. He ran lightly over the masses of fallen slate and shale which choked the entrance to Sturgis' new heading, and then, crouching, made his way cautiously under the overhanging, untimbered rocks. Far behind him tiny electric lights twinkled, a cluster of fairy lamps, but their light did not penetrate into these subterranean recesses. Sometimes Pascoe, advancing now at a snail's pace, with arms outstretched, collided with boulders, sharp of edge and jagged of tooth, which bruised and cut him; then again he was climbing upon masses of disrupted cliff, blasted by Sturgis and not yet removed from the irregular gallery.

Then, just as Pascoe found the narrowing tunnel too small to permit further progress, he heard a feeble answer to his cry. He turned and groped his way toward the source of it, stumbled over a body, and found himself kneeling at Sturgis' side.

"Thank God!" he shouted with the joy that comes to all men who are given the saving of human life. At that moment he forgot Mary, forgot the years of slow cruelty, the uselessness of the man lying at his feet, whose death would give back the joy of living to both of them. "Are you hurt, Sturgis?" he shouted.

"My legs are broken, I think," the miner answered. "Somebody shouted 'fire damp' at the end of the gallery, and I ran out to see. I passed near somebody's fuse. The dog had left it burning, and taken to his heels. I got the charge and the rock. Who are you?"

Pascoe did not reply to this question. "I'm going to hoist you on my back," he said. "Get your arms round my neck and bend your head to the level of mine, to avoid bumping. Ready? Now!"

Sturgis groaned as Pascoe raised him, and his legs trailed uselessly. Pascoe forbore to touch them; thus the labor was almost intolerable. He fought his way almost by inches out of that inferno until the twinkling lights in the distance began to separate and the central gallery appeared.

He was almost upon it when suddenly his tongue seemed to fill his throat; he could not breathe. He heard the man on his back cry once and begin choking. Pascoe knew well what had happened. They had run into a stratum of fire damp, which had filtered out of its gallery into the central passage.

Purple in the face, unable to draw a breath, he staggered on with an effort almost superhuman. He felt his lungs bursting; then all at once he was drawing in great gasps of air again, and the distant shaft appeared, a glimmering thing, ghostly in the obscurity.

He did not dare set Sturgis down, for the deadly fire damp might be upon them at any moment again; besides, the pain in his injured legs would become intolerable with further handling. He heard the man's quick, sharp intakes of breath and stumbled onward. He had covered thirty paces when the fire damp was upon him again.

He felt his senses leaving him. The lights in the distance changed into swinging lanterns. He knew that he could go no further. Very gently he fell to his knees, letting Sturgis' body slide off his back upon the ground. His last thoughts would be of Mary; he thanked God that he had been permitted to see her once again.

He thought he heard a distant call, and tried to shout, but his mouth only opened aimlessly. Not a sound came from his closed air-passages. But it was at that moment that a fresh body of volunteers swung into the gallery; at the same moment, too, one of those faint stirrings of air which take the place of wind in the mines, hurried the thin gas into the heart of the workings. The newcomers fell over the bodies and bore them to the elevator. Ten minutes later Pascoe opened his eyes on earth.

At first he could only see the struggling crowd at the pit head, and then, between the patches of moving color, he made out an interposing figure that bent over him. He looked up, to see Mary's face, and all at once he remembered.

"Where is he?" he cried, struggling to rise, but helpless against her gentle pressure. "I found him, Mary; I dragged him to the central gallery. He must be near!"

"Hush, John!" said Mary. Even now her face was emotionless. She showed neither sorrow nor joy. But in her eyes he saw that light again and his being thrilled in response to it.

"Where is he?" he cried eagerly. "I must go back if he has not been rescued. I—"

"He is here," Mary answered. "He is dead, John."

Then he knew why she had neither laughed nor wept.

"Nero" Was Only a Pup.

Mr. Raymond appeared at his neighbor's one evening at dusk in a towering rage and uttering fierce threats against his neighbor's dog Nero. Vainly the neighbor tried to explain that Nero was only a puppy. "He belongs to Johnny," he went on, "and it would break Johnny's heart if anything happened to him. I think," hopefully, "that his manners will improve."

"Manners!" repeated Raymnod. "I'm not complaining of his manners, but his nature. After he has jumped all over me he bit the back of my leg."

"That's as far as he can reach," broke in Johnny in a wounded tone "You don't expect a little pup like him to bite a big man like you on the neck, do you, Mr. Raymond?"—Youth's Companion.

Song of the East Indian Laborer.

When drawing water from the wells, the man in charge of the operation invariably encourages the bullocks with a cheery sing-song, at the critical moment when they are raising the heavy leather pouch of water from the well, and if he was to remain silent the Indian bullock, who is a strong conservative, would certainly refuse to start. I once listened to the song which the men sang when they were making mortar. It was something like this. "Oh, bullocks! what a work you are doing, going round and round making mortar for the masons. Oh, bullocks! go faster, go faster! The masons will cry out, oh, bullocks, for more mortar—more mortar. So go faster go faster!"—From "India and the Indians."

GOT GAY ON THE STAGE.

Irving Spoiled the Scene the Only Time He Broke His Rule.

The note about actors who try to "queer" other actors on the stage, writes a correspondent, reminds me of a story of the only time when Henry Irving was guilty of such a thing. He was acting Othello, to the Desdemona of the late Miss Bateman, and every Saturday night the performance was followed by a very pleasant little supper party.

Desdemona was strangled on a bed at the back of the stage, and part of Irving's "business" was to leave the bed and then, going back to it, to draw the curtains slightly aside and peep in at the body, afterward turning a face of inexpressible anguish toward the audience. His face, his shudder and the deep drawn sigh which he gave were among the most impressive parts of one of his greatest creations.

As a rule, he sternly suppressed any levity on the stage, but one Saturday night, as he drew back the curtain, he said, in a sepulchral whisper, "What have we for supper, Desdemona?" Alas! Miss Bateman was unequal to the strain, and a merry laugh from the corpse rang through the house.

Never again, I believe, did Irving break his own rule of seriousness on the stage. It was told me (adds our correspondent) by my father, who was at the supper party on the night it occurred.—Manchester Guardian.

Thrived on Poor Writing.

Illegible handwriting may prove an aid to prosperity. The late Lord Goschen said of his father. "He has told me half in joke and half in earnest that when he came to London he was obliged to found a firm because he wrote such a bad hand that no one would take him for a clerk." Of Lord Goschen himself his biographer remarks: "In his latter years he might have [illegible] as he chose, for no one [illegible] affirmed with certainty [illegible] 'Ts' he might have put in [illegible]' At length his script be[illegible]cipherable even by Goschen [illegible]. He could not, when speaking in parliament make out what it was that he had put on paper, and he thus came in later years to abandon almost entirely his old practice of making notes."

THREE MEN IN A HOUSE

According to Officers They Made Quite a Row

Charged with causing a disturbance in their homes at the corner of Queen and Hunter streets, Wm. Cole, Wm. Boker and Arthur Hall, faced the magistrate this morning. They pleaded guilty and were each fined $5 to be paid in three days.

Evidence by Detective Newhall was to the effect that the three men were engaged in a free-for-all fight, Hall was trying to stifle the cries of the Boker children by throwing a blanket over their heads, the detective said.

Cole and Boker were fighting. Shortly before the police arrived they were engaged in smashing bottles on the sidewalk. The small baby of Boker's is in a serious condition as result of the fracas.

Constable Meagher said he was standing at the post office corner and he heard the screaming and swearing. Rushing over to the place he found everything upside down.

"All I was doing was to try and keep the baby quiet," said Hall.

"All helped to make the row," said the Magistrate as he imposed the

REV. CANON TROOP HAS RESIGNED

Rector of St. Martin's Church Montreal Going to England

After surprising his parishioners at the Sunday morning service by the announcement that he was resigning his charge after 27 years incumbency, and was about to leave for England, the Rev. Canon Osborne Troop of St. Martin's church, Montreal, gave a remarkable summary of the manner in which his views had changed and broadened during his ministry.

In earlier years he had declined to speak for the Bible Society. Now he could support the Salvation Army the Y.M.C.A., the Keswick Movement and the High Churchman. He was equally willing to preach in the streets or in Westminster Abbey, in a Roman Catholic church, a Jewish synagogue or a Mohammedan or Buddhist temple, if allowed, believing that "We are all one in Jesus Christ."

Canon Troop recalled that this change of opinion had brought him into conflict with a section of his parishioners. St. Martin's, when he assumed his rectorship, had been a wealthy church, but never a full one. In an endeavor to improve this latter condition, he had persuaded the vestry, after four years, to abolish pew rents and merely to appropriate the pews. When, in 1900 he decided that even appropriation was unwise a famous vestry meeting followed at which he handed in his resignation.

When he had first arrived, the Church had a debt of $27,000, while now, with the exception of $5,000 on part of the church property, it was entirely free.

Canon Troop announced that he was not going to take another parish but did not expect he would be quiet long. He was going to England in a few weeks to live.

Canon Troop came to Montreal from the Maritime Provinces. He spent the first eight years of his ministry in [illegible]fax and St. John.

MISSIONARY CAMPAIGN OF PETERBORO' LAYMEN

Monster Meeting Being Arranged to Take Place on November 13.

The laymen of the Protestant churches of Peterborough are at active work in connection with the Provincial Missionary Campaign which is to be conducted throughout the Province this fall. Already representatives of the Protestant churches of Peterborough have held several meetings. Officers and committees have been appointed and the preliminary plans laid which should insure Peterborough's doing its part in this great movement.

To-morrow there is to be held in Toronto an inter-denominational conference at which representatives will be present from all parts of the province. Most, if not all of the churches in Peterborough will have from one, [illegible] three or four representatives at this conference. The conference will open with a banquet at 1 o'clock in the Parish House, St. James' Cathedral. This banquet and succeeding meetings will be addressed among others by Mr. J. Campbell White, of New York; George Innes, of Philadelphia; Mornay Williams, of New York, Dr. Andrew S. Grant, of Toronto, and other noted leaders in the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

On November 13th it is proposed to hold a somewhat similar banquet of laymen in Peterborough. Churches outside of the city are each to be invited to send three laymen and their pastors. An effort is to be made to have 600 or 700 men attend this banquet. It also will be addressed by well known outside speakers who will explain the objects of the movement, what it has already accomplished, and what it is proposed to accomplish at this time. There will also be a couple of conferences at which arrangements for the campaign in Peterborough will be completed.

During the first week in December there will be a similtaneous campaign in the city by the various churches to increase their missionary givings. Some of the churches will perhaps make a canvass to increase their givings for current expenses as well.

Good Form

Personal Remarks.

The habit of making personal remarks grows upon people, and many are surprised when informed that there can be no greater breach of etiquette.

In any place where a conversation can be overheard mischief beyond repairing is often done by remarks concerning the personal affairs of either the speaker or her friends. Usually it is women that make these remarks. Men have to be more careful, for the reason that they may reap the just reward of a knockdown from some one overhearing.

Ofter these remarks are made from an overwhelming sense of curiosity. An incident relates a story of a very young girl who, attending a large reception, noticed a most peculiar looking woman standing near and as soon as conventional greetings were over eagerly inquired of her hostess, "Dear Mrs. X., who is that dreadful woman standing over there by the door?" Imagine her horror when the reply came in cold tones, "That is my mother." She fled to a near friend to tell her tale of woe and received then and there a lecture that lasted through life on the importance of keeping her remarks confined to other things than personal matters.

It is bad taste, which means a breach of etiquette, to ask anything about anybody in a crowd, whether it be at a reception, on the street, in a public conveyance or in any case excepting perhaps the name of a person.

Ofter the very person for whom the curiosity is felt is really of importance in a way, may be a celebrity, eccentric in dress and bearing, so it is well to steer clear of personal remarks unless in the nature of a compliment. The woman who is invited to spend any time with friends will do well to remember this law, for it is a law of etiquette, before making any sort of remark about one guest to another or to her hostess about any guest present. She may find herself in very deep water and never be invited again.

People are prone to talk about people, not about things, and that is why one woman got the reputation of being "the best talker about the weather" ever heard. She had found it a safe topic and kept herself out of trouble by using all her powers to make it her one pet subject.

Our Courtesy.

"There is nothing which so exalts and graces a man in the opinion of others as his politeness and consideration for his wife. Instead of being, as some unfortunately feel it, unmanly and weak, it is the highest type of manliness, and to such service of love and respect the woman will invariably respond with all the tenderness and affection of her nature," says an authority on etiquette.

What a splendid thing it would be if every married man would take that paragraph into his heart and model his manner to his wife upon it!

One of the awkward moments a guest sometimes experiences is being a witness of a man's rudeness to his wife. Sympathy for the woman, wrath at the man and indignation on her own behalf—for rudeness to his wife indicates the man would be discourteous to all women if he dared—make her contemptuous of one so lacking in true manliness. Fault finding about food, criticism over small oversights, impatience over errors at cards—all trivial matters that a man should regard as the accidents of the moment and rise above—make the spectator wonder how the wife fares in the privacy of home.

Such things wound and humiliate the wife and lessen her love. Yes, they do. How can she believe in a man's love who will not regard her feelings in public at least? She laughs them off—it is the only thing she can do—or she passes them over in silence, but she knows how other women regard them, and she knows her husband's stock is going below par in their estimation, and that hurts her pride in him.

Rules For the Well Bred.

It is not proper to tuck one's handkerchief inside the open neck of one's gown, making use of this opening as a place of safety for the mouchoir, and no person who desires to be thought well bred will do it. To pull out even a handkerchief from inside one's waist is unrefined. The handkerchief should be kept up the sleeve, which fashion still countenances, or in a fancy bag to match the gown, which is one of the fads of the summer.

Either through thoughtlessness or ignorance some women have a trick of continually fussing at the neck of a low cut waist. They give it little pulls, as if it did not fit comfortably, or hitch it with their shoulders as if they felt out of place in it. Such a movement is most unpleasant, for it not only makes the person who does it conspicuous, but it calls attention to probable defects which were better concealed.

POLITICIAN'S DEATH

Sir Samuel Gillott, ex-Attorney-General and Secretary of State for Victoria, Australia, met with a tragic death at Sheffield, a few days ago. Sir Samuel was a native of Sheffield, and was on a visit to England with Lady Gillott, staying with his cousin in Sheffield. About two o'clock in the morning a noise was heard, and his cousins, on rising, found Sir Samuel lying at the bottom of a flight of stairs. He was conscious, and on being asked if he could account for his fall, the only theory he could put forward was that he must have got up in a half-awakened state and walked to the head of the stairs, from which he fell.

CARDINAL GIBBONS ON CHURCH UNITY

Would Gladly Sacrifice His Remaining Years to Help Movement

But First Requirement He Says is Recognition of the Pope

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 30.— Cardinal Gibbons has given his views on church unity—probably the first time the views have been expressed by a Roman Catholic prelate of the standing and influence of the Cardinal.

"The reunions of the scattered branches of Christiandom is a consummation devoutly to be wished and I would gladly sacrifice the remaining years of my life in lending a helping hand toward this blessed result.

"The first essential requirement," he continued, "is the recognition of the Sovereign Pontiff who, as the successor of St. Peter, is the divinely appointed head of Christendom. Every organization, whether religious, civic or political, needs a head for its peace and security as well as for its very existence.

"Once the proper position of the Pope is recognized I do not believe that the other controverted doctrines are as formidable as is commonly imagined. When a proper explanation is given of the various dogmas upon which Christianity is founded, I am persuaded that the logical sense of the people would prompt them to accept.

"But devoutly as we wish for such a union," continued the Cardinal, "we must wait for the consequence of the individual to bring about a state when union becomes possible. There are three courts—the civil tribunal, the criminal tribunal and the court of conscience. And until the last of these acts, until the soul demands union, in a word such a moment arrives, the time is not ripe.

"The union of the Churches would bring about an era of civilization unknown in history. You and I may not live to see it, but it will come, I hope, and then the only undivided church will flourish and triumph."

HORSE FELL HEADLONG INTO SEWER TRENCH

And the Animal Being an Old Nag Escaped Injury

Considerable excitement was caused last night about 7.30, when a horse belonging to White Bros. fell headlong in a sewer opening just opposite the Peter Hamilton Company on George street.

The horse, which was driven by Joseph Turner, was proceeding southward but in some manner walked into the sewer. Had the move been intentional the result could not have been more complete. A crowd of men at once gathered upon the scene and took a hand in extricating the horse from its most uncomfortable and dangerous position.

Ropes and other articles were rigged up as a tackle and after fully twenty minutes of pulling and prying the horse was finally landed on the road.

Despite the fact that everybody thought the animal's neck was broken, the horse managed to get to its feet and walk off as if nothing had happened.

THE AFTERMATH.

Joseph Turner, charged with being drunk while in charge of a vehicle, appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning. He pleaded guilty and was fined $2.

If a woman is jealous she always insists that she's no such thing.

A WOMAN OF PURPOSE

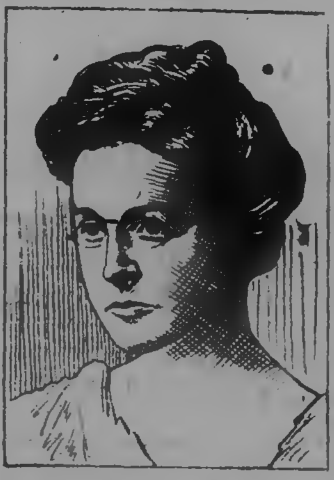
DR. HELEN MACMURCHY GETS WHAT SHE GOES AFTER.

Ontario's New Inspector of the Feeble-Minded Has Had a Notable Career In Pioneering Her Ideas—Has Paid Special Attention to Care of Defectives and Now Has a Chance to Experiment.

Dr. Helen MacMurchy, Ontario's new inspector of the feeble-minded, is something like the Bible, because she will afford you an argument for pretty nearly everything you want to prove, says Eleanor Sanderson in Toronto Star Weekly. She has gone round upsetting everybody's little pet theories regarding woman and her sphere with a reckless disregard for precedent, and without saying a word about it, which upsets another theory. The suffragettes cling eagerly to her genius and success in doing work usually done by men. The antis love her because she never makes speeches calling them remnants of the caveman period, and besides she makes children her chief concern. Slowly and surely she has grown into her own, and since the sterling worth of the brain power in her work has become felt in the land, honor upon honor has been heaped upon her.

In 1901 she received the degree of M.D. of the University of Toronto. After this she studied for some time at Johns Hopkins University, and was appointed resident medical assistant at Toronto General Hospital. In her general practice she soon specialized in the study of the feeble-minded, and her census on this subject prepared in 1906 was of great value.

From that time on Dr. MacMurchy's career was made, and in rapid succession she received appointments as vice-president of the Charities and Correction Association in 1908, delegate to the British Medical Association congress, and representative for Ontario to the International Conference on Infant Mortality at Baltimore.



DR. HELEN MACMURCHY.

Even England took notice when her report on infant mortality was issued in 1911.

The position of Inspector of Feeble-Minded in Ontario, to which she has been called, is a new appointment in the gift of the Government. Her duties in this field are as broad as her physical strength and her time will permit her to accomplish.

Literally these duties are "to inspect all prisons and public charities, and give particular attention to the custodian care of the feeble-minded." What this may involve can be guessed by anyone who has visited small towns and rural communities, where the village half-wits have wandered free, not infrequently to end their unhappy careers in sordid murder or some other crime. Then there are the cases in which families have endeavored to restrain their feeble minded offspring, and great cruelty is often practiced, sometimes in ignorance, and sometimes in brutality. Dr. MacMurchy is now the hope of these wretched human beings, who will be cared for in proper institutions. And all the real or fanciful woes of those already confined will be heard and investigated. It sounds very strenuous, but those who know Dr. MacMurchy and her quiet, forceful character, are confident that she will not only fulfill all that is expected of her position, but probably create new duties and channels of action in the reform nearest her heart.

Trying To Dodge a Curse.

In the Bodleian Library at Oxford, says Prof. Thayer, an old manuscript contains this warning: "This book belongs to St. Mary of Roberts Bridge; whosoever shall steal it, or sell it, or in any way alienate it from this house, let him be anathemamaranatha. Amen." Underneath this a later owner has written: "I, John, Bishop of Exeter, know not where the aforesaid house it, nor did I steal this book, but acquired it in a lawful way."

UNSTEADIED HIS NERVES.

M. Colombey, in his history of dueling, tells an anecdote of a certain noted duellist of his time.

One day this man, M. D., was at Desenne's shooting gallery in Paris watching the pistol practice. There was one man who was shooting very well and Desenne was threatened with the loss of all his glass balls and swinging dolls. Every shot was greeted by the spectators with exclamations of admiration.

B. looked on for awhile, and finally, in a calm voice, made the remark, "He could not do as well on the field."

The object of the slighting remark turned around, and in a loud and angry tone cried: "Who are you to say that? Would you like to test the truth of your remark?"

"Willingly," replied the unrecognized dentist as he led the way out to a secluded place. After taking their respective positions, they drew lots, and it fell to B. to shoot last. He waited in silence for his adversary's shot. The man fired—and missed.

B. lowered his pistol. "What did I tell you?" he said, with a smile. Then, putting his pistol in his pocket, he walked away whistling.

To Make Coal Mining Safe.

One of the simplest of the many suggested tests for fire-damp in mines is that described by Henry Briggs to the Scottish Society of Arts. It is an attachment that may be applied to any oil or spirit safety lamp, and consists of a loop of copper wire supported on a brass rod passing through the oil vessel. To make a test the loop is moved into the flame. This becomes instantly non-luminous, but if fire-damp is present in the air the gas-cap is clearly seen. The test can be made in a moment at any time, without turning down or putting out the light.

It is claimed that the percentage of fire-damp this method will detect is exceedingly small, and the results of trials on both laboratory and mine go to show that this is one of the most sensitive, accurate, and expeditious means of revealing the presence of inflammable gas in mine or other air. —Bolton Journal.

Irrepressible.

"Johnny, I'm afraid I'll have to whip you," said the mother of an incorrigible youngster.

"All right, mamma," he replied. "And after you whip me, may I have the whip to play horse with?"—Chicago News.

NATIVE MARRIAGES IN SOUTH AFRICA

The South African natives in Boerland still preserve their old customs, and one of the most curious is that of carrying off a girl for a wife. The custom is called "ukutwala," and the girl, though not indisposed to accept the man, causes every obstacle to be placed in his way.

The suitor watches his opportunity (after first placing so many head of cattle in the kraal of the girl's father) and eventually carries away the girl by main force.

The heartrending cries of the bride, as she is carried away, are something pitiful—a cry that pierces the heart of a Christian, but his pity subsides when he learns that in native language it means:

"Don't take me, but don't let any one help me, because I want to go!"

Remarkable School Record.

A remarkable school record was announced by Rev. H. M. Larner at the prize distribution at the Busbridge Elementary School, Godalming, Eng. Nine members of the Glazier family, of Clock Barn Lodge, Busbridge, he stated, had the record of 60 years perfect attendance, having never been absent or late. The children had to walk some distance to school, and it was computed that they had walked as far as twice round the world.

Lodgers Went by Numbers.

In the course of an inquest at Southwark, Eng., recently the deputy of a common lodging-house in Bermondsey said he provided accommodation for 503 lodgers, most of whom were known by numbers. Many of them had fancy names. A juryman explained that habitues of common lodging-houses could "job along" very well on a few shillings a week. A man could get a mutton chop for 2 1-2d., 2 lbs. of potatoes for 1d., and a pennyworth of potherbs, which would make a fine stew. (Laughter.)

Some men are ambitious to do good; others to make good.

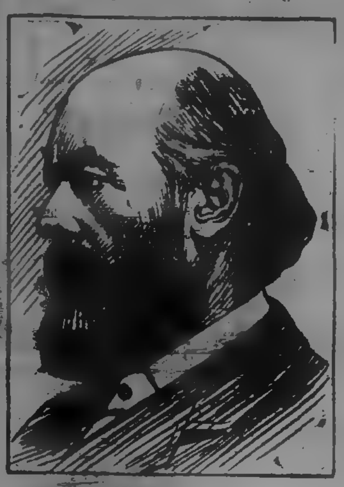
HERE AND HEREAFTER

SIR OLIVER LODGE ANNOUNCES CERTAINTY OF IMMORTALITY.

Celebrated British Scientist After Applying the Most Rigid Tests to Spiritistic Phenomena For Many Years Has Arrived at the Conclusion That Their Reality Is Beyond Question.

It will be remembered that W. T. Stead, heroic victim of the Titanic disaster, welcome acquaintance of Kings and Emperors and others in the seats of the mighty, and probably the most noted journalist in the world, was a firm believer in psychic communication with the world of the hereafter. When preparing to face death, he reiterated that belief and spoke of joining his previously deceased son, from whom he had stated, verbally and in carefully prepared printed volumes he had received numerous messages from the spirit world through the medium of an inhabitant of that region whom he knew as "Julia."



SIR OLIVER LODGE.

Science has now taken a decided hand in this problem, debated and debateable from the beginning of sentient existence, in a recent statement of the famous Englishman, Sir Oliver Lodge, admittedly the best all-round scientist in the world at the present time. He is president of the British Association, the most authoritative scientific body on earth, and he has announced that in his presidential address on September 10, he will offer complete evidence to show "an ultimate continuity of existence before and after death as essential to science," which, if accepted, will be a distinct alignment of the most advanced scientific thought on the side of immortality. Sir Oliver already has asserted that "the boundary between the two states—the known and the unknown, life and death — is wearing thin in places, and excavators are engaged in boring a tunnel from opposite ends. We are beginning to hear now and then strokes from the pickaxes of our comrades on the other side."

Sir Oliver Lodge has been a close and skeptical student of psychical phenomena for many years, and after long and patient observance of the famous Italian psychic, Eusapia Palladino, was forced to admit that "any person without invincible prejudice, who had the same experiences, would come to the same broad conclusion, namely, that things heretofore held impossible do actually occur. . . The result of my experience is to convince me that certain phenomena considered supernatural do belong to the order of nature."

It is evident that the world is soon to witness the promulgation of another accession to the natural laws which govern its place in the universe, and one likely to arouse spirited religious and scientific discussion.

Appropriate.

A Milwaukee man went to order a wedding cake the other day.

"I'm getting married," he said, "and I want a cake."

"Well, it's the latest thing," said the salesgirl, "to have wedding cakes in harmony with the bridegroom's calling or profession. Thus a journalist has a spice cake, a musician an oat cake, an athlete a cup cake, a man who loafs on his friends a sponge cake, and so forth and so on. What is your calling, please?"

"I am a pianist."

"Then, of course," said the girl, "you'll want a pound cake."—Exchange.

GIN PILLS Brought Relief

Larder Lake, Ont., March 26th.

I heard of your GIN PILLS and decided to give them a trial at once. I sent my chum 60 miles to get them and I am pleased to inform you that in less than six hours, I felt relief.

In two days, the pain had left me entirely. I took about half a box, and today I feel as well as ever and my kidneys are acting quite natural again."

AN ENGINEER'S STORY

Why the Veteran Driver Stopped Drinking After Saving President's Special.

BY FRANK FILSON.

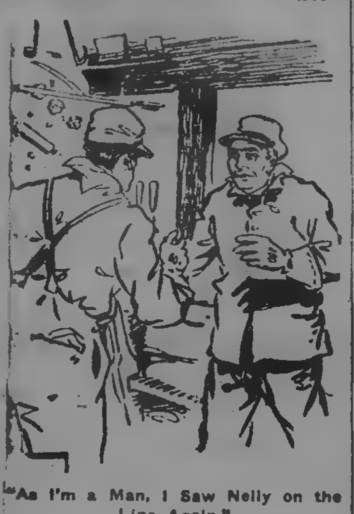
"Did you see that old, gray-headed fellow that went into the cab of No. 34?" asked the engine driver. "That's Joe Egan. How old should you say he was, now? Fifty-five? Joe's seventy-two, come next July, friend, and in spite of his age, there isn't a man that can handle his engine better than Joe, or that's more looked up to by the men and better thought of by the company. And it must be nigh on thirty years since what I'm going to tell you happened to Joe.

"Thirty years ago—that brings us back to the early eighties, don't it? The companies wasn't so particular in those days as what they are now. Nowadays, if a man wants a drop before going on duty he's got to take the bottle out of his pocket when nobody ain't watching him, and eat a cough drop afterwards, or else, likely as not, he'll be hunting a job next morning. But in the times I'm speaking of, the company didn't care whether a man drank or not, as long as he looked sober, and spoke sober, and brought his train in on time. And, drunk or sober, Joe never made any mistakes with his engine.

"Still, there wasn't many nights when he didn't come in to Tapham a little soaked, and it got to the superintendent's ears. The company didn't want to get rid of Joe, for he was a pretty steady man, and although the new ideas about drinking had just begun to come into use, still, everybody made excuses for Joe. You see, he'd been through the fire and done what it ain't given to many men to have to do.

"Joe lived by the line, about half a mile this side of Tapham, in a little brick house situated just where the trestle across the Mohegan begins to rise out of the swamp lands. He used to take his engine, with eight cars attached to it, over it on the return trip and run her into Tapham on the stroke of nine. Then he'd walk back home till his turn of duty come again. It was a ticklish spot, because the 8:07 from Waynesboro had the right of way a few minutes after the Tapham local got past.

"One night Joe was behind time. It wasn't his fault, I guess; anyway, just as he approached the trestle he heard the whistle of the 8:07. You know traffic was inconsiderable in those days and, whereas they'd have held her now, at that time one just took chances. It wasn't much of a risk. Joe saw that he could make the trestle, with a half minute to spare—only, just as he opened up, he saw his little girl on the line; just a speck of white in the night. Well, you can guess the rest. It was one life against a hundred, and Joe paid. The company buried her and voted him five hundred dollars; and that's why the superintendent didn't look too close into Joe's drinking habits. I didn't mention that the shock drove the mother crazy, did I? She recovered in time—after what I'm going to tell you had happened—and they're living in Tapham now, although they never had another child.



"As I'm a Man, I Saw Nelly on the Line Again."

"It must have been two years after the accident. Joe had been going from bad to worse. He was drunk nearly every night, and once or twice if it hadn't been for me—I was his fireman then—there'd have been another and worse accident. I used to talk to Joe about it, but of course that didn't do no good. At last I saw that it would be only a matter of weeks until a smash occurred, and I resolved to speak to the superintendent myself.

"It was the night after I'd come to that decision that Joe was taking his engine, as usual, into Tapham. There were only three cars that night, but they held the president of the road and his wife and daughters, and a party of guests. They were running through to celebrate the opening of some branch line or other. I spoke to Joe and he climbed into the cab.

"'Joe,' I said, 'give me that stuff I see sticking out of your pocket. They'll come along and shake hands with you at the end, same as fate, and that'll be your finish. Hand it over, Joe.'

"He was in an ugly mood that night and swore at me. The more I tried to put reason into his head the uglier he grew. He didn't care if the train went to smash, and the president and directors, too, he said. He cursed them all, from Mr. Hartman down to the local traffic manager, Bill Swayne, who'd always been Joe's friend and stood by him. I saw there wasn't no use arguing with a man in that condition, and as he was a match for two of me, and fighting would only have made things worse, I couldn't do nothing but stand by and hope for the best. And I wasn't altogether sorry, because it saved me from having to speak to Mr. Hitchens, the superintendent, myself.

"We made the run on good time. Joe was a good driver, however much he had been drinking, and I had seen him taking more than a few swigs at that bottle he carried. We weren't more than half a minute to the bad when the grade began to dip down into the mud flats five miles this side of the trestle. Joe put on speed here, meaning to slow up before we started on the upgrade toward the trestle again. I could see the line of trees across the river soon.

"'Slow her down, Joe!' I yelled at him, and he turned and cursed me and looked out on the line and began muttering something. There wasn't much danger, but I knew if Joe made the trestle at thirty miles he wouldn't last overnight as a driver for the Chesapeake and Excelsior. Then, all at once, he staggered back into the cab and a second later the brakes were down and the train screeched and whined as it came to a halt fifty feet from where the trestle begins.

"'Joe!' I yelled, but his face was whiter than paper. 'Bill Jones,' he said slowly, turning his eyes on mine, 'as I'm a man I saw Nellie on the line again!'

"I looked out. I couldn't see nothing. 'You're dreaming, Joe,' I said. But he wouldn't touch the throttle again; just stood rocking and moaning and muttering, 'Nelly!' Then I thought maybe some other kid had got under the wheels.

"A minute later the president was climbing along the footboard, with some of his guests. I wanted to save Joe. I told them he had seen something on the line. They looked, the whole party of them, but they couldn't find nothing. When they come back I couldn't keep them from seeing him no longer, and one look was enough. Joe was blind drunk—and in charge of the president's train.

"'Can you take her into Tapham!' he asked me. I could, but at the words Joe was at me like a madman. It would have been as much as my life was worth to try. And nobody wanted to tackle a drunken giant like Joe. So, as it was only half a mile, and the line would be clear for an hour to come, the whole party started to foot it into town.

"Well, friend, the trestle was down. There was a piece twenty yards long nipped clean out of the middle by the freshets. That's all. If Joe had run that train onto the trestle the whole party would have gone sheer into Kingdom Come. No, I'm not drawing any conclusions—only, that's how it come that Joe quit drinking and still drives his engine."

PROBING SECRET OF NATURE

Scientists So Far Have Been Unable to Ascertain How Gold is Compacted Into Nugget.

How do nuggets of gold originate? Sometimes a mass of the precious metal worth a thousand dollars or more is found. By what process was so much gold compacted into a lump? An attempt was made not long ago to answer this question. An investigator in Australia cut and sliced and polished gold nuggets with the sole purpose of finding out just what is their structure. The first thing he discovered was that there is one curious point of resemblance between gold nuggets and meteorites. Both, when polished and etched with chlorine water, exhibit a crystalline structure. In the case of meteorites, the lines thus exhibited on the etched surface are called Widmannstattian figures, and their presence is said to be one of the most invariable characteristics of those metallic bodies that fall from the sky to the earth.

But it is not meant to be implied that gold nuggets have fallen from the sky because they exhibit a crystalline structure recalling that of meteorites. The resemblance is apparently only superficial, and the crystals of the nuggets differ in form from those of the meteorites.

Another curious fact is that when a nugget is heated in a Bunsen flame explosions take place on its surface. Blisters are formed which continue to swell until they burst with a sharp report and bits of gold are violently scattered about. It is evident that the nuggets contain either gases or some liquids or solids which are easily converted into the gaseous form, the expansion of which produces the explosions.—Harper's Weekly.

End of Famous Messina Church.

The walls of the Church of San Michael at Messina, Italy, which was destroyed in the great earthquake of 1908 and has since been known as the charnel house, collapsed a few days ago. An immense quantity of bones of the corpses which had been buried there for many generations was scattered over the debris and gave it the appearance of being covered by snow. The mayor summoned the firemen, but their efforts to remove the bones of the dead were for a long time made impossible by the fact that the remaining walls threatened to collapse, and the work was continued with the greatest difficulty. The firemen eventually pulled down the charnel house entirely and finally collected the bones.

Up Speaks a Gallant Turk.

Zia Pasha, the Turkish Ambassador, was dining at the Ritz the other day when the lady he had taken in to dinner, an American, interrogated him about the custom in Turkey of maintaining a harem. "Ah, madame," replied the Turk, "if all women in Turkey were like you, I am sure they would be satisfied with monogamy."—

IS A PRINCE OF PARTS

ARTHUR OF CONNAUGHT HAS RARE ACCOMPLISHMENTS.

Son of Canada's Governor-General Who is Soon to Wed the Duchess of Fife is Known as the Admirable Chrichton of the Royal Family—He is An Ardent Soldier, Diplomat and Athlete.

There is much in common between Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife, whose betrothal has aroused so much interest and satisfaction. Their characters are very similar, both being quiet, serious-minded young people, with a passion for country life and outdoor sport.

The Prince is a man of many parts. Soldier, diplomatist, athlete, fine shot, and excellent horseman, he has been rightly termed the "Admirable Crichton of the Royal Family." His love for athletics was developed at Eton, and he holds very strong views concerning the spectacular side of sport. "Unfortunately," he once said, "it is the tendency of the age for men and boys to watch other people play instead of playing themselves. When I was at Eton I was told that unless I played football five times a week I should probably find standing easier than sitting."

There was one Eton episode, however, which made the Prince blush furiously at the time. This was when Queen Victoria, during the time of her Diamond Jubilee, went to the school, called for "Arthur," and embraced him, to his obvious reluctance and confusion, before his class colleagues.

The boyish ambition, however, of "Marcus," as the Prince is known to his intimates, was to be a watch and clock maker. But this ambition was quickly given up when his father made him go round with the man who wound up the clocks at Bagshot Park. For the Prince came to the conclusion that the occupation lacked excitement, and turned his attention to soldiering.

From Eton he went to Sandhurst, and entered upon his military duties in his usual characteristic, thorough manner. "It is a pity," Lord Kitchener once remarked, "that his Royal Highness was born a Prince, for that fact has probably prevented him taking the prominent position in the army to which his abilities entitle him." For the Prince is regarded in the highest military quarters as a very capable and keen soldier. He has served with the (Queen's Own) Hussars, the Royal Horse Artillery, and the Scots Greys, and to make himself a thoroughly efficient officer he has undergone instruction courses at the signalling and musketry schools.

Once at Aldershort a curious lady visitor asked a private which was the Prince. She was conducted to the regimental coffee bar, and saw a young officer, pipe in mouth, gravely reckoning the coppers in the till and entering them up in an account-book. "Don't look much like a prince, does he?" tersely remarked the private.

The Prince is greatly interested in the Boy Scouts and Boys' Brigades, and it was on the occasion of an official inspection of a large body of the latter that an accident occurred which illustrates his Royal Highness' presence of mind.

A little girl on the edge of the crowd got flustered, and fell crying hysterically on the ground. Quick as lightning Prince Arthur stooped down from his horse and whisked the mite up beside him on to his knee, where she sat quite contentedly, viewing the boys. Ultimately the Prince lowered her down, a very happy little girl, just before the march past.

The Prince's fiancee is one of the richest women in England. She inherited much of the wealth of her father, whose estate was provisionally sworn at £1,000,000. But the exact amount of his fortune has never been publicly stated, his will being treated as the will of a member of the Royal Family, and its contents kept secret.

Until eight years ago, when King Edward conferred the rank of Princess on her and on her sister, thus bringing them within the provision of the Royal Marriage Act, and rendering them eligible as wives of English or European royalty, the Duchess was simply known as Lady Alexandra Duff.

Her education has been practically the ordinary training of a daughter of the Scottish aristocracy, except that her inclination to athletics was always strongly fostered by her parents—firm believers in "a sound mind in a sound body." The Duchess is passionately devoted to Scotland, and has always maintained the patriotic traditions of the Fife clan. As a child, when asked whether she was an English or a Scotch girl, she used to proclaim lustily that she was "a Fife, a Scotswoman."

Between the Duchess and Queen Alexandra there exists a great bond of affection. It is sometimes asserted that Her Majesty was the first person to nurse the little heiress to the Dukedom of Fife after she was born. Whether this is true or not, it is a fact that Queen Alexandra was very fond of being photographed with her baby namesake in her arms. Such a picture is a prominent feature in one of the wards of the Children's Hospital in Great Ormond Street, where one of the cots is named after the Duchess. In appearance the Duchess is tall, slim, and dignified, and strongly resembles Queen Alexandra.

Next to Princess Patricia of Connaught, the Duchess is the most eligible of marriageable English Princesses. Recently it was reported that she was to be the bride of ex-King Manuel of Porugal, but it is an open secret that Prince Arthur has been tacitly regarded as her future husband for some time past.

Lamb and the Scotchman.

Charles Lamb said he never could impress a Scotchman with any new truth; that they all required it to be spelled and explained away in old equivalent and familiar words and phrases. He said he had spoken to a Sotchman who sat next to him at dinner of a healthy book.

"Health, sir! Healthy, did you say?"

"Yes, healthy."

"I dinna comprehend. I have heard of a healthy man and of a healthy morning, but never of a healthy book."

He is an agile politician who can successfully dodge an issue.

GIANTS OR ATHLETICS FOR BASEBALL TITLE

Some Opinions as to the Strength of the Two Big Machines

NEW YORK, Sept. 29— Opinions by various experts as to the probable outcome of the world's series next week in many cases are guided by partisan feeling.

George Stallings, manager of the Boston Nationals, is conversant with the methods of Connie Mack and the Athletics as well as with those of John McGraw and the Giants. In his opinion the Giants will beat the Athletics, for several reasons. McGraw's men are faster on the bases and outclass all the other National League teams at the hit-and-run game. Stallings believes that the Giants have the stronger pitching staff, with Mathewson, Marquard and Tesreau—seasoned veterans, and Demaree a phenomenal newcomer. Stallings also thinks that the New York players will profit by the experience of last year, and will not be over-confident.

Napoleon Lajoie, of the Clevelands, on the other hand, figures that the Athletics will outclass the Giants. Lajoie when here last week, sized up the rival pennant winners in this way:

"The Athletics have six three hundred batters, and the Giants one. In 1911 Mack's men batted Matty and Marquard successfully. The Athletics are stronger than two years ago, and I cannot figure where Matty and the Rube have improved. I batted against Bender and Plank recently, and I found them just as effective as ever. I think Mack has something up his sleeve in the pitching line. The Giants may win, mind you, but they have to improve in batting at least 50 per cent. to do the trick."

One of Mack's scouts who saw the Giants shut out by Nap Rucker and the Dodgers on Saturday, said after the game:—

"The Giants seem unable to hit good pitching. Pay no attention to stuff you hear about how Bender and Plank have gone back. They are ready to pitch as well as ever. But don't forget that we have other good pitchers, Shawkey, Brown Bush and Houck. Look at the pitching record and you'll see that Houck is not far behind Walter Johnson in winning percentage, yet he is our poorest pitcher. We are stronger than ever before in batting, fielding and base-running. It wouldn't surprise us to win four out of the first five games."

McGraw has not bothered much about sending scouts to inspect the Athletics. It was reported to-day that Mathewson would run to Philadelphia the last of this week to take a peek at the Mackmen. There was another that Marquard saw the Red Sox beat the Athletics in Boston on Saturday. McGraw has an excellent idea of Mack's methods and of the players who will hook up with the Giants at the Polo Grounds on October 7.

GETTING OUT OF THE WOODS.

If You Get Lost Don't Lose Your Head, but Follow These Rules.

A contributor to the Woman's Home Companion tells as follows how you may find your way out of the woods if you get lost:

"If you discover that you are lost in the woods sit down and think calmly back over the road you have traveled, trying to decide where the camp should lie. Then, if you have your compass and it seems to agree with your judgment, stick faithfully to that direction. Even if you are wrong in your decision it is better to keep on in one direction, because you may fall in with some stream and can follow it to a human habitation.

"If you have no compass the sun is an excellent guide during the day. Should the sky be overcast, place the point of your knife blade on the end of your thumb, turn slowly until the full shadow of the blade obscures the nail, and you have discovered where the sun is.

"To prevent getting into the circle habit break off branches of the bushes you pass. Start a fire if your match safe is with you—as it should be. Remember that a fire piled up with damp wood makes a dense smoke and quickly attracts attention. Two fires going at once, one a little removed from the other, constitute a well known signal of distress among woodsmen. The firing of three shots in succession—two at first, then a pause, then the third shot —is another recognized signal if you happen to have a gun."

Different.

"What," said the visitor to the village of his childhood, "what has become of the one boy I hated—Willie Hawker, the sneak? In prison, no doubt—he bore that fate on his face."

"Hush!" said the villager. "He is now Mr. Hawker, the famous millionaire."

"What?" cried the visitor. "My dear schoolfellow a millionaire! I must call upon him and revive the old friendship."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

One to Five Meals a Day.

In England people are sometimes addicted to five meals a day—breakfast, lunch, tea, dinner and supper. The continental fashion is a snack for morning coffee, a midday meal and an evening meal. But when the great army of Xerxes was marching through Asia Minor, and city by city had to provide food for the day, the people thanked God that Xerxes and his army ate but once a day.

A Wife Proved the Perfidy of Her Husband's Friend

By EDITH V. ROSS

During that period in America when the colonies were struggling for their independence, when the "Swamp Fox," as General Francis Marion was called, was contesting the possession of South Carolina with Colonel Tarleton, commander of a British cavalry force, something like that led by the Confederate Colonel Mosby during the war between the states, there lived in Berkeley county of that colony one Edward Athol and his wife.

Athol, though he had not been long in America, was not, as might have been expected of a newcomer from England, a Tory. He was disposed to be neutral in his sympathies. He had married the daughter of one who had been born in America, and his bride was in sympathy with the colonists, but since her husband took sides with neither she desired to live peacefully on their plantation without being disturbed by the king's men or those of the Continental congress.

This required tact, for one day along would come riders wearing the blue and the buff and the next those wearing the red. Both sides expected sympathy if not aid from the people of the country they traversed and were inclined to be severe with those from whom they did not get it. This placed the Athols in an unpleasant position, for if they treated both sides as friends they would please neither. But Mrs. Athol was equal to the occasion, being a woman of rare diplomatic ability.

There was a man living on a neighboring plantation whom she feared. He was a bachelor, and his sympathies were with the redcoats. He and Edward Athol were bosom friends, and Mrs. Athol feared that the Tory might get her husband into trouble. One day she said to Athol:

"Edward, I wish you would be careful of what you say to Henry Pinckton. You know he is a Tory and may at any time consider it his duty to sacrifice his friend to his king."

"That is just like a woman," replied the husband. "Your sex cannot rely on each other's friendship; consequently you do not realize that men will be true to each other."

Had Athol known what his wife knew he would have realized the injustice of this thrust. Pinckton had been a suitor for her hand while Athol was courting her. Moreover, a woman's perceptive faculties are, when uninfluenced, more delicate than a man's. The wife knew instinctively that Pinckton had never forgiven her husband for succeeding where he had himself failed. Moreover, she was not sure but that the unsuccessful lover would be glad of an opportunity to get rid of his friend, hoping that if she were free he might persuade her to marry him.

One day some British troopers camped in the vicinity of the Athol plantation. Pinckton went to the commander and told him that there was a man in the neighborhood who was furnishing information of the movements of the British troops to General Marion. The commander asked if the man could be taken with documents on him to prove that he was a spy. Pinckton said that he would keep a watch on the rebel's movements, and if he found an opportunity to capture him carrying information he would let the officer know.

Pinckton went away and concocted a plan to entrap Athol. He wrote Athol a forged letter from a man in Charleston asking Athol to meet him in that town immediately since he had important news for him. Pinckton went to see Athol just as he was setting out on his journey and pretended to be much surprised at his going. Athol bid his wife goodby, and the two men rode away together. Mrs. Athol had noticed that Pinckton acted strangely. When Athol had said that he doubted if the trip were worth while Pinckton urged him to go. With woman's quick insight for danger to one she loves, Mrs. Athol suspected that her husband's pretended friend had laid a plan to get him out of the way. The two men were to ride together on the road to Charleston till they came to the branch road leading to Pinckton's plantation when they would part, Pinckton going home and Athol continuing his journey.

Mrs. Athol saddled a horse and followed them, intending to overtake her husband after he had left Pinckton and persuade him to give up his journey. She kept at a distance behind them, and when they were about to part she saw Pinckton drop a little behind her husband and drop something into his coat pocket. This confirmed her in her opinion that some wrong was intended. Nevertheless she could not at once follow her husband without running the risk of being seen by Pinckton, who left the Charleston road at an angle. Having waited till he had passed into a wood, she started again. She was nearing her husband when she saw some redcoats spring from a thicket beside the road and make him a prisoner.

Without wasting any time the soldiers took Athol to the British camp. Mrs. Athol followed and saw her husband led within the British lines, then reined in to think what she had better do. She had heard a man say that very morning that there was a troop of Continental cavalry at a little town not far from her home, and she resolved to ride there in the hope of finding them and inducing them to attack the British force and possibly rescue her husband.

Athol, having been taken before the officer commanding the British troops, was searched, and a bit of paper crumpled into a hard ball was taken from his pocket. It was opened and found to be a statement of the British forces in South Carolina. It was of course more of a surprise to Athol than the British officer, who had been informed by Pinckton that if he would conceal his men on the Charleston road that day he would be likely to intercept a man passing with information for General Marion.

The first impulse of the officer was to hang Athol without even a trial by drumhead court martial. Then it occurred to him that the man should have some time to make preparation for death, and he concluded to go through the form of a trial and leave the time of his execution to the court. The command was a small one, and there were but half a dozen officers connected with it. These were all convened to a court, and Athol was brought before them. There was no doubt that he had been caught carrying information, the penalty for which was death, but he was permitted to make an explanation. He said that he was on his way to Charleston when arrested in answer to a summons he had received from there; that he was neither Tory nor rebel; that he had no idea how the communication had come into his pocket. He asked to see it and was permitted to inspect it. The handwriting was very like his own, which added to his astonishment. Not a suspicion that his friend Pinckton had put it there entered his head.

Of course the case was plain to the court that tried him, though since they were convened to convict him this made little difference. They brought in a verdict of guilty and sentenced him to be hanged the next morning.

Meantime Mrs. Athol was riding to the camp of the Continental troopers she had heard of. Reaching the place where they had been, she found that they had moved. No one knew where, for troops in war time are not accustomed to tell where they are going. But the direction they had taken was known, and Mrs. Athol started after them.

While riding she thought of the trap that it was evident her former suitor had laid for her husband and wondered what it was that had been dropped in the latter's pocket. This she could not divine. She had no idea of the depth of degradation into which Pinckton had sunk, the treachery to one who trusted him implicitly and considered him a bosom friend. Tears came into her eyes as she thought of her husband's unjust speech to her when she had warned him.

Along the route she took she made inquiries from time to time of the troopers she was chasing and learned that she was gradually drawing nearer to them. Then they were but a few miles ahead, then a mile, and at last she came upon them as they were about going into bivouac for the night. She sought the officer in command and told him of his proximity to the British troops.

The officer knew of this force and, having superior numbers, was, after them to attack and capture them, but he had been misinformed as to their whereabouts and was moving in the wrong direction. Mrs. Athol offered to pilot him to their camp, but begged him to send a few men to Pinckton's plantation to arrest him. To this the officer assented, and it was agreed that after supper and a rest the command would saddle up with a view to surrounding the Britishers before day.

It was 10 o'clock when they started, lighted by a half moon and piloted by Mrs. Athol. She described the location of the enemy so that the American force might be divided and approach from different directions. Before they reached the vicinity of the British camp it was near moonset, and the night had become dark from clouds. On reaching the place where her husband had been captured Mrs. Athol described three different routes by which they might come upon the British. The separate bodies started and were each given an hour to get into position. The signal for attack was to be two shots in quick succession from the troops accompanied by the commanding officer.

When those two shots rang out on the still night the British sentries gave an alarm, and the redcoats sprang to arms—too late! They were hemmed in, and it did not require a long time for their commanding officers to realize the fact. He was called on to surrender and did so without firing a shot.

Athol not only found himself liberated, but by his wife's instrumentality. She said nothing of Pinckton's treachery, but in the morning the latter was brought into camp, and Mrs. Athol made a charge against him and requested the American commander to convene a court martial to try him. The officer was not slow in granting the request of one who had given him a victory, and the court was convened.

By this time all knew that a forged document had been placed in Athol's pocket, and Pinckton was charged with having placed it there. He broke down under Mrs. Athol's testimony and confessed his crime.

The court would have inflicted any punishment Mrs. Athol named, but as long as her husband was convinced of his supposed friend's perfidy she requested that he be allowed to go free.

The incident, which had really become a tragedy, changed Athol from being neutral in his sympathies to an ardent patriot, and he enlisted in the American army.

Which Is More Urgent?

Fire Insurance

Important? You fully realize it. You would not allow your house to remain uninsured over night.

Your house may never burn. Comparatively few buildings ever do.

If your house does burn, your property is destroyed, but you can still provide for your loved ones. Your income remains unaffected, your earning capacity unimpaired.

If your house is not insured at all, or for an insufficient amount,

YOU Carry the Risk

Your friend has had his home insured these thirty years and has had no fire. He has been fortunate in that, though he has nothing now to show for the money paid out.

Life Insurance

Important? Oh yes, you intend to insure after awhile when "a little better able to do so."

You will surely die. All men do. You are more likely to die within a week or a year, than your house is to burn.

Death destroys at once and irrevocably, in whole or in part, the income that provided for the daily wants of those you love, the income that was counted on to feed and clothe and educate your children.

If your life is not insured at all, or for an insufficient amount,

Your Wife and Babies Carry the Risk

Your friend has had his life insured these thirty years, and is now an old man. He is fortunate in having lived, and he has something now to show for the money paid out. His cash value affords a comfortable support for his own declining years.

PEG O'MY HEART

"Peg O' My Heart," J. Hartley Manners' comedy, which has proved to be one of the past season's greatest successes, will be seen at the Grand Theatre for two performances Saturday next, Oct. 4. The play is presented under the direction of Oliver Morosco, who has given it a splendid mounting and supplied a cast of rare balance and excellence.

The action of the play takes place in an old provincial town in England. This is the home of a suddenly impoverished family. This family is composed of the relatives of a young girl of eighteen. She was born in New York and reared by her Irish father there. Peg comes to England to enjoy a fortune left her by a wealthy uncle. It is necessary for her to have a guardian during the period of her education, according to the uncle's will, and the relatives agree to this responsibility in view of the remuneration they receive. Like many other relatives they accept the annual wage, but they proceed to take it out of the unfortunate girl.

They see none of her good qualities of heart and mind, but set to work to refrom her by vigorous application of education and a course of etiquette. In spite of the disagreeable nature of her surroundings and the contrast between her own natural goodness and the false ideas of the aristocratic English family, the girl does not lose her inherent finesse. She returns good for evil, in fact by saving the daughter of the family from an elopment with an unworthy married lover. She does, however, ultimately resent the treatment at the hands of her relatives until she is at the point of leaving the house, but is prevented by the man she loves.

The comedy is said to be brimful of humorous situations, cleverly interwoven with a thread of love and affection.

BOX OFFICE NOTICE

The seat sale for the engagement of the musical comedy success, "The Pink Lady" which is to be the attraction at the Grand next Friday Oct. 3rd., opens at the box office (to-morrow) Wednesday morning. The heavy mail order demands already received indicate that the engagement will be the event of the season, and those who have not already made their reservations will be wise to get their orders in early, for no event of the year will mark the attendance sure to come out for this engagement.

"The Pink Lady" has been the unquestioned triumph of the stage in the present decade and it is fortunate indeed, that it reaches here at the happy time of the year.

A company of excellent players will present the big hit in this city.

The performance will commence at 8 o'clock sharp.

Smoking is permitted in prisons in Belgium as a reward for good behavior.

FISKE O'HARA

Fiske O'Hara. What that name symbolizes to a song-loving people, especially the Irish! Last evening the Grand Opera House was filled to hear Ireland's greatest tenor at his best. Each song was well received and much appreciated. 'Rose, Rose, Rose' was beyond a doubt the most popular selection, and it left memories which haunted the audience long after the curtain descended on the final scene.

Fiske O'Hara has a more than pleasing tenor voice, and each note is clearly enunciated and sweetness seems to linger in the air. Last night he appeared in his latest production, "In Old Dublin," and his songs were appropriately adapted to the occasion.

He is ably assisted by Marge Tyrone, who appears as a charming and loving Irish-American girl. "Peggy" Gilroy is impersonated beyond imagination by Marie Quinn, while Lou Ripley as Ann Gilroy, Peggy's mother, sent the house into roars with her dancing to "The Irish Wash Woman." Between the acts Mr. H. C. Felton, violinist, rendered several violin solos which brought the gallery boys to their feet.

The play typifies "class distinction," not as made by those born to the purple, but those who by their newly-made wealth aspire to social distinction. It is laid in the time when feelings ran strong between the Irish Nationalists and the English, and the blood of a true son of Erin is stirred as Mr. O'Hara sings that grand old song of Thomas Moore, "The Minstrel Boy to the War has Gone."

NEW OFFICERS AT THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASS'N

Holder of Strathcona Diploma in Charge of Physical Department—New Assistant Secretary and Superintendent of Boarding Hall — Miss Pearl Faick at the Smith End Branch

Many changes have been made at the Y.W.C.A. during the past month both in the staff of officers and also in the interior of the building.

With the wonderful success that the Y.W.C.A. has met with during the past few years it has certainly become an indispensable adjunct to the young life of the city. Besides a handsome building on Simcoe street they also have a boarding house in the south end of the city which has been very largely patronized.

The main entrance and the front hall of the parent institution presents an entirely new appearance. A new and a cozy office has been arranged for the financial secretary. The general secretary's office adjoins that of the financial secretary. The boarding hall is in charge of Mrs. Frederick Barnes of Montreal, who succeeded Mrs. Read. Miss Agnes C. Dyer is the new assistant secretary, while Mrs. G. W. Gray remains general secretary.

Miss Pearl Faick, late of Alma College, Toronto, is the new house secretary at the south branch.

At the opening rally, Miss Sanderson addressed a very representative audience.

All the classes conducted by the Y.W.C.A. this year promise to be the best yet, and an exceedingly large enrollment is expected. Enrollment can be made by the applicant conferring with the officers at the Association building on Simcoe street. Miss Olive Rheinhardt, late of McGill College and holder of the Strathcona diploma in physical culture, will be in charge of the physical culture department, and the physical classes will in all probability be the most successful in the history of the institution.

Important to Peterboro Music Lovers

That splendid system of teaching the art of piano playing, better known as the GODOWSKY SYSTEM is creating a world-wide sensation in the musical world, and is destined to be the UNIVERSAL SYSTEM in teaching. The fact is becoming more and more apparent that there really is a system that does all that is said of it, a method of teaching whereby students learn the theoretical hand in hand with the practical, thus ensuring a rapid and thorough progression towards real musicianship. That this system is the only one of its kind where it takes fourteen subjects, combining them into a systematic whole, thus one subject assisting with the study of another, is all proven in the fact that some of the leading Conservatories throughout the world have adopted the system, and others are rapidly following their example. Teachers and pupils alike are delighted with their progress, the latter's ambition becoming stimulated to be a thoorough and competent musician, such as this system affords.

The publishers, the ART PUBLICATION CO., LTD., 19 DUNCAN STREET, TORONTO, can back up every statement that is made, and can refer any persons interested to some of the highest critics, and leading teachers of the day, for confirmation concerning the merits of this splendid course, which is enabling those using the system to obtain unrivalled success. Mr. Cecil Shorten is in the city, as special representative, and will be pleased to demonstrate this to all interested parties free of cost. BANK MANAGER'S WARINESS LEADS TO IMPORTANT ARREST

Four Visitors to Niagara Falls Are Held on a Charge of Attempted Fraud and a "Certified" Stamp is Said to Have Been Found in Their Belongings.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Oct. 1.—In the arrest of two men and two women here yesterday afternoon, the police believe they have rounded up members of a swindling gang whose operations were international in scope. Two of the prisoners, a married woman and a man, give their addresses as Toronto. The other couple, passing as man and wife, say they come from Erie, Pa.

They were arrested following an attempt by the Toronto woman to cash an alleged worthless check for $450 at the Bridge street branch of the Imperial Bank of Canada.

The prisoners came to the Falls on Sunday night. They registered at the Savoy Hotel and spent money lavishly. They insisted upon having the best of everything and appeared to have a plentiful supply of funds. They acted like any other wealthy tourists until yesterday afternoon, when the woman attempted to cash the check at the Bridge street bank.

When she tendered what purported to be a certified check for $450 on the Toronto branch of the Union Bank of Canada, the teller referred her to the manager, A. N. Murray. She showed Mr. Murray a Union Bank pass book showing $1,110. to her credit at the Toronto branch. The check was made payable to "cash." Although all appeared to be right, Mr. Murray was suspicious because of many swindles worked on banks recently, and told the woman to call later in the afternoon, when the check would be honored.

When the woman left the bank Mr. Murray called up the manager of the Union Bank in Toronto. Then he learned that she had only $10 to her credit. In the meantime the bank messenger had shadowed the suspect. She returned to her hotel and joined the others. The four were just leaving the hotel to go for an auto ride about the city when arrested by Chief John Kimmins and Patrolman John Dart of the city police.

At police headquarters the four prisoners refused to talk. Search of their rooms at the Savoy was made. The police say a counterfeit "certified" stamp of the Union Bank was found among their belongings.

Half a dozen Canadian banks will send representatives here in an effort to identify the prisoners as operators who have worked a similar swindle throughout Canada and in several American cities recently. Three weeks ago the Hamilton branch of the Bank of British North America was swindled out of $2,000 on a spurious certified check.

The prisoners will have a hearing before Magistrate Frazer to-day on a charge of attempting to utter a false check.

THIS WOMAN ADMITS SHE KILLED SIX

Inhuman Mother Gave Fly Poison to Children

Canadian Press Despatch

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 1— Arrested last night on the charge of killing two of her children, Mrs. Ida Leckwold aged 32, has confessed to the police saying that she not only caused the death of these two, but four others all between 1905 and this year. She killed them with doses of fly poison, while the doctor who attended the last two ascribed the deaths to cholera morbus. The woman's husband believed entirely in her innocence.

IN THE HOME

I believe in the power of the home to make men realize their fullest efficiency. I believe that the home-making genius is the greatest gift a woman can have, and the only one she should be really anxious to exercise.—Mrs. R. L. Borden, wife of the Prime Minister of Canada.

LIEUT. GOVERNOR AND PREMIER COMING TO PETERBOROUGH

Sir James Whitney and Sir John Gibson to Open Bazaar at St. Georges' Church

The Review has it from a reliable source that the forthcoming bazaar in connection with St. George's Church, will be the object of the visit to Peterborough of some of the leading men in Canada.

It is understood, and we have it on good authority, that the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Sir John Gibson, and the Premier of Ontario, Sir James Whitney, will open the bazaar on the first two days.

There is a rumor that Premier Borden will open the bazaar on one of the days, but this is not confirmed.

Full particulars as to definite arrangements will be published in a few days.

IMPRISONED IN A MINE

Collier Has Received Food and Talked to Rescue Party.

Tell Them Not to Worry Too Much, He Says.

CENTRALIA, Pa., Oct. 1.—As darkness enveloped the colliery of the Lehigh Coal Co. last night the voice of Thomas Toshesky, who has been entombed in the mammoth vein since last Friday morning, was heard through a tube fifty feet long, which has been inserted in a hole bored through a wall of coal from an adjoining breast. He spoke quite distinctly, his first enquiry being about his family.

"Tell them not to worry too much," he said, "as I am in fairly good condition. Since I got several bottles of milk and whipped eggs I feel much stronger and more content. I had a long sleep after satisfying my hunger and thirst and feel certain that I will be rescued before another fall of top rock and coal can occur."

The entombed man stated he was very nervous because of the long confinement and absolute quiet. "Sometimes," he said, "I imagine the whole roof of the breast is about to drop upon my head."

Mine officials with the rescuers told Toshesky to keep up courage and if possible get some more sleep, as it probably would be another twelve hours before a big pile of coal lying in the face of the gangway could be removed sufficiently to permit members of the rescuing party to enter the breast where he is held a prisoner one hundred feet below the surface.

The rescue work is being conducted from the interior of the mine. Outside the mine Toshesky's wife and four children await his rescue with great eagerness. One or more of them has been on the scene at all times since he was entombed.

MISSIONARIES

Nine Are in Hands of Bandits at Tsao-Yang.

HANKOW, China, Oct. 1.—Five American missionaries and four Norwegian missionaries are in the hands of Chinese bandits, who, on Friday, captured the town of Tsao Yang in the northern part of the Province of Hupeh. The American prisoners are reported to be Mr. and Mrs. Holmes and child and Mr. and Mrs. Fauske.

Rev. C. Stokstad, of the Hauges Norwegian Mission, telegraphed from Fan Cheng that on Saturday Mr. Fauske, who is attached to the Lutheran Brethren Mission, was still held in Tsao Yang for ransom, but was separated from his wife, who, with the other foreigners, was held a prisoner in another part of the city.

The notorious bandit, White Wolf, whom the Government has been fighting for several months, is the leader. Orders have been issued for the Chinese troops surrounding the district to advance toward Tsao Yang and exterminate the bandits.

Gen. Li Yuen Heng, Vice-President of the Republic, told J. Paul Jameson, acting American consul at Hankow, yesterday, that he believed the foreigners would not be harmed and would not be taken away.

FIREMAN KILLED

James Kerr, of Toronto, Thrown From Hose Wagon.

TORONTO, Oct. 1.—Fireman Jas. Kerr of the Wychwood avenue hall was killed yesterday afternoon as a result of being thrown headforemost from the top of a hose wagon, which was being driven full speed to a fire in the Union Stack Yards. The realization of the danger of the blaze getting headway among the numerous inflammable buildings at the stock yards inspired Captain Matson, who was driving, to urge the horses to their utmost gallop. In proceeding along St. Clair avenue, the victim attempted to change seats and relieve his captain at the reins. As he rose the wagon jolted on a bad piece of road, and the unfortunate young man was pitched off, his head striking the curb.

The team were brought to a quick stop and the unconscious form placed on the truck and rushed to the surgery of Dr. W. G. McCormack on Boon avenue, Earlscourt, but the young man died as he was being carried into the house. His skull had been fractured.

It is understood that Mr. Hawkes will deal with the relations of Canada and the United States especially as they may be affected by the settlement of the naval question.

SIR EDWARD CARSON, LEADER OF HOME RULE OPPOSITION IN IRELAND

SIR EDWARD CARSON
FROM THE KING

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—A cable to the Tribune from London says: "Sir Edward Carson now states that the exclusion of Ulster from the Home Rule Bill may yet prove to be the solution of the Irish problem.

"The Unionist papers here regard this as an important pronouncement but it is absolutely certain that Redmond would never accept such a way out of the present deadlock as a settlement of the Nationalist claims.

"The Nationalists are the masters of the Government and they are standing out for their bargain for a Home Rule Parliament in Dublin with an executive responsible to it. That is the insurmountable barrier between the parties, and until it is removed the prospect of a compro-

BAD THUNDERSTORM BRINGS DEATH TO FOURTEEN PEOPLE

THIRTY OTHERS INJURED

Tempests in France and Torrential Rains in Spain

CERBERE, France, Oct. 1. — A terrific thunderstorm, which raged for twelve hours, has spread death and ruin throughout the city. Fourteen persons are known to have been killed and 30 injured, but there are many missing.

A stream which passes through the city was soon over its banks and flooded the streets. In a hardware establishment, where large quantities of gasoline, petroleum, alcohol and other inflammables and a cask of calcium carbide were stored, the water dissolved the chemicals and enormous volumes of gas were formed. A terrific explosion occurred which completely wrecked two buildings and enveloped two others in flames. Three persons who were passing at the time were killed outright. Five families were buried in the ruins.

Nearly every house in Cerbere is flooded and most of the provisions have been spoiled.

In answer to an urgent appeal from the mayor, the prefect of Perpignan despatched several tons of bread to meet the pressing needs of the inhabitants. A company of the 53rd Infantry was rushed here to assist in rescue work.

The floods also carried away the greater part of the Paulilles Dynamite Factory and caused tremendous damage throughout the department. The railroad has been washed out in several places. A freight train was derailed and a passenger train is imprisoned in the tunnel at Banyuls-Sur-Mer.

Spain In Storm's Grip.

MADRID, Oct. 1.—Torrential rains are falling throughout Spain. Great damage to crops and property is reported, railroads and telegraph lines have been destroyed in places, rendering communication difficult. Urgent appeals for aid have reached the Minister of the Interior from many inundated villages and towns. At Barcelona the flood carried away a carriage with two children, who perished. Travelers from Valencia, who have arrived at Barcelona report that the crops all along the route have been destroyed. One village along the road was destroyed by fire yesterday, and the ruins were flooded to-day, the water having risen feet in two hours.

The rivers Noya and Llobregat are swollen to a height of 25 feet. The inhabitants of those districts are in tree tops and house tops awaiting the arrival of boats which have been sent to the scene.

Trades Unions Recognized.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The very important concession was made by the British Admiralty yesterday of officially recognizing trades unions.

In reply to the demands of the dockyard men the Admiralty agreed hereafter in the event of disputes, to meet deputations of the workmen either in London or at the dockyards. It also not only accorded permission to the men in Government employ to select their own representatives from the dockyards, but will allow them to be accompanied by trades union leaders not employed in the dockyards.

Falling Timber Kills Builder.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 1. — Frank Marlatt, employed in the construction of the new Brantford postoffice, was instantly killed last night. PROBE AT KINGSTON IN PROGRESS

Deputy Warden and Surgeon Named in Charges.

KINGSTON, Oct. 1.—The prison reform commission, appointed by the Government to enquire into the management of Kingston Penitentiary, opened yesterday, with serious charges preferred against two of the officials by the Justice Department through Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P. for Frontenac.

H. A. Stewart, K.C., Brockville, appeared before the commission on behalf of the Justice Department, and presented these charges of Dr Edwards for investigation:

"I charge Deputy Warden O'Leary with petty and persistent persecution of guards and keepers; with political partisanship; with testifying falsely at investigation held at the prison; with consulting with ex-convicts; with gross negligence of his duty, resulting in attempts at escape, etc.

"I charge the surgeon, Dr. Phelan, with gross political partisanship; with using violent and indecent language to a guard in the presence of others; with conniving at the absence of a guard at an election trial, where said guard was wanted as a material witness; with grafting by asking for and receiving money from guards to which he had no just or honest claim etc."

The commission is composed of G. M. Macdonnell, K.C., Kingston; Dr. Fred. Etherington, Kingston; J. P. Downey, Orillia.

Mr. Stewart asked that former Accountant W. F. Hughes, now an inspector of prisons, be summoned as a witness, and as he is in the west, it will be some time before his evidence is taken. Hughes will be subpoenaed.

Thomas Clarkson Gordon Russell M.A., B.S.C., Toronto, ex-convict and lawyer, who made charges against the penitentiary management in the Orange Sentinel, is present, having been summoned as a witness. He says he is willing to tell all he knows about the management, and he is anxious to name some men in the penitentiary to give evidence.

CANADA IN EVIDENCE AT GOOD ROADS' CONGRES

Ontario's Minister of Public Works in Proposing To to President of the U.S. Tells of the Work Which is Being Done in This Province.

DETROIT, Oct. 1.—Canada predominated at yesterday's sessions of the American Roads Congress. The Ontario Government entertained the heads of the various state highways commissions, who have been aiding the Provincial Commission, at an important luncheon, over which Hon. Dr. Reaume presided. Hon. J. E. Caron, Minister of Agriculture and Roads in the Province of Quebec, in a spirited and eloquent address, which was greeted by repeated outbursts of enthusiasm, extended a pressing invitation to the congress to meet in the city of Quebec three years hence, an invitation which President Page acknowledged with appreciation, pointing out that its acceptance would signalize the first time the congress would meet in Canada.

Hon. D. F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture in the U. S. Federal Administration, bespoke international felicitations, and his sentiments were cordially reciprocated by Mr. A. W. Campbell, Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, who is present as the representative of the Canadian Government.

The toast to the President of the United States was proposed by Hon. Dr. Reaume and that to King George by Col. DeH. Washington of New York City, chairman of the Board of Consulting Engineers. "The Ontario luncheon has gathered together the most eminent collection of good road experts I have ever seen at one time," was the tribute of President Page of the congress.

"Canada stands for unrestricted reciprocity in road-building," declared Hon. Dr. Reaume, amid laughter and applause. He declared that the Government of Ontario purposed to inaugurate a new era of highway construction along most modern and proved lines, and to this purpose commission, headed by Mr. Magr was at work. "We have tried vari systems in various localities," ceeded the Ontario Minister of lic Works. "We have sought to o up New Ontario under a system colonization roads, but we have lized that we cannot thus cope w the situation. In old Ontario we h had the highways improvement which worked well for years, with the advent of heavy mod automobile traffic it has not pro satisfactory. We have a large vince, not so densely populated most of your states. We have a l er problem in that regard than and we do not propose to sp money haphazard. At the latest ting of the Legislature we appropri ed $5,000,000 to the work, and th are more millions behind."

That Quebec proposed to vie w her sister Province of Ontario in business-like enterprise of good r making, was the message of Hon. Caron, who followed. Quebec des the congress to meet in that prov because she was deeply intereste what the congress was doing. are ready to take lessons from tario, from the United States, or f any country which can teach us," Caron declared smiling.

Quebec had been working dilig ly on the road problem for the three years. The Provincial Gov ment had appropriated $10,000 to the enterprise, and already 000,000 of this had been applied by the counties to which it was vanced. When, as he hoped, the gress met in Quebec city three y hence, he expected the big mod trunk highways from Quebec cit Montreal and from Montreal to border to be completed. "Those you who have them can come to Q bec in your autos," he added, s ingly.

OFFICERS RESIGN

Only the Colonel of 54th Regiment at Sherbrooke Remains.

SHERBROOKE, Que., Oct. 1.—When the officers of the 54th Regiment met at the armory on Monday evening, twenty-seven officers and 61 non-commissioned officers signed and handed in their resignations. Lieut.-Col. Emile Rioux is the only remaining officer of the regiment.

"There is no 54th Regiment to-day," remarked one of the officers yesterday. "We have waited from month to month and as there was no prospect of early action in this direction we decided to bring the matter to a head by resigning."

It is likely that the next move will be a visit from Hon. Col. Hughes, Minister of Militia.

The officers, all French-Canadians, have resigned as a protest against the delay of the Militia Department in providing new armory accommodation for the 53rd Regiment, whose quarters were to be turned over to the younger corps.

A SECRET FUND

Sulzer Planned Private Repository For Resources.

ALBANY, N.Y., Oct. 1.—Some startling testimony was given at the Sulzer impeachment trial yesterday to show that the deposit of contributions received for the Sulzer campaign to the personal account of Louis A. Sarecky with the Mutual Alliance Trust Co. of New York city was in pursuance of a plan originating with Mr. Sulzer himself to make that account a secret depository and to relieve himself from the necessity of reporting such contributions in the sworn statement of receipts and expenditures candidates are required to make under the corrupt practices act.

The witness who gave this testimony was Cornelius S. Pinkney, a New York lawyer.

During the entire forenoon session and part of the afternoon session it had been stated on behalf of Mr. Sulzer that his account with Harris & Fuller was a loan account. Mr. Fuller, while a witness yesterday, however, read into the record letter upon letter demanding new margins.

Saw Prison Farm.

GUELPH, Ont., Oct. 1.—Delegates from a number of Ontario counties, including Oxford, Brant, Perth, Norfolk and Waterloo, paid a visit of inspection to the provincial prison farm yesterday. The object of their visit is to get ideas tending toward the proposition to establish a series of industrial farms in Ontario, and at the same time do away with the old jail system. The position taken by these counties is that there are a number of jails in their districts whose up-keep is out of proportion to the number of prisoners they have to look after. Up to the present no counties have taken advantage of the act of 1912.

THE EMIGRANTS WHO LOOK BACK

Mr. Chiozza Money, M.P., who writes on social questions in the British Weekly, does not encourage the British working man to emigrate to Canada. He says he knows "a man who has just returned from Canada in disgust, and his language is quite strong."

Mr. Money publishes a portion of a letter received from an emigrant in British Columbia, in which he says: "A man has to be content to live in a shack that would not cost $50 at the outside, constructed by himself, and this in a climate more rigorous than that of England." This same emigrant goes on to ask: 'Why, oh! why will an Englishman not do in England what he is only too willing to do in Canada?" He further says that he knows a family of emigrants who have "lived for year in a home which is half a hut and half a tent." He alleges that "the Canadian emigration agents are trafficing in the bodies and souls of the Birtish people."

All this is a very strong indictment against Canada, and, so far as it goes, it is only too true. We in Ontario do not know the privations of the poor emigrant who goes out west; especially where a whole family who have been used to city life, squat down upon a prairie, or in a scattered settlement, and have no capital with which to build a decent shelter.

These people come from the city, and from a country which has no winter problem, and they have none of that squirrel nature which is so characteristic of Canadians. They consequently suffer terribly from loneliness, cold and privations which the born Canadian instinctively guards against.

It is always a risky business to advise anyone to emigrate. And even emigrants who are themselves doing well in this country should not be too ready to invite their friends to come out, lest they should be blamed for any disappointment that may accrue.

There are thousands of English emigrants in Canada to-day who are living under the shadow of disillusionment. We have met wives who have declared that, from the accounts that were given to them of Canada's prosperity, they "thought the gold was growing on the trees and you only had to pluck it off"; whereas, while their husbands earn good money, the dollars fly like magic in rent and food.

This is a class of emigrant that Canada would be better without, and they would be better without Canada. The emigrants that are wanted are those who can keep a "stiff upper lip" and expect the worst.

There is gold growing on the trees, and the fields of the west are paved with it every summer. But it is gold beaten out with toil. And the man who puts his hand to the plough in the west and looks back continually comparing the new world with the old is not worthy of the harvest, and indeed does not get it.

UNITY OR ABSORPTION

The question of the Union of Christendom is again being discussed in certain quarters, the latest was in an interview the other day with Cardinal Gibbons, the American Roman Catholic Prelate.

The Cardinal laid down the lines of union as, first and foremost an unconditional surrender to the Pope, and an acceptance of the supreme authority of Rome in all things theological and ecclesiastical.

One of our papers calls this a "vision of union." It certainly is visionary, and a very rosy vision from the Cardinal's point of view.

But it is not a vision of union. It would be more correct to call it a vision of absorption. The idea is reminiscent of portions of Spenser's "Fairie Queen," [illegible] Shakespeare who speaks of [illegible] capacious maw."

It is to be feared that if the Vatican did, by some chance, swallow all the rest of Christendom it would suffer from chronic indigestion. For these Protestants are a rather tough and indigestible lot, and Rome would need to be somewhat of an ostrich to retain them.

However ardently one might desire unity among professing Christians, there is a great gulf fixed between the two extremes, so great that when anyone does pass over from one to the other they regard their conversion as a right about face. The convert from Romanism to Protestantism claims to have escaped as by the skin of his teeth. While the convert from Protestatism to Romanism claims to have passed from darkness into light.

The more practical method of consumating this desire for union would be for those who can find some mutual ground for agreement to get together on every possible occasion and absorb one another's ideas, and by creating a feeling of friendliness and sympathy the relationship would in time grow so strong as to bring about a natural unity.

Courtship always goes before the best marriages. Most of the differences between the churches, as in other things, are the result of misunderstanding. We each see one facet of the glittering jewel of truth and we are either blinded by its glare, or we are too narrow visioned to see the whole gem.

AN ACTOR WITH IDEALS

Mr. F. R. Benson, who is to make a tour of Canada with his well known dramatic company, is an actor with ideals. For years he has devoted himself to the production of Shakespeare's plays, and with unswerving purpose has won the heart of even those who do not class themselves as play-goers.

The object of all Mr. Benson's acting is to educate and elevate the public taste. He believes in his Shakespeare. He preaches Shakespeare as a parson preaches the Bible. He is a man of quiet and unassuming disposition and works his productions, not as a one-man show, but as Shakespeare wrote them. He spends as much care and art upon the minor characters as upon leading ones, and always emphasises the artistic and the moral points of the dramas.

This actor ought to receive a generous and hearty greeting at the hands of all Canadians who have a desire to lift the Canadian stage to a higher level, and at the same time to create a taste for the works of the greatest of all poets and dramatists.

DOWNING STREET

Downing Street has for a very considerable number of years been the scapegoat on which the irritability of the Empire has been vented. It has been blamed for things with which it has never had the remotest connection, and used as a phrase to represent something only half understood: it has come readily to the lips as the root of all evil in imperial matters; it has served as a political shibboleth on more than one occasion. "No interference by Downing Street" is almost as familiar as the Boston tea party. The peculiarity about the Downing Street cry is that as a rule it is used by those who have no idea where or what Downing Street is, beyond that it is something in London which has some official connection with the government—Vancouver Province.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A "chief editorial writer on a Toronto journal" has been lecturing at Montreal on "Life after death". That is a very pleasing theme for editors, for they "die daily." It may be that editors' souls are immortal, but it is to be feared that their writing will never have a resurrection, and some of them find much comfort in this hope.

One of the saddest men we ever met was a man with a son who had a great mechanical gift, and a wealthy brother who made him a present of a one thousand dollar automobile, without an endowment.

Educationalists, says the London Times, are coming to the opinion that all children are born good, that there is no such thing as original sin. We will bet these educationalists are all bachelors.

"SOME TORY HYSTERIA"

"Free Press" and Bilingualism

Of course it is very interesting to watch the spirited attacks which are just now being made by a number of Ontario Conservative ne[illegible] upon Sir James Whitney. But one cannot help being amused at the fret into which some of these organs of public opinion have worked themselves.

If we b[illegible] the Kingston Standard, the Toronto Telegram, the Toronto Orange Sentinel and others, we must come to the conclusion that the very foundations of Canadian liberty are being undermined by this monster Whitney and that he contemplates bringing the whole state fabric toppling about our ears.

But we really cannot, though quite inclined that way, yet understand how Sir James Whitney's action in permitting, in a few special circumstances a few French children in a few French districts in this Province to be taught their first school lessons in the language learned at their mother's knee, is going to appreciably affect either one way or the other the public school system of English-speaking Ontario.

Some of the critics of Sir James Whitney are making themselves ridiculous. They are suffering from hysteria with a hydrophobic expression. In the Toronto Telegram and the Orange Sentinel such outbreaks are no surprise, because those newspapers are chronic sufferers from "nerves." But when such ordinarily sane writers as the gentleman who edits the Kingston Standard, gets an attack, we find ourselves wondering what brought it on.

We would suggest a couple of weeks in a sanitarium. At the end of that time he may realize that the so-called concessions which Sir James Whitney has made to the French Canadian people of Ontario are utterly worthless, for the reason that Sir James has reserved to himself the right of playing the trump card through his officials, and those who know Sir James will be quite certain that he will play it whenever it is required to capture the trick. — From "The Ottawa Free Press," September 25th., 1913.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE CURFEW LAW

What Our Readers Think

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Allow me to express my approval of your article in yesterday's issue, on the Curfew Law. All unbiased readers of the Review must appreciate the usefulness and common sense of your remarks upon this matter. Those who see unfairness, tyranny and immorality in the amendments quoted, probably inspired by someone interested in the presence of children where they should not be at night.

Hostile criticism of a law is calculated to hinder or discourage its enforcement. The interests of a roller rink, for example, might suffer by enforcement of the Curfew Law. This may perhaps account for the criticism seen in a local paper on Saturday. Whether such be the case or not, the enforcement of the Curfew Law should, for the good of this community, begin at once. Let our police force earn their pay.

Thanking you for valuable space, I am,

ONE OF YOUR READERS.
Peterborough, Sept. 30, 1913.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I wish to thank you for your editorial article referring to the Curfew Law. I think you have dealt with the matter most satisfactorily. Your article will do much good.

On behalf of the children and the community I again thank you.

Yours truly,
FOR THE CHILDREN.

In provisions, the outcome was a decline varying from a shade to 40c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

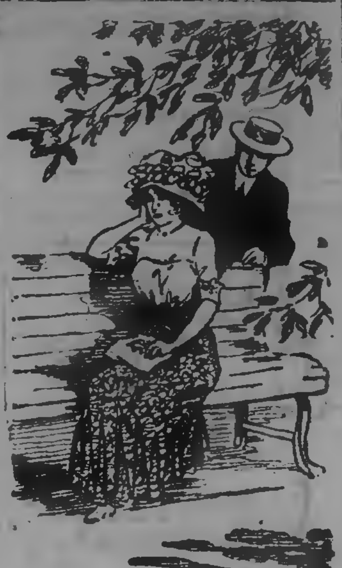
RED ROSE TEA "is good tea"

SHEILA'S TWO LOVERS

One Was Rich, the Other Poor; One Untrue, the Other True.

By FRANK FILSON.



It Had Made Many Things Clear.

Sheila Linton looked into the mirror set into the partition of her cabin aboard the "Glenavon." The face that looked back at her was a singularly beautiful one, and, try hard as she might, Sheila could not detect a line that had not come through laughing, nor one gray hair. Yet there was a certain maturity about it—the maturity that comes to all of us with thirty years of wear and tear—which evidently displeased her, for she compared it with the photograph which she held in her hand, and frowned.

The photograph showed Sheila as she had looked ten years before, when she bade a tearful farewell to her lover, Thomas Shane, on the wharf at Queenstown. Thomas was going to America to make his fortune and send for her the next year. And ten years had passed and Thomas was still there.

It was not that he had been disloyal. He had written lovingly all those years, letters that sent Sheila into ecstacies of happiness. But after five years had passed and Thomas Shane still remained, poor Sheila had begun to fear the day of their marriage would never arrive.

Twice, thrice lately, Thomas had written saying that he was doomed to failure, that she had better give him up and marry somebody else who would be able to take care of her. He had lost position after position, he wrote; things were going from bad to worse; he saw no prospect of their union. But these letters had precisely the opposite effect to that which was intended, for Sheila's loyal little heart went out the more to Thomas in his trouble. And year by year she had put a little away—twenty pounds one year, twenty-five another.

Even with the happiness of the expected meeting, Sheila could not help being sorry for Philip Druce. He had loved her for five years back in the old country, and he had been so tender and loyal and good to her. When she told him about Thomas Shane and her unalterable loyalty to him, it nearly broke their hearts.

Sheila knew that Thomas Shane was to be found at a certain number on Third avenue. She did not know whether he lived there or merely had his office in that building, but anyway it did not matter, because she was going to pay him a surprise visit and all their troubles would be over. As she took her seat in the Third avenue elevated train, clutching tightly the purse with the money—nearly fifteen hundred dollars in bills, and almost rupturing the leather receptacle in which they bulged—her heart kept giving little leaps for gladness. And when at last she descended and saw the building in which Thomas was surely at work—for it was a sort of hall, with offices rented above—she was so dizzy from excitement that she could hardly stir.

But presently she summoned her courage and went in. Sheila did not like the place. To begin with, it was a political club, and rough-looking men in shirt sleeves were lounging about the entrance, and they eyed her in a manner that made her uncomfortable. And then the whole place reeked with stale tobacco smoke, and it was dirty and unswept. But the rough men answered her courteously enough when Sheila asked for Mr. Shane, and their faces brightened at the sound of her pretty Irish accent.

"Tom Shane, Miss? Sure, you'll find him in his office through that door," said one of the men.

Sheila hesitated, for men were coming and going through the swinging door, and she did not want to surprise Tom in that manner. However, there was no help for it now. She pushed open the door. There was Tom, in his shirt sleeves, seated at his desk, his hat on the back of his head and a cigar cocked sidewise in his mouth. He looked fat and red, and his appearance quite stunned the girl at first, so that she waited a moment behind the green screen that had been placed in front of the entrance.

There were two men in the room, and they were arguing with Tom. From what they said he seemed to be an important political leader. Sheila could see, too, that he wore a big diamond in his shirt front, and a diamond flashed as he raised one finger to emphasize his arguments. And then—Tom swore!

She would not have minded a little oath, perhaps, but what he said was something which she could not have imagined on the lips that had kissed her. She was so startled that she came out from behind the screen, and the men looked at her, and she looked at Tom; and suddenly Tom leaped to his feet and cried:

"Sheila!"

And added another oath.

Sheila went up to Tom and the two men withdrew hastily, for they did not wish to intrude upon what was, they suspected, some secret in their leader's life. Sheila looked at Tom very steadily, and then she began to cry.

"Tom, Tom!" she sobbed, drawing close to him. "I couldn't wait any longer. I came. I wanted you so and I thought I would surprise you. Are you not glad to see me, dear?"

Tom had been standing as though petrified. Now he found his tongue.

"Sheila," he said hoarsely, "I've been married eight years."

Sheila waited. Surely there was more to come. Surely this could not be all, the end, the absolute end of everything. Why, if that were so she would die. No! What should she do, though? What should she do? She wanted to run away.

Tom was speaking and Sheila heard his voice, but she did not see him because of the gathering clouds. She caught to support herself at the edge of the screen.

"I suppose I've given you a pretty raw deal, kid," said Tom, "but I loved you and love you still—only they yoked me up with my woman one night when I had been drinking and didn't know what I was doing. I tell you, kid, my life has been hell since that day. And I couldn't give you up, mavourneen—I couldn't. Time and again I thought, 'If Sheila won't give me up I'll get a divorce and send for her.' But I was getting to be a big man in the district, and divorce ain't allowed in our church, as you know, my dear, and if I'd done it I'd have set the priest against me, and then goodby to my power. So I just waited, hoping the old woman would die or something would turn up. But listen, Sheila"—he had drawn closer to her and she smelled whisky on his breath—"I'm rich now and there ain't no reason why you and me shouldn't come to an understanding. We can fix it some way so that it'll look respectable, and that's all that counts. Give me a kiss, kid, for I love you just the same—"

How she got out of that room she did not know. She remembered afterward pushing the man from her and feeling blindly for the door. Then the screen fell as Tom tried to intercept her, and Sheila found the door handle and tore herself from his grasp upon her dress and ran. She heard men shouting after her. But she was in the street now, and running as if for dear life, and never looking back. She ran with all her power. Men turned to stare at the strange figure, racing along Third avenue; somebody was chasing her again, too, for she heard his footsteps following swiftly behind her. She reached the corner of the block and turned into a broad side street, and paused, panting. Then, behind her, she heard those same footsteps. Someone was calling her name. She hastened on again in terror. It must be Tom, or one of his men. What would they do to her? She saw a park in front of her now, with leafy trees and a fountain playing, and it seemed to be a haven of refuge to her. She sank into a seat and hid her face in her hands. No one molested her; the unfortunates upon the benches were immersed in their own troubles. A passing policeman saw the pretty girl who seemed to be in distress and thought of speaking to her. But just then he perceived his roundsman in the distance and straightened himself and passed on, mentally resolved, however, to go back as soon as the roundsman passed. And Sheila, under the tree, was crying her heart out.

A man was leaning over the back of the seat. "Sheila!" he whispered. She started round. It was Phil Druce!

If a miracle had occurred she could not have been more amazed. She could not say a word, even when Phil came and sat beside her and took one of her small hands in his.

"I followed you, Sheila, dear," said Phil, with the same considerate gentleness as ever in his voice. "You wouldn't let me come—so I sailed on the Trafalgar and arrived yesterday, and waited for you. I was in the carriage behind you on the elevated. Sheila, dear, I guessed it all, but I couldn't warn you because I couldn't be sure—it was only a clue I had. So I followed you to his office, and when I saw you come out I knew the story was true. And I ran after you, but I couldn't catch you, you ran so fast. Sheila, dear, I'm going to do two things. First I'm going back to give Shane a horsewhipping, and then I'm going to take you home."

"No, Phil, dear, don't touch him. Promise me! I couldn't bear that he should ever come into our lives again. Promise that you'll leave him alone!"

"If you'll promise me something, Sheila," answered Phil. "There's a boat leaving tomorrow, and there's time to get married today and then we can spend our honeymoon on board. O, Sheila, I've loved you for five years, and I think you always have really cared a little for me, haven't you?"

DIDN'T WANT TO BE HASTY

Hence He Was Pleased to Have His Judgment Confirmed.

A Kansas man, who had played the role of the henpecked husband for a number of years, one day met an agent who was selling a book. The book agent dilated at length on the beauty and literary merit of the book, but the Kansas man told him he wasn't prepared to buy. "But," he said, "there is a woman who lives in the house next to the corner in the next block who I'm satisfied wants that book and wants it bad."

The agent hastened to the house and managed somehow to get inside the door. In about a minute he came out on the run and in a wild jump from the porch missed all the front steps and lit on the sidewalk running. The hen pecked husband had been an interested spectator from the outside.

When he saw the Kansas man, the agent stopped and with some heat said: "Say, that woman you recommended me to is the worst wildcat I ever saw."

"Sure about that, are you?" said the Kansas man.

"Sure? Well I should say I am sure," said the agent as he rubbed the place on his head that had been hit with the broomstick.

"Sort of glad to hear you say so," said the Kansas man. "After twenty five years' experience with her I'd about come to that conclusion myself, but I didn't want to be hasty about formin an opinion till I had the judgment of some unprejudiced witness."—Kansas City Journal.

REGAINING CASTE.

Ordeals Natives of India Will Face to Be Cleansed.

It is astonishing the belief natives in southern India have in their "caste" and what they will do to regain it if lost. A certain day in the year is set aside for the ceremony of regaining "caste."

An inclosure about twenty feet square is fenced off, and in this logs of wood are burnt, the ashes of which are kept red hot by continual fanning.

Those going through the ceremony have to wash themselves in the river about a mile away; then, with strings of flowers hanging round their necks they run to the inclosure. By the time they reach it the red hot ashes have been raked all over the floor and the idol of whatever caste they belong to has been placed on a platform at one end.

In rush the "casteless," barefooted, without the slightest hesitation, and dance round and round on the red hot ashes until they drop from exhaustion and are dragged out by their friends. Before going through this painful ceremony of regaining "caste" a man is first supposed to fast for at least three days.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Hanging Judge.

When Lord Norbury, "the hanging judge," as he was called in Ireland, was sentencing a man to death for stealing a watch he said:

"My good fellow, you made a grasp at time and caught eternity."

Nothing seemed to please Lord Norbury more than the continual uproar in court created by his puns.

"What is your occupation, my honest man?" he asked a witness.

"Please, your lordship, I keep a racket court."

"So do I," said the judge.

When Lord Norbury was being buried the grave was so deep that the ropes by which the undertaker was letting down the coffin didn't reach to the bottom. The coffin was left hanging midway while somebody went for new ropes.

"Aye," cried one in the crowd, "give him rope enough; don't stint him. He was the boy that never grudged rope to a poor body."

HOW ONE MAY FIND BOOKS AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

One of the most noticeable features in Library work is the seeming inability of people to make a quick and satisfactory selection of their reading matter. "Have you anything nice in to-day?" is a question that is frequently asked of a librarian, and this by people who see before them shelf upon shelf loaded with books calculated to suit every taste. To one living in a bookish atmosphere it is perhaps hard to realize the difficulty that people thus experience, but the conclusion is forced upon one that it is really the spectacle of so great an embarrassment of riches that renders the book-seeker impotent to make a satisfactory choice. It is not an easy matter for library authorities to devise better schemes for assisting readers in their quest for literature than those that are already in vogue. Many useful and ingenious methods have been tried, but mainly owing to the failure of the public to utilize them they have fallen far short of affording the assistance they are capable of giving. Take but one instance, the card catalogue. If one may judge of other libraries by our own it is safe to say that fully nine-tenths of those who patronise a library never think of referring to the catalogue. Our own card catalogue aims to cover all the books that are to be found in the stack room as well as in the reference room, the pamphlet cases and the scrap-books. It is really an invaluable guide to those who take the trouble to learn how to use it. In order to bring this knowledge within the reach of all, a few suggestions are appended herewith in regard to its use.

THE CARD CATALOGUE.

The cards in the catalogue are arranged alphabetically.

Use it like a dictionary.

Every work (excepting fiction) is entered in three places, under author, title and subject.

Fiction is entered under author and title.

If you know the author or title of a book, look for either.

If you desire books on any particular subject, look for that subject.

Always bear in mind that in a Library catalogue "A," "An" and "The" at commencement of titles and subjects are disregarded, thus, "The Mistress of Shenstone" will be found under "Mistress of Shenstone."

Zero—General Works.
100—Philosophy.
200—Religion.
300—Sociology.
400—Philology.
500—Natural Science.
600—Useful Arts.
700—Fine Arts.
800—Literature.
900—History.

It may be mentioned that the reference room books are presented in a different drawer of the cabinet, also are the pamphlets and the books in the juvenile section. The magazines are to be found in the juvenile section on the extreme right of the stack room.

A WOULD-BE BILL HAWKINS

He Hit the Lights Instead of the Target

Rifle practice at the shooting gallery at the Armories will be held up for a few days owing to the lights being disabled.

It appears that last night, while engaged in rifle practice, a budding "Bill Hawkins" was trying to imitate that hero's example, but alas his brilliant hopes were dashed to the ground. After firing his first round of ammunition he heard a crash, and behold he was in darkness.

The vanishing of the lights was caused by the marksman missing the target by several feet and hitting a cluster of lamps above the target.

DR. McPHER LOST TWO TEETH

While engaged in a game of indoor baseball at the Armories last evening, Dr. McPherson had the misfortune to trip and fall heavily to the concrete floor. The doctor lost two teeth and his lip was cut.

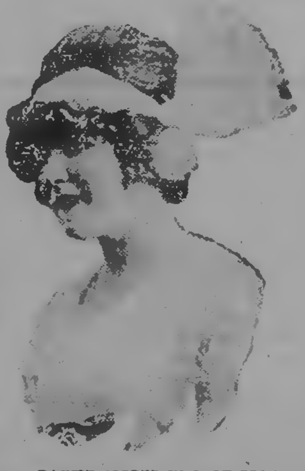
FOR YOUR HAIR.

English Malines Novelty In Coiffure Ornaments.



DAINTY AIGRET IN PALE BLUE.

English malines in pale blue tone is used for this dainty aigret ornament designed to be worn with a gown of pale blue chiffon and lace.

It can easily be made at home with two yards of malines. Simply divide three-quarters of a yard of malines in three pieces, cutting lengthwise and braid it as you would hair. Then take the yard and a quarter which you have left and divide it into five pieces, cutting across the material, which gives you five pieces of malines a quarter yard each.

With these five pieces form an aigret as pictured and twist part of the braided portion to form a loop to hide the aigret joining.

GO BACK TO SENATE AGAIN

Tariff Bill Is Subject To Still Further Revision.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Only the United States Senate now stands between the Underwood tariff bill and its approval by President Wilson. By a vote of 254 to 103 the House of Representatives adopted the conference report on the tariff measure at five o'clock last evening. The ballot of approval was taken at the end of 4 1-2 hours of general debate, during which the war-horses of the Democratic, Republican and Progressive parties of the House clashed in an old-fashioned partisan way. Chairman Underwood predicted that immediately after President Wilson signed the bill conditions in the United States would move onward into a period of prosperity and progress.

Filming Features In Canada.

ST. CATHARINES, Oct. 1.—Eighty-four towns and cities in Canada will be visited by James W. Jones, originator of the Canadian Agricultural and Industrial Bureau at Cleveland, Ohio, who is here awaiting the arrival of a moving picture machine and operator, for the purpose of "filming" the features of various points that might appeal to United States manufacturers and capitalists across the line with money to invest. He will deal with the Boards of Trade, and is beginning his campaign in St. Catharines.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 1. — Mrs. Marie Chester, of Middletown, N.Y., mother of ten children, three of whom accompanied her, yesterday finished in Minneapolis a 1,500-mile walk. She left New York city on July 31 and spent [illegible] days on the road. A number of business men of Middletown agreed to rebuild Mrs. Chester's burned home at an expense of $4,000 provided she made the trip in 65 days. Mrs. Chester and the three children, a girl and two boys, carried knapsacks with food and blankets.

Mrs. Griggs—Yes; it's all on John's account. The doctor's orders, you know.

Mrs. Grump—What's the trouble? Nervous breakdown?

Mrs. Griggs—In a way. It sounds absurd, of course, but Dr. Wilkes tells me that unless each year we choose a place of residence where there is a winning baseball team I'm as good as a widow any moment.—St. Louis Republic.

Told Them How.

A jolly group of traveling men had just got comfortably settled in the hotel lobby when another knight of the grip arrived.

"Mighty glad to see you fellows," he exclaimed enthusiastically, shaking hands all around.

"Sorry we can't say as much for you," was handed him by one of the group.

"Oh, you could all right if you'd lie like I do," replied the newcomer.—Kansas City Star.

"I knew you were coming to night to call on my sister," said Willie.

"How did you know?" inquired Mr. Staylate.

BRITAIN HAS DOUBTS

London Paper Wonders if Shooting is Declining.

The cream of British marksmanship is represented annually at the Bisley meeting, where volunteer-soldiers from all parts of the country, and from the Colonies, shoot off for pride of place in the various competitions, the greatest of which is, of course, the King's Prize, says London Ideas.

This is a time in which the question naturally arises: Is Britain doing as much as it should do to foster and encourage the art of rifle shooting. The answer is in the negative.

"Teaching the young idea how to shoot" is a phrase which has lost much of its practical significance, and it is astonishing (writes an Ideas investigator) that so many parents, who would be extremely annoyed if you called them unpatriotic, object to their boys handling a rifle on the ground that it produces a desire to kill. As a matter of expediency and precaution every boy ought to be made acquainted with firearms, or the chances are that he will in his ignorance, one day kill himself. Rifle shooting is a sport just as football, cricket and tennis are sports, and thousands of youngsters could be trained annually through their own desire to excel as marksmen if they had greater facilities and more official encouragement. Other nations realize the value of marksmanship—why should not we?

In 1893 France provided instruction in rifle shooting for boys of ten years and upward in the primary schools. During 1908 she spent £20,000 for ammunition alone for schoolboy rifle clubs. The National Union of Shooting Societies of France has something like 2,300 associated societies, with a total membership of 300,000.

Canada insists upon a course of marksmanship as part of her public school curriculum.

Australia annually appropriates £100,000 for her reserve force of 50,000 civilian riflemen, and railways carry free of charge rifle club members to and from rifle ranges. All the public schools are the proud possessors of cadet corps, the total membership being 40,000, which is supplied with arms, ammunition and instruction by the Government free of cost.

All the universities and public schools in Hungary have a course of rifle practice and maintain camps of instruction for them.

In Sweden even the smallest villages have their rifle ranges, and although the population of the whole country is only about five-and-a-half millions, there were over 148,000 active riflemen in 1911. Every year the Government allows over £40,000 for civilian rifle practice, and three years ago there were over two thousand rifle clubs, with a total membership of 130,000.

Little Switzerland, with a population of only three and a half millions, boasts of no less than 2,800 rifle ranges, and 3,600 shooting societies, containing 214,000 members, and Italy, Greece, and Austria have not been slow to realize the importance of rifle practice and are keeping pace with their neighbors in ear-marking annual grants for this purpose.

Think Board Extravagant.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 1.—Brantford Public School trustees have declined to accept $45,000 from the City Council for a new school in the east ward, and insist that a bylaw to raise $60,000 for such purpose be submitted to the ratepayers in January. It was the opinion of the aldermen that a suitable school could be built for $45,000.

Will Not Live Together.

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—An official bulletin regarding the illness of ex-King Manuel's bride, issued last night, says she is suffering from gastric fever that was set up Sept. 18 by bacteria in the intestines and which subsequently attacked the kidneys.

The long-continued silence in authentic sources had given impetus to the most sensational stories about the true illness of ex-King Manuel's bride. Most of them agree, however, in the assertion that the couple will never again live together.

Barbers Tighten Up.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 1.—Brantford barbers, at a union meeting, have definitely decided to charge 15 cents for a shave, and also to close Saturday nights at 10.30, and every Wednesday afternoon the year round. The changes go into effect Wednesday.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT

Deep Breathing.

Deep breathing will help to reduce the waist measure and enlarge the bust. The stretching exercises, too, are splendid as waist depleters. Raise the arms high above the head; then, holding knees straight, try to touch the floor with the finger tips. Stand erect, place hands on hips, bend from waist as far possible to the right, then to the left.

Caramel Custard.

Put two tablespoonfuls sugar into a small saucepan and stir it until it becomes quite brown, then pour it into a plain pudding mold. Butter the sides of the mold. Beat the eggs with four tablespoonfuls of sugar together till mixed well, then add one pint milk and one teaspoonful of vanilla extract. Pour into mold, cover with buttered paper, steam gently for one hour. Turn out and serve hot or cold.

Fish sandwiches are appetizing. Fish paste is now sold ready for use either in glass jars or tubes. It may also be prepared at home by freeing any cold cooked fish from bones and skin and mincing it. It should then be mixed to a paste with highly seasoned mayonnaise. If the fish is oily a good deal of lemon juice, vinegar or chopped capers may be used.

Cream of Onion Soup.

Slice sufficient white onions to measure one and a half cupfuls. Heat two tablespoonfuls of butter in a large pan, add the onions and cook slowly, shaking now and then until the onions are tender, but hardly beginning to color. Sprinkle over them two tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until absorbed. Add gradually one quart of hot milk, stirring that it may thicken evenly. When at the boiling point season, draw to one side and let simmer ten minutes. Rub through a sieve, return to the fire and serve hot.

PROGRESS IN N. MONAGHAN

Increase in Assessment of $90,822 This Year

As intimated in the report on the assessor's returns the township of North Monaghan has been largely benefitted by the growth of the city in the south end. Of late years, Browntown has sprung into prominence as a suburb of no mean proportions, while other sections of North Monaghan have also fared well.

This is borne out by the official statement that the assessment of North Monaghan for this year is $824,291, an increase of $90,822 over last year. The assessment in school section No. 2, where growth is most noticeable, amounts to $415,000.

The population has jumped ahead at a corresponding rate, and it may be that in the no distant future, "Little Peterboro" will clasp hands and enter the family circle.

THE HARVEST THANKSGIVING

Special Preacher at All Saints' to be Rev. Jas. A. Elliott

The Harvest Thanksgiving service of All Saints' church will be held Thursday evening, October 2nd, at 8 o'clock. The special preacher on this occasion will be the Rev. Jas. A. Elliott, M.A. Mr. Elliott is well known throughout Canada in connection with his articles in "The Spectator," with which he was associated for some time. His coming to Peterboro will be of interest to very many.

HUSTLING SOME ON THE JOB

Sometimes things go very contrary. As a rule it is always the spectator who gets hurt.

Paving operations on Hunter street attract a crowd all day long. One wonders how so many people are out of a job by the crowd that collects. The crowd makes quite a gathering and by all rule someone should get hurt—emptied into the cement mixer dumped into the cement mixer's cart, run over by an excited and strenuous son of Italy rushing a wheelbarrow. There is a push and go to the whole thing that fascinates, especially when one has not to pitch in and do likewise.

The pace sets a model for our civic employes to work up to when the city begins to do its own paving.

DID YOU EVER EAT POI?

Maybe You Wouldn't Care to the Way They Do It In Hawaii.

Poi is the national dish of the Hawaiians, and a poi supper is an event long to be remembered by foreigners admitted to participation therein. Poi is made from taro, a big, coarse, dark skinned vegetable grown under water, the size and shape of a large sweet potato. The taro is pounded until it becomes a coarse, moist mass and is then left to ferment.

When poi is served each guest bathes and dries the right hand and then proceeds to dip the index finger of that hand into the mass. There is quite a knack to the operation, and it is always necessary to instruct the novice that there is absolutely no need to move his arm, but simply the wrist.

One removes his finger at the same time that his neighbor does. On the finger of the skilful operator there will be a pear shaped ball of poi, but the clumsy one's fingers will simply be thinly veneered with the substance. Then, if the stranger ask what was the matter with his movement, he will be told that he held his finger too straight. He must crook it a little and turn his hand not too fast, with a wrist movement only.—Harper's Weekly.

Woman's Wit.

An emperor of Germany besieged a city which belonged to one of his rebellious noblemen. After the siege had lasted for a long time the emperor determined to take it by storm and to destroy all it contained by fire and sword. He did not, however, wish to injure the defenseless women. Therefore he sent a proclamation into the town saying that all the women might leave the place unhurt and carry with them whatever they held most precious. The nobleman's wife instantly decided to take her husband, and the other women followed her example. They soon issued from the city gate in a long procession, each one with her husband on her shoulders. The emperor was so much struck with the noble conduct of the women that he spared all. Even the city itself was left untouched.

Villagers in Battle.

A village fight took place near Cairo, Egypt, recently. Some peasants of the village of Charmonda allowed their cattle to stray into the cultivated fields of a peasant in the neighboring village of Zankalon. The latter vigorously protested, and a quarrel arose, which soon involved the inhabitants of both villages. Arming themselves with sticks and all sorts of missiles, the villagers arrayed themselves for battle and attacked each other. Preserving Pickles.

In pickling vegetables and fruits the first idea is to employ a means of preserving these foods for a considerable length of time, generally until the winter, when there is a scarcity or utter lack of fresh fruits and green vegetables. For this purpose salt or acid liquor is used. In vinegar pickles the addition of spices and sugar aid in preserving and increasing the palatableness of pickles. The sweeping condemnation against all pickles and condiments is ill advised and misguiding to those who depend on authoritative and official information in the line of dietetics, says Lida Ames Willis.

There is a large class of persons who should avoid pickles or the use of acids of any kind. Nature or the abnormal condition of the system will soon demonstrate the danger of indulgence by the discomfort caused by too much acidity in the stomach. Do not eat pickles unless you crave them, and if after eating them, as an accessory, not in a large quantity, you feel no ill effect, but, on the other hand, assimilate your food properly, you may consider pickles are wholesome in your individual case at least.

(Note.—In all vegetable pickles, catsups and sauces the addition of fresh grated horseradish will add greatly to the "goodness" and preserve the vinegar, preventing any mold.)

Dressing For the Pickles.

One gallon cider vinegar, a dozen tablespoonfuls mustard or a jug of French mustard, two cupfuls of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of turmeric powder, one large cupful of flour wet with little cold vinegar; put into the boiling vinegar, boil five minutes and then pour over the thoroughly drained pickles. These are the finest mixed pickles you ever made. If you like string beans in pickles put in two quarts, steamed and cut in inch pieces. The turmeric powder gives the rich yellow color.

Aunt Jane Harmon's Pickles.

One gallon of cucumbers cut small; one gallon green tomatoes, quartered; half a gallon of onions, steamed; two heads of cauliflower, steamed; half dozen green peppers; scald in strong salt brine and let stand from one to two days.

Mrs. Grant's French Pickle.

Slice into a stoneware or earthern jar a peck of green tomatoes and six large Mexican onions. Pour over them a cupful of salt. Let stand for twenty-four hours and strain off the liquid. Dissolve three pounds of sugar in a quart of good cider vinegar. Add quarter of a pound of white mustard seed, loose, and one teaspoonful each of ground ginger and cloves; two teaspoonfuls of mustard and one of cayenne pepper. Turn in the tomatoes and onions and cook gently for about fifteen minutes, then pack in glass or stoneware jars.

Capital Mixed Pickles.

One peck green tomatoes, ten onions, ten sweet green peppers, chopped all together and fine; one cup salt mixed through them. Let stand over night. Drain and press out all the liquid and put into a porcelain lined kettle with a pound of brown sugar, half a cup fresh grated horseradish, a tablespoonful each ground black pepper, mustard, celery seed and whole of white mustard seed. Cover with good vinegar and boil gently for an hour.

Woman's World

Recent Jewelry Thefts Alarm Society Mondaines.

MRS. JOHN H. HANAN (TOP) AND MRS. CHARLES CARY RUMSEY.

That women of wealth are often careless with jewels of great price is again evidenced in the case of Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, daughter of Mrs. E. H. Harriman, who recently lost from her Newport home gems valued at $100,000.

Mrs. Rumsey, it seems was in the habit of leaving a number of her favorite jewels in an unlocked bureau drawer, their resting place being two pasteboard boxes. Now every woman knows what a lot of personal plunder can find a home in a dressing table drawer, and she also knows what an easy thing it is to upset boxes and drag out some treasured article unawares from this convenient spot; this is annoying to the owner of the belonging besides being unnecessary temptations to dishonest servants.

Mrs. John H. Hanan, wife of the wealthy shoe manufacturer of New York, also a recent victim of jewelry theft, owes her loss to the carelessness of a maid left in charge of jewels to be placed in a secret drawer which were stolen while the maid was absent from the room for a few minutes.

It is known that in foreign countries many women of wealth are content to wear duplicates of their fine jewels, and with the lack of supervision in country houses it would not be a bad idea on this side of the water for women to follow their example.

On one occasion many years ago the late Mrs. Paran Stevens reported the loss at a fashionable ball of a diamond and emerald tiara. The host was in great distress when Mrs. Stevens went to him the day following to ask if there was any trace of the lost ornament, and upon learning that it had not been found she said: "Well, don't worry; they were only imitation and I did not want them to fall into strange hands."

When Mrs. Potter Palmer used to go to Bar Harbor she always carried there for the season imitations of her wonderful pearls, whose value was well known the world over. Mrs. Palmer did not care to have the responsibility of so much that was valuable and in traveling she always left her best jewels in the safe deposit vault at her Chicago home.

Minnesota Women Try Dress Reform.

Declaring that the present styles in dresses are not fit for modest women, and those who refuse to wear tight skirts are obliged to do without new garments, the Fourth district of the Federation of Women's clubs of Minnesota has stated a dress reform which it is proposed to make nation wide.

Recently the board wrote to every manufacturer and buyer of ready made clothing for women and to every manufacturer and publisher of dress patterns making an appeal for modification of the present styles. The letter being sent to the clothing manufacturers reads:

"The executive board of the Fourth district of the Minnesota Federation of Women's clubs, at the request of a number of women, ask that, beginning with the next season, there be furnished some very attractive, up to date, garments where the width at the bottom of the skirts shall be two yards for a woman of thirty-six inch bust measure, well proportioned, not drawing tight across the form at any part, and reaching within three inches of the shoe; other sizes in proportion.

"Many women under protest have been obliged to use the present styles of ready made clothing, but very many have informed us that they have done without new garments rather than buy such as have been offered during the last few months. We ask for some different styles for modest gentlewomen from those suited to the demimondaine."

The appeal to the manufacturers and publishers of patterns is worded the same, except that the letter states that few women who use patterns are competent to make changes in them and that many object seriously to the styles furnished during the last few months and ask relief. The pattern makers are asked to change their product for the next month's issue of patterns.

WAGNER AND THE CABBY.

A Bit of Comedy That Won a Good Tip From the Composer.

A story of Wagner known to very few is brought to the light by the Vossische Zeitung. When the composer was in a really merry mood, the right mood for story telling, he used to say that, being in Berlin on a very hot summer's day and finding himself in the Donhoffsplatz, he summoned one of the first class droshkies that were still fairly numerous at that time and told the driver where to go. His destination was at the very farthest point of a district within which only the lowest fare could be demanded.

It struck Wagner immediately that his driver was taking a very affecting leave of one of his fellows, as though he were starting on a life or death journey. "Goodby, William," he said; "we shan't see each other again for a long time."

After the carriage had rattled on for a good while it came suddenly to a standstill. The driver got down from his box on the right hand side, opened the carriage door and banged it to again; then he went round to the left side and repeated the performance, climbed up on to his box and resumed the journey. At the end of the drive Wagner asked him what this dumbcrambo show meant. The driver, with a sly look, made answer: "I just wanted to bamboozle my old nag. He would never have believed that the whole drive was for a minimum fare and would have refused to go on. But by banging the doors I got him to imagine that one fare had got out and another got in."

Wagner laughed heartily over this explanation, and the driver, in spite of his greed, over which the composer made very merry in his letters, realized the handsome tip on which he had been speculating.—London Standard.

GREECE HAD THE RECALL.

Only In the Old Days the System Was Called "Ostracism."

In the palmy days of the Greek republics, many centuries ago, as historians tell us, when a man rose to such a height of power or affluence that he became a possible menace to the state, the citizens took a vote on his case as an "undesirable." This was sent to the senate, and, if the vote was sufficiently large and representative, that body passed a resolution in which the too distinguished citizen was invited, in polite diplomatic terms, to take a few years of retirement abroad—in other words, he was officially exiled for the good of the state.

This was "ostracism," so called from the fact, it is explained, that the voting citizens wrote their names on oyster shells, and it was instituted as a measure of security to the commonwealth. Any citizen of great wealth or influence or who had a large personal following which might, in an emergency, be used to the detriment of the state was liable to receive this distinguished mark of public consideration. It was a kind of primitive "recall," which had the advantage of being equally applicable to "ins" and "outs."

Those early Greeks were wonderful fellows, who knew how to deal with knotty problems of their day; which doubtless included grafting and other human peculiarities not unknown in our own time. If an election did not suit them or if any man swelled too far above his fellows there was always the leveling oyster as a wholesome corrective in reserve.—Christian Herald.

SNUBBED BY EUGENIE.

Carpeaux and a Bust of the Empress He Had Modeled.

One day Carpeaux, the painter, asked Napoleon III., who had always expressed great friendship for him, to permit him to model the bust of the Empress Eugenie. Her gracious majesty admitted that Carpeaux painted, but denied that he was a sculptor and modestly pretended that her beauty was not sculptural.

Napoleon III. promised to speak in his favor and invited him to Compiegne. Carpeaux went. Eight days passed. The empress did not wish to pose. The invitation to the chateau was for only a week, and Carpeaux was notified to yield his place. "No," he declared, "not before I have made the bust of the empress."

This response was repeated to the emperor, who made another attempt. He ended by obtaining her consent to give a pose of two hours to Carpeaux.

The sculptor asked no more. He made a masterpiece, baked the clay and proudly showed it to the sovereign. She looked at it a moment, made a little mouth, said, "Oh, yes, it is pretty," and turned her back.

Carpeaux was furious. He returned to his workshop with the bust and threw it upon the floor. It was scratched, but not broken. A workman picked it up. It then went into the possession of Dr. Fournier. Today it is owned by his son, who blesses the Empress Eugenie for not having desired it.—Cri de Paris.

True Courtesy.

Well bred people are always willing to retire into the background, while those who are not polite demand the foreground. True courtesy is the refraining from hurting the feelings of any one as well as the striving to make those we meet glad that they have had the pleasure.

Balzac a Hypnotist.

That the great French novelist Balzac was not only a believer in personal "magnetism," but himself an expert hypnotist, is affirmed by Count Apponyi in his "Journal."

Count Apponyi says that Balzac once related an instance of event reading at a distance which came under his notice. "I have believed in magnetism from that day," Balzac continued, "and have myself become a powerful magnetizer. Such is my force that few people can resist me. Almost every one who enters my house becomes hypnotizer, and I can make them reveal their most secret thoughts." Balzac boasted that he could even hypnotize at a distance.

FORTY THOUSAND PEOPLE FOR FIRST GAME AT NEW YORK

Philadelphia Speculator Engages Twenty Messengers to Stand all Night in Line to Purchase Tickets

Canadian Press Despatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1— Forty thousand is the attendance figured on by John Foster, secretary of the New York Giants for the first championship game on October 7. Fifty thousand dollars have already been returned to people who apparently do not understand that all tickets must be bought at the gates and no mail orders will be filled.

At Philadelphia one speculator has engaged twenty messengers, paying them thirty cents an hour to stand in line all Sunday night.

Connie Mack says he will permit Baker and Collins to write a series of special newspaper articles on the world's series, he considering that the National Baseball Commission made the rule against this practice too late for this year.

David Fultz, president of the Baseball Players Fraternity, announces that players who write for papers on the world's series, will have the support of that organization in carrying out their contracts.

WALTER JOHNSON'S DOPE ON THE WORLD'S SERIES

Premier Twirler of American League Picks the Athletics

(By Walter Johnson.)

The Athletics will win the world's series because they are stronger offensively than the Giants. I do not believe the Giants will be any more successful against Bender and Plank than they were two years ago.

I have pitched against the Athletics seven times this year. Three times they beat me and three times I won from them. Once I faced them after we had practically lost the game. My experience has been that, unless I am right in every sense of word and able to pitch shut-out ball, they have beaten me.

I have often been asked if the Athletics have a batting weakness? If they have I never found it. Mack hasn't a weak batter on his team. Even his pitchers are dangerous in a pinch. I know this from experience.

Baker and McInnes are the most dangerous batsmen on the team. If either has a failing I don't know what it is. Both will go after bad balls and make base hits when a pitcher least expects it. Usually too, they do this when a hit means a run.

Collins is another sterling batsman. A man has to pitch to him all the time. He seldom goes after one inside or outside, and when he gets the pitcher in a hole he will hit safely three times out of four.

Eddie Murphy, Oldring and Strunk are up there crowding the plate all the time. They are hard men to pitch to for many reasons. They may be fooled on a curve three times running, and the fourth time, when a run is needed, they will whale a hook for extra bases.

Schang and Lapp, the catchers, are good hitters, and Dannie Murphy, the pinch hitter, is a slugger always feared.

If Brown, Shawkey, Houck or Bush start in a world's series game and can hold the Giants to three runs the Athletics will win every time. I look, though, for Bender and Plank to win the championship for the team.

Mathewson and Marquard will not fool the Athletics. Tesreau may do so, for he is a spitball pitcher and we have no first-class spitters in the league since Walsh had to quit.

The Athletics are a better all-round team at present than they were in 1911 when they last met the Giants.

LINDSAY PLANS BIG BONSPIEL

Lindsay, Oct. 1.—The Lindsay Curling Club held a special meeting to consider the advisability of holding a big bonspiel at some date during the coming winter. There was a large attendance of members, all of whom were enthusiastically in favor of holding the event, if sufficient support could be obtained among the citizens of Lindsay. A committee was appointed to look into the matter thoroughly, and after sounding the business men of the town, to make a special report on the advisability of the scheme to the club at a later meeting.

The Club aim to make the bonspiel a big one, and a credit to the town. Curling clubs will be invited to attend and take part from all over Ontario and possibly from the W[illegible] Eastern provinces.

Tattooing as a Trade-Mark.

Seafaring is perhaps the only profession in which tattooing still is a "trade-mark;" the present sailor British prince has been tattooed as was his father before him, now George V. Another sign of "profession" was recently placed on her cheek by a famous English beauty who now is tattooed "Votes for Women;" fortunately methods have lately been discovered which remove such marks without scars. Tattooing has been divided by one observer into hieratic or religious; totemistic; family; caste; profession; embellishment of charms; to avert the evil eye; to hide a blemish; to cure a malady.

Deserves to Go.

"What? You didn't let your office boy off this afternoon simply because he told you his grandmother was dead? Don't you know that the moment he left here he went straight to the ball game?"

"Yes, but what could I do? The little rascal, taking a long chance, looked me straight in the eye and asked me politely would I like to attend the funeral. You can't call a man's-size bluff like that, can you?"

Watching Home Rule

Teacher (instructing class in the map of Ireland): "Where is Ireland's Eye?"

All in the class were silent but Tommy Murphy, who has heard his father reading the newspapers lately:

"Please, miss, it's on the House of Commons watching Home Rule."

Wife (severely): Is this the fish you caught? Husband: Y-e-s, m' dear. Wife (shrewdly): Were you fishing in salt water or fresh? Husband: I—I don't know, m' dear. Didn't taste it. —London Tit-Bits.

Little Boy (with swollen face): Oh, dear! I wish I was grandpa, or else the baby.

Mother: Why?

Little Boy: Grandpa's teeth are all one and baby's hasn't come yet.

Car Ferries on Irish Sea.

Car ferries are familiar modes of freight transportation across water barriers in this country, but have not been much exploited in Europe. The most notable example, perhaps, has been that which connect Germany and Sweden. The latest development of the idea is an important scheme, recently begun, for ferries from Ireland to Scotland and England, one to convey railroad freight cars from Larne, Antrim, to Stranraer; the other, connecting Dublin and Holyhead, Wales. The latter will be about the same distance as the German-Sweden line but will be through rougher waters.

IN THE WHITE COAT.

Cricket Umpires and Some Curious Decisions They Have Made.

An umpire in a cricket match has not unusually a very exciting time. But there have been occasions when things have happened even to this impassive and phlegmatic individual.

On one occasion an umpire shared the common fate of the stumps, and was bowled clean off his pins by a ball which took him in the small of the back. It was a leg hit of terrific force, and the umpire, seeing it coming, turned round, thinking a smack in the back preferable to one in another place.

But not only did the ball knock the great man down but it rebounded into the wicketkeeper's hand, and when the umpire had regained his breath and legs he promptly gave the offending batsman "Out."

The Land of the Midnight Sun ought to be an ideal venue for cricket matches seeing that the day is twenty-four hours long, and seeing there is no real necessity, except death from over exertion of the fielding side, to draw stumps at all. There is a story told of a match in Lapland which excited the natives so much that they organized a return match to start at one o'clock, the first hour after midnight. The gentleman visitor, who tells the story, officiated as umpire, clad in his nightshirt and standing at his bedroom window!

Probably the most remarkable decision on record was in this wise. The batsman had had a box of matches—evidently not cricket matches—in his pocket and the ball ignited the whole contraption. As the match quickly reached "the quick," the batsman began to tear at his clothes and pads like a maniac, and, of course, got out of his ground.

The ball had gone to short-slip who shied the wicket down and claimed a "run out" before he realized the perilous state of the batsman. However, the umpire, seeing smoke issuing from the batsman's lower extremities luckily put short-slip "wise." "Carn't give 'im: howt, sir. The gent's afire!" were his words.

Some young players in one of the parks, being hard-up for an umpire, roped in a spectator who happened to be a Hibernian. In the first over leg-before appeal was made to the Celt. "How's that?" said the bowler. "How's that yersilf," said the umpire. "Just plaze yersilf, me bhoy, how it is; ye know a fine dale moor about it than I do."

Probably the most amazing decision ever given by an umpire, who was really supposed to know something of the game occurred in a village match some time ago. After a single run had been scored by the players, who then made no attempt to run again, the umpire loudly shouted, "Short run!"

The verdict was hailed with a perfect tornado of laughter. But the umpire did not seem to realize that only a s[illegible]nd or subsequent run could be sho[illegible]

In an up-country match in Australia, a ball hit the balls and smashed them, so a piece of wattle, undivided in the middle, was laid across the top of the stumps. With his next ball the bowler sent the middle stump flying and tumbling twenty yards.

But the wattle, reclining peacefully on the leg and off stumps, was undisturbed. The umpire gave the batsman "Not out!"

Expects Something.

Failures.

The only failure a man ought to fear is failure in cleaving to the purpose he sees to be best.—George Eliot.

ST. JAMES' BROTHERHOOD ANNUAL SOCIAL AND CONCERT

A Pleasant Evening in the South End A New Soprano and Some Old Chestnuts.

The Brotherhood of St. James' Church held their annual tea, meeting, social and concert last night. It proved a great success. A splendid tea was provided and an excellent programme of music was rendered by members and friends of the church.

Miss L. Hanson, who is only recently out from England, was the star singer of the evening, and a very brilliant and happy star she was. She has an exceptionally fine soprano voice and she sang "Valley of Laughter" with a vivacity and charm which is not often met with. She is only a young girl but she has a voice which ought to bring her out into the front rank of Peterboro's concert favorites.

A duet, "Love and War" by Messrs. H. Lee and A. Barton, met with loud and long applause. Miss D. Hanson contralto also sang solos and in duets with her sister. Mr. R. Mactis gave selections on the flute which were very sweet and well appreciated. Mr. J. John contributed recitations, serious and otherwise; he cracked some chesnuts with which he ought to be "roasted."

Mr. J. H. Moss occupied the chair. A very enjoyable evening was spent and the receipts were somewhere in the neighborhood of $50, which goes to the building fund.

DAUGHTERS OF THE EMPIRE UNVEIL BRONZE TABLET IN MEMORY OF DAN SPENCE

At the Armories last night, the 57th Chapter, Daughters of the Empire, performed an interesting ceremony, when a bronze tablet, in memory of Sergt. Dan Spence, who was killed in the South African war, was unveiled.

The 57th Regiment was drawn up and surrounded the officers and members of the Chapter.

Rev. Canon Davidson, Chaplain of the Regiment, made the following remarks:

"The 57th Chapter, D.O.E., wish me to express their pleasure in coming into close contact with the Regiment whom it is their privilege and pleasure and honor to serve, and to recognize the good services of the regiment, they desire to do something to press forward the part of true patriotism. In presenting to this regiment a tablet to the memory of a former member of the regiment, one who did his service, and died in the execution of his duties in the South African War. I can remember the memorable occasion when a number of years ago it was known that a certain number would be picked for service in South Africa, 1901. The longing to be one ran high among ours, as it did among many other regiments in Canada for that position. Only a very small proportion were chosen, and of these one was Daniel Spence, Sergeant of No. 3 Company, P.R. We remember the tremendous enthusiasm there was in the town of Peterborough then. We heard of their splendid progress in the battle field for some time, then one day we were all stricken with sorrow, and at the same time with pride to know that one of our regiment had had the honor to fall. While out with a scouting expedition he was shot by the Boers. Sergeant Spence lived in Peterborough and lived a good and bright life, and he was greatly interested in the work of the Y.M.C.A. He was also well liked by all his colleagues in the regiment and also by the citizens, who contributed to his memorial in the shape of the Dan Spence ambulance. Canon Davidson, then, as Chaplain of the regiment applied a few more suitable remarks, after which he said:

"To the honor of the King, of this Empire, and of the Dominion of Canada, and to the Canadian Militia, we now unveil this tablet to the memory of Daniel Spence."

Mrs. E. B. Clegg, regent of the 57th Chapter, D.O.E., drew aside the Union Jack, which revealed the bronze tablet which bears the following inscription:

In Memory of
DANIEL SPENCE, 1st. C.M.R.
Sergeant No. 3 Company
57th Regiment, P.R.
KILLED IN ACTION AT BOSCHPOORT, S.A.
23rd. September, 1901.
(For King and Empire.)

Erected 1913 by 57th Regiment
Chapter Daughters of the Empire.

The National Anthem was played by the band, after which, on behalf of the Regiment, Col. Clegg thanked the Daughters of the Empire for their kind act.

DIRECT FROM CORT THEATRE, NEW YORK

The much heralded production of "Peg O' My Heart," one of New York's greatest successes will be at the Grand Theatre next Saturday under the direction of Oliver Morosco. This play is said to be one of the cleanest and most wholesome plays seen on the stage in years. It tells the story of an Irish American girl who is suddenly brought to England to take up her home with unknown aristocratic relatives there. Her ignorance of the ways of high society leads to many humorous situations, and the love interest is said to be most exquisite. The play is from the pen of J. Hartley Manners, the well known playwright.

In the part of "Peg" Elsa Ryan is said to be all that could be desired, and she is supported by a well selected cast, including Lillian Keller, Fanny Addison Pitt, Wilda Mari Moore, Henry Stanford, Lewis Broughton, Gilbert Douglas, Frank Burbeck and Gordon Burby. 2

SUDDEN CALL TO MR. ROBERT McWHINNIE

Passed Away at His Home on Harvey Street

Mr. Robert McWhinnie, one of Peterborough's best known and popular citizens passed away suddenly this morning at his residence on Harvey street. Last evening Mr. McWhinnie retired in excellent health and arose this morning at his usual hour. Members of the family heard a heavy fall and on entering his room, found him dead. Dr. Halliday was at once summoned and gave the cause of death as heart failure.

The late Mr. McWhinnie was born in Ormston, Que., sixty-three years ago, and has been a resident of this city for some forty years. He served his apprenticeship in the boot and shoe business with the late Samuel White who conducted a boot and shoe business on Simcoe street. Mr. McWhinnie was also connected with the firm of Foote & McWhinnie for some years and after Mr. Foot's death he went into business for himself. About three years ago he disposed of the business to Mr. C. E. Smith and retired.

The late Mr. McWhinnie was one of the most highly respected business men in the city and was a man of sterling integrity.

He leaves to mourn his sad death besides a sorrowing wife, three daughters, Miss Ethel, residing at home; Mrs. E. G. Elliott, Regina, Sask., and Mrs. Frank W. Ball, of Kerrobert. Mrs. Elliott has been visiting in the city for the past few weeks.

Mrs. Ball has been notified of her father's death and is expected to return home for the funeral.

A brother in Detroit and two sisters are also left to mourn his loss.

The deceased was a member of the Masons, Oddfellows and the Foresters and also a member of George street Church.

The funeral arrangements will be announced later.

LOOKING FOR HIS SISTER

R. H. Sandys Has not Seen Her for 27 Years

MOTHER IS DEAD

The following letter, which is self-explanatory, was received this morning by Police Chief Thompson, who requests that any person who can give information in the matter, to communicate with the police department:

Pomeroy, Ohio,
September 29, 1913.

Chief of Police,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—If it would not be asking too much of you to try and locate my sister for me. I have not heard from her for over ten years. The last time I heard of her was through a sister in Montreal. She was then postmistress at Peterborough, Ont. If you should find her whereabouts I wish you would let me know and tell her mother died September 10th, 1913 and was buried September 13th, at London, England. Tell her to write me. Her name is Rebecca Sandys, and she is about 37 years of age. Though she is my sister, I have not seen her for over 27 years. She forgets she has a brother I guess. She used to work for some people in Peterborough by the name of Hawley. I think they were farmers or cattle buyers.

Thanking you in advance for any information you can secure for me, I remain

Yours sincerely,
R. H. SANDYS,
Pomeroy, Ohio.

Near Fame.

A young man, constant in his attendance in a cafe where the art students congregate in Paris, sat in his usual corner and surveyed the scene.

"Who is that chap?" asked a visitor. "Is he a painter or a sculptor, or what?"

"Oh, no; none of those," said a habitue. "He has a most engaging and important calling—he is the brother of a poet."—Saturday Evening Post.

Of Course.

A New York dramatic writer tells of an actress of great popularity who is just beginning to be obsessed with the notion that the public holds her to be older than she really is.

The writer was assigned to interview this player. He wished to obtain her views with reference to the state of the drama, a topic whereon the actress did not seem particularly anxious to descant.

"It does not seem to me," gently suggested the interviewer with a smile, "that I am really ascertaining your opinion. You ought to be frank, since your eyes are gray and"—

"Prematurely so, my dear boy, prematurely so," the actress hastened to assure him.—Judge.

Fielding's Turning Point.

England's censorship of the drama caused Fielding to turn from playwriting to novel writing. Fielding began his literary career as a dramatist, and by his political satires brought about the establishment of the censorship in 1737, the bill being introduced by Walpole, one of Fielding's victims. With playwriting thus barred to him, he turned his attention to the novel.

ENGLAND'S NEW DRAMATISTS

If the theatre of Pinero and Jones did not "represent life," and if Mr. Bernard Shaw was too prone to "argue about it," the path that St. John Hankin opened up has been followed by other writers very clearly. Mr. Granville Barker, in "The Madras House," especially, has pushed farther along it than Hankin even saw; while Mr. Galsworthy has kept very austerely to the path of life as he sees it lived in the big world outside the theatre. The work of these two men is so well known, however, that we may turn at once to the younger workers. Since Miss Elizabeth Baker has failed up to the present to follow up her admirable and sympathetic play of clerk life, "Chains," Miss Githa Sowerby, and Mr. Stanley Houghton must be regarded as the two most promising of recent recruits to the theatre. Miss Sowerby also has only one play to her name that need be seriously considered, but there is plenty of time for her to follow it with others. "Rutherford and Son" is the study of a middle-class household and of its dominance by the father, given with something of Ibsen's spareness and economy. Mr. Houghton is a typical product of the English repertory theatres. His apprentice work for Miss Horniman's theatre at Manchester—which included the amusing comedy for parents, "The Younger Generation"—prepared one for his admirable achievement in "Hindle Wakes." Here is a play that is at once exciting, as a good play should be, and almost perfectly faithful in its adherence to real life. One may think that the mill girl who refuses her employer's son in marriage is not, in her concluding outbreak, quite innocent of the suspicion of having studied Mr. Bernard Shaw; but for three-fourths of his play Mr. Houghton is master both of his story and of the best way to tell it in the theatre; there can be no two opinions about that. I would group with Mr. Houghton, Mr. Charles McEvoy, Mr. Harold Brighouse, and Mr. G. J. Hamlen, each of whom has come to the London theatre after a period of service with the repertory theatres in the country.—P. P. Howe, in the North American Review.

To Check Blasphemy

The Holy Name Society of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, has decided not to have a procession this year, because of opposition, partly religious and partly political, it would appear. The Holy Name Society is a Roman Catholic organization, whose object is to check blasphemy and swearing. This continent may not be worse than others in the matter of the taking of God's name in vain; but there are not many who travel about it who do not feel at times and places that there is real occasion for the work of such an organization and that it should be encouraged. That there should be objection in Pittsburg to parades of the Society of the Holy Name suggests that some Pittsburgers are less broad minded than they should be and that intolerance in religious matters on this continent does not belong to Canada alone.—Montreal Gazette.

COMMISSION WILL HANDLE ELECTRICAL SUPPLIES

In Order to Secure Lowest Possible Rates for Towns Requiring Power Accessories the Board will Act As Middleman Without Asking a Percentage —Laboratory To Test Goods.

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—Hereafter for the municipalities of Ontario the Hydro-Electric Commission will serve as the middleman in the purchase of all electrical equipment. In no sense, however, will there be a middleman's profit for this venture, the details of which were last evening made public. It is designed purely to advance the cause of cheap power to all who would have it. It came as a request from many towns and cities that the committee act as central purchasing agent, so that they might obtain the reduction on the cost of materials and apparatus consequent upon buying large quantities. The idea will be carried out, and in addition the widely-completed building in Toronto will have a thoroughly equipped laboratory to ensure by test the standard quality of the goods purchased.

The commission is sending out a booklet to bring before the municipalities the advantage to be obtained both in quality and price by co-operation in the purchase of supplies. Large quantities of lamps are held in stock at the storehouse, and thus immediate shipments are practicable.

The price of lamps, as is pointed out by the commission, depends on the quantity ordered, which is naturally governed by the number required by the municipalities.

One of the important works carried on is the repair and examinations of meters in a special department. It is also planned to make bulk contracts for meters, transformers, etc., by stocking small quantities for rush orders. In this connection the commission states that the municipalities in general apparently have not realized the saving made by bulking orders in material and equipment as well as in lamps.

The bulletin issued the different sections of the building are described, the whole structure covering an area 110 by 70 feet and being three storeys in height. The equipment includes a 300,000 volt transformer and special appliances of great use to towns which wish to find out the exact demands of their locality both in light and power.

PUBLIC MUST KEEP THE MEN

Parole System no Good if Convicts Get Cold Shoulder

KINGSTON, Oct. 2.—The prison reform commission sat three hours and a half yesterday, adjourning until the call of the chairman. Adjournment was made owing to the fact that one chief witness, Major W. S. Hughes, formerly accountant at the penitentiary, now inspector of prisons, is in the west, and it may be two weeks before sessions will be resumed.

Dr. J. M. Platt, former warden, was under examination all day yesterday. The outstanding feature of his testimony was in regard to rules and regulations regarding the prison. While admitting the penitentiary was no place for pleasure, Dr. Platt thought much more could be accomplished for good convicts by kindness.

Asked about the parole system, the witness stated that he found as a rule that the police were unsympathetic, and often ready to pick men up again and send them back to prison. The parole system would not be serving the good it was intended until the general public showed more sympathy towards men on coming out of the penitentiary. Given the "cold shoulder" on coming out, many drifted back with old companions, and eventually found their way into prison again.

Dr. Platt characterized cropping convicts' hair and putting him in striped clothing as unnecessary. It was only done to help in case of escape. He would abolish the custom, as he could not recall one case where a striped suit had helped to recover an escaped prisoner.

Industries in the penitentiary were chief among the things to bring about a reformation of the prisoners. Dr. Platt favored enlarging work on the farm. The warden should be given power to stock it. He was in favor of trade schools for younger prisoners, the Government providing material and instruction.

DOCTORS TRIUMPH

They Can Now Deal With the Infantile Paralyis Germ.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, and Dr. Hideyo Noguchi, one of his distinguished fellow-workers in that institution, have succeeded at last in cultivating artificially that germ that is responsible for epidemic poliomyelitis, commonly known as infantile paralysis. Their account of the experiments leading up to this long-hoped-for result appears in the current issue of The Journal of Experimental Medicine.

In a series of thirty-three experiments with the nervous tissue of monkeys, comprising thirteen specimens of brain tissue, two of brain emulsion and eighteen filtrates of brain and spinal cord from twenty-four animals infected from two diffenent strains of human virus, an initial growth was obtained in nineteen instances, of which sixteen proved to be pure and three mixed cultures. Of these, pure sub-cultures were obtained thirteen times—namely, eight times from brain tissues, four times from filtrates, and once only from emulsion.

Under the microscope, when properly strained the micro-organisms were found to be of very minute size, globular in form, hanging together in short chains, pairs and small masses, devoid of independent motility.

Goes Back To Serve 21 Years.

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—Jos A Lauzon, sentenced at the Soo about nine years ago to 20 years' imprisonment for an indecent offence, and recently liberated on ticket-of-leave, was sentenced by Sir John Boyd yesterday to ten years for a similar offence. He will now have to put in 21 years in the penitentiary

GIBSON TO HANG

Toronto Murderer's Appeal is Refused by Cabinet Council

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—The law must take its course in the case of Charles Gibson, of Toronto, sentenced to be hanged on Oct. 9 for the murder of Moses Rosenthal over a year ago. Such is the final decision of the Governor-in-Council yesterday morning. Gibson will hang.

Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, after long and careful consideration of the trial evidence, and also of affidavits later submitted upon request for a new trial, reported that the application could not be granted, as it was not founded on sufficient material to justify him in ordering a second trial.

On receiving the order-in-Council, his Excellency Sir Charles Fitzpatrick gave it two days' consideration before affixing his signature. He entirely concurred in the opinion of the Privy Council.

Naval Base For Australia.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Sir Maurice Fitzmaurice, the eminent engineer who supervised several big Canadian undertakings, has been invited to proceed to Australia to advise the Commonwealth Government on the establishment of a chain of naval bases.

IS STILL A MYSTERY

Was Accident Victim a St. Catharines Man?

St. Catharines, Oct 2—That the body of the young man killed in an automobile accident near Peterboro' is that of James Sylvester Eck, aged twenty-one, and son of a wealthy owner of nitrate mines in South America, is verified by Richmond F. Robinson, an ex-Alderman of this city, who remembers the tattoo mark on the arm. Mr. Robinson last night notified his brother-in-law at Cobalt, who has the address of the young victim's parents in Harrow, Middlesex, England, to apprise them of the fatality. Mr Robinson is also taking precautions against the body going to the Medical College at Toronto, and has wired instructions for the embalming of the corpse, and that it be held until his arrival in Toronto. Eck was a member of the St. Catharines Club three years ago His expenditures reached six figures in a very few years.

Wm. Bell, of Smith township identified the body at Belleghem's undertaking establishment, yesterday, as that of J. V. Eck, who Mr. Bell says, worked with him some time ago. Information regarding Eck was sent to St. Catharines with the above result.

Editing Parnell's Letters.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Mrs. Charles Stewart Parnell, formerly Mrs. O'Shea, is at work collecting letters of the late Mr. Parnell, which on completion will be published in book form. There are about 800 letters and their publication is expected to create considerable discussion. Offers to purchase the letters were received from all over the world; one newspaper proprietor in the United States asked Mrs. Parnell to name her own price for exclusive rights.

Want Water Lots.

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—To complete its comprehensive scheme of harbor development, the Toronto Harbor Commission is asking the Government that three water lots owned by the Government be transferred to the commission. The government's part of the contract for the Toronto harbor work, which was let to the Canadian Stewart Co., is now ready for signature, and will be signed this week. Work can then be started at once.

WOULD FLY ACROSS ATLANTIC

Claude Grahame-White Says all He Needs is $30,000.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Claude Grahame White is making serious preparations for an aeroplane flight across the Atlantic. He has designed a biplane which he believes can undertake the flight safely, and he estimates that the full equipment for the trip will cost more than $30,000.

"The first flight across the Atlantic will mark an epoch in aviation," he said yesterday, "and my ambition is to be the first to reach America from Europe by the aeroplane route. There is no doubt whatever in my mind that the transatlantic flight will be made before long by someone, and it is only a question of who the first shall be. At present I am trying to interest friends and supporters of aviation here that with any kind of support the great flight will soon be a reality."

Aged Man Killed by Train.

GUELPH, Oct. 2.—Andrew Richardson, a millwright, 70 years of age, was instantly killed on the C.P.R. tracks near the provincial prison farm, yesterday afternoon, when he was run down by the train which leaves here for the east at 4.33.

The engineer noticed the old man, who was hard of hearing, walking along the track, and whistled several times, with no effect, the victim apparently not hearing the signal. The emergency brake was thrown on, but without avail, as the pilot struck Richardson, throwing him clear of the track and instantly killing him.

No Pardon For Orchard.

BOISE, Idaho, Oct. 2.—As a result of protests from all over the state, no pardon for Harry Orchard, confessed slayer of former Governor Frank Steunenberg, was asked by the Metropolitan Church Association of Waukesha, Wis., yesterday, when the state board of pardon met. Orchard insisted that he petition be delayed. He is serving a life term and has been in prison since January, 1906. Orchard is a native of Ontario.

POLICE CHIEF ON CARPET

Two Charges Against Port Hope's Chief Constable

PORT HOPE, Oct. 2.—Police Chief Gummerson will be the defendant in Police Court Friday morning, when he will be charged with trespassing and assault.

This case arises out of the Chief's attempt to secure possession of a Barnardo Home girl, Ruth Hubbard, who was at Chas. Floody's residence. When the Chief visited the Floody house he was refused admission by Charles Floody, whereupon he threw Floody into the street, at least this is the story of the plaintiff. The Chief claims to have been acting upon instructions from the home authorities.

Rev. J. S. LeFlair became interested in the little girl's misfortune and phoned to the Home. The authorities there requested Rev. LeFlair to leave the girl at the Floody home until the arrival of the superintendent.

Stillman, vice-president of the American association, replied.

BIG STORM IN NEW YORK

American Metropolis Crippled For Hours

TWO ARE KILLED

Lightning Struck Elevated Train and Several Buildings.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—A rainstorm that reached almost cloudburst proportions, descended on New York yesterday afternoon, establishing a record precipitation that flooded streets, tied up the subway, hampered surface and elevated traffic in city and suburbs for several hours and caused property loss that can scarcely be estimated to-day.

Two persons were killed and several injured. Four men were buried in a sewer cave-in and were rescued alive. Lightning played above the city and struck an elevated train and several buildings, setting fires which the deluge extinguished. Incoming trains from all directions were delayed, some of them several hours, as cuts and tunnels resembled rivers within canyons. Within the city the traffic congestion was such that the resources of the transit companies and the ability of the police to handle the crowds were severely taxed. Brooklyn bridge saw the greatest traffic rush in its history. It was late last night before transportation officials announced resumption of normal traffic.

There was a little wind here, but along the New Jersey coast there was a gale blowing 50 miles an hour. Rain swelled the Passaic River nearly to its previous record high water mark, and the streets of Newark were inundated. Low-lying Jersey meadows became seemingly part of the river.

In New York the weather bureau, established in 1871, recorded a new figure in amount of rainfall for two hours, when 3.32 inches descended. Within approximately ten hours ending about six o'clock last night, 4.68 inches fell.

Thomas H. Walsh, a train despatcher, bossing a pumping gang in the subway, slipped and fell on the third rail and was killed. The other victim during the storm was Patrolman, Hugh Clarke of Jersey City, electrocuted at his street call box, which had become charged with electricity after the wires became crossed.

HE DIED FOR LACK OF LOVE

Montreal Suicide in New York Sends Long Diary to Magazine.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The body of the young man found floating in the surf off Manhattan Beach Point on Monday morning was identified yesterday as that of Wallace E. Baker, whose mother lives at No. 5 Church street, Montreal, and whose residence was at No. 100 West 76th street, New York, where for two weeks before his death he had a furnished room. Letters and a diary left behind by Baker showed he had died by his own hand, in fulfilment of a purpose reached nine months ago.

"What was the use, I said time and again, of my brilliance, of my love of study, of esthetics, of my careful life, if it was turned on me and made into a fault, a crime?" Baker wrote in his diary, which filled 145 pages of an account book, ten by 6 inches in size — 35,000 words in all of morbid self-analysis, culminating in the declaration:

"With love and passion gratified I could live; without I must die."

The real success is too busy on to-day's work to brag of what he did yesterday.

EUGENE O'KEEFE PASSES AWAY

Prominent Brewer and Capitalist Was 86 Years of Age.

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—Toronto has lost a notable citizen, and the Catholic Church in Canada a munificent benefactor by the death of Chevalier Eugene O'Keefe, who died yesterday morning, at his home, 137 Bond street. He was in the 86th year of his age.

The late Mr. O'Keefe was one of the most astute and progressive business men of Toronto, having began fifty-two years ago the brewing business with which he was connected up to the time of his death. He was born in Bandon, County Cork, Ireland, and emigrated with his parents to Canada 82 years ago, when he was four years old.

The late Mr. O'Keefe was a resident of Toronto for 79 years. After his schooling was completed, he entered business as accountant in the old Toronto Savings Bank, which has since grown into the Home Bank of Canada. When the Home Bank was organized, Mr. O'Keefe became a director and president, resigning in 1911.

In 1861 Mr. O'Keefe began his career in the brewing business, when, in that year, he established the Victoria Brewery. This was later merged with other local brewing interests, into the O'Keefe Brewery Co., of which he was president up to the time of his death. For many years he was president of the Ontario Brewers' and Malsters' Association.

He was munificent in his contributions to the practical work of the Catholic Church. His most notable gifts were the presentation of a presbytery valued at $33,000 to St. Monica's Church, and the gift of $150,000 towards the erection of the magnificent St. Augustin's Seminary, Scarboro Heights.

Several honors came to the late Mr. O'Keefe. In 1909 he was appointed Chamberlain to his Holiness Pope Pius.

STEAMER WRECKED

Hudson Bay Supply Ship Lost and Two Others Missing.

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—The total wreck of the steamer Serence, engaged in conveying supplies for the Hudson Bay Railway work at Port Nelson, was reported to the Department of Railways yesterday afternoon by wireless. No lives were lost. The steamer Alcazar, returning from Nelson brought the news and forwarded it from Seattle Harbor, Labrador.

The vessel had a cargo of 2,484 tons of bituminous coal, 336,000 feet of lumber and part of the materials necessary for the wireless station at Nelson. It will delay the erection of the station till next year.

There is considerable apprehension here as to the whereabouts of two other ships which were sent up the bay and of which no reports have been received yet. These are the Belleventure and the Bonaventure.

Brakeman Killed Near Parry Sound.

NORTH BAY, Oct. 2.—Robert Beatty, a young C.P.R. brakeman of North Bay, was struck and killed by a train he was flagging yesterday near Parry Sound on the C.P.R. Toronto-Sudbury branch. Beatty was braking on a freight and was sent back to flag the train following. His dead body was found beside the rails, but no details of how the accident occurred are available.

Three Years In Kingston.

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—William Duffy was sentenced to three years in the Kingston Penitentiary yesterday morning by Chief Justice Meredith, for an attempted assault on an 11-year-old child. A plea for mercy for Duffy was made by the mother of the little girl.

DISCIPLES OF CHRIST FACE DISAGREEMENT

Proposal to Make General Convention a Representative Executive Body is Opposed by a Large Number of Delegates and a Mass Meeting of Minority Will Be Held To Decide On Action

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—A battle royal ensued in Massey Hall yesterday afternoon at the convention of the Disciples of Christ, and the air is at present full of strange forebodings. The meeting was called to consider the altered constitution as presented at the previous day's meeting, by which the general convention will cease to be an unofficial gathering and will become a representative body of delegates elected by the churches. The change in the docile attitude of the convention was most marked.

After listening to the various addresses a vote was taken, and the amended "explanatory resolution" was carried with some opposition. The denouement came last night with characteristic suddenness. An announcement was read from the platform of Massey Hall as follows:

"A mass meeting of interested Disciples present at this convention is here called to assemble in the Young Men's Christian Association Hall, corner of McGill and Yonge, at 3 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 2, 1913, to consider what further action should be taken with regard to the formation of the general convention of the Churches of Christ. All who are opposed to such organization, or to the consummation of it at the present time, are urged to be present." There are many signatures to the document, some of them being the following: A. R. Lyman of Ohio, J. A. McMillan of Saskatchewan, W. C. Cantrell of Nebraska, J. W. Hyatt of Ontario, B. Merry of Ontario.

The "explanatory resolution," as amended by the Committee of Five, denies any tendency to interfere with the autonomy of the various churches.

"This constitution," it declares, "claims no authority greater than or different from that which has always been recognized in our convention, which is not mandatory, but purely advisory, whether it be in relation to congregations or any missionary, educational, philanthropical or other organization."

The position to-day will be one of great interest, and it is quite evident that there will be no quarter asked or given on either side.

BOY SLAYS SEVEN

Man, Wife, Mother, Three Children and Servant Killed.

NANTES, France, Oct. 2.—A crime of incredible savagery was committed Tuesday by a boy fifteen years old who murdered with an axe no fewer than seven people in the village of Basbriage-En-Landreau.

The boy, Marcel Redureau, was employed as a vine cutter. He and his employer, Georges Mabit, were pressing grapes together Tuesday afternoon, when Redureau became angered, seized an enormous axe and with a single blow cut Mabit's throat from ear to ear.

He then entered his employer's house, and dashed up to Madame Mabit, slashed her throat, and then killed a servant in the same way.

Proceeding to another room he despatched his employer's mother and then killed three of Mabit's children, who were asleep in the same chamber. He spared a fourth child, aged four, lying by their side.

Redureau then went to bed and slept calmly till yesterday morning, by which time the bodies had been discovered by the villagers. After his arrest he made a complete confession.

SIX MONTHS FOR DICKENSON

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—Six months in the Central Prison was the sentence meted out to James Dickenson by Chief Justice R. M. Meredith yesterday after he had been found guilty by a jury of manslaughter in connection with the death of Lucy Ives in the kitchen of Smith's Hotel at Queen and Simcoe streets. The court did not believe that Dickenson intended to cause the woman's death when he struck her with his open hand, hence the light sentence.

Lancashire Mills To Close.

MANCHESTER, Eng., Oct. 2.—The Lancashire cotton employers, at a meeting here yesterday, decided to close all their mills from Oct. 25 until the strike of the workmen at the Beehive Mill, Bolton, has been settled. The workers at the Beehive Mill struck against the advice of the union officials owing to their objection to the personality of one of their overseers.

For Release of Captives.

PEKIN, Oct. 2.—The missionaries at Siang Yang Fu proposed yesterday to go to Tsao Yong to negotiate for the release of the five American and four Norwegian missionaries in the hands of the Chinese bandits in the northern part of the Province of Hupeh, but Edward T Williams American charge d'affairs here, urged them to refrain from doing so, as he feared that the bandits would capture them also.

Charge Williams believes that the Chinese would be the best emissaries to the bandits.

Side Rod Broke.

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 2.—Running at high speed after leaving Brockville, the Grand Trunk Limited narrowly escaped being wrecked by the breaking of one of the side rods on the engine, which stripped the machinery almost from end to end, including the demolishing of a portion of the cab. The quick application of the air brakes saved the train. Both the engineer and the fireman escaped injury.

To Spend Week In St. Kitts.

NIAGARA FALLS, Oct. 2.—The four alleged bank swindlers appeared before Police Magistrate Fraser yesterday morning. County Attorney T. B. Cowper, representing the crown, asked to have the prisoners remanded for one week, which request was granted by the court on account of there not being proper accommodation in the city jail, the county jail at Welland having been destroyed by fire some weeks ago. The quartette were taken to St. Catharines jail by electric car.

BULKY GOODS

And Get Cheap Rate Back to Britain Says Writer.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Benjamin Morgan, discussing the all-important question of Canadian freight rates in yesterday's issue of The Financial News, declares that the Dominion Government has the remedy in its own hands. The one solution, he maintains, could be found in the reduction or obolition of the existing Canadian duties on British machinery, steel and iron girders and heavy goods of that class.

Such a concession to the Motherland, he states, need not effect more than six or eight items in the Canadian tariff, but it would undoubtedly attract a considerable volume of British goods to Canadian ports and assure considerable freightage in the direction of Canada.

Assuming that the British consumer paid twelve shillings sixpence per ton on this freight, says Morgan, the return freight would be very much lower and would be all in favor of the Canadian producer. The effect of the assurance of a given volume of freight in cheapening the return freight is one of the commonplaces of shipping practice.

Morgan is aware of the difficulties involved in dealing with the Canadian tariff, but circumstances in this case are so urgent that the Government of Canada would in the interests of her primary producers be well advised to throw her ports open to this particular class of British goods.

One thing is certain, he concludes. Only by encouraging the importation of heavy and bulky British goods will Canada draw British tramp steamers to her ports, and without the tramp steamer low freight rates are at present an economic impossibility.

WOMAN IS HELD ON THEFT CHARGE

CORNWALL, Oct. 2.—Mrs. Grundy, wife of James Grundy, the man arrested Monday by Chief Smythe, in connection with a series of thefts here, was arrested and is now in the jail. She will appear at the same time as her husband, when he is given his preliminary hearing on Monday.

The arrest of the woman created almost as much surprise as the arrest of Grundy. Further developments are expected in the case.

Japs Insist on Resignation.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The Tokio correspondent of The Times says: "Despite the apology of Gen. Chang Hsun, the Chinese commander at Nanking, Japan will still insist upon his resignation as governor of Kiang-Su, which is confidently expected in due time. Japan also demands the punishment of those who took part in the Nanking outrages. This attitude of the Government has the backing of the whole Japanese press."

THE ART OF SHOCKING

There's always something funny happening, if not on the stage of great life, politics, party and non-party, then something funny is being enacted on the theatrical stage.

When things begin to drag a bit in London, and the suffragettes tire of contributing to the gaiety of nations, Mr. Bernard Shaw can always be relied upon for a comical turn on the intellectual trapeze.

Mr. Shaw's latest contribution is a play entitled "Androcles and the Lion." This classical fable which hitherto has always been taken seriously and used as a moral story for children of all ages, is turned by the iconoclastic dramatist into a grotesque farce.

Shaw not only takes liberties with the lion, making that noble beast dance around the stage with Androcles in a most un-leonine fashion, he pokes the Roman Emperor in his dignified ribs and makes the lion chase his Imperial Majesty around the arena. He also cracks jokes with the Christian martyres and introduces little love episodes between the Roman officers and the Christian girls who are about to be devoured by the wild beasts. This latter is, of course, a satire on the "Sign of the Cross," a melodrama which had a great vogue some years ago.

All this, while it has amused a great many irreverent people, has shocked many of those who regard these classical stories with grave respect, and especially those who revere the memory of the early Christian martyres.

But the wonder is that anyone should be shocked at anything that Bernard Shaw does, for he has shocked people so often that one would think the public were used to it by now. "Shocking" is a fine art with Mr. Shaw. Nothing would dissappoint this gentleman more than an audience that wasn't shocked.

When Mr. Shaw does write a play that fails to shock the public, the shock will be so violent that the acrobatic dramatist will never survive it.

A DOUBLY-DETHRONED MONARCH

Fortune is dealing very heartlessly with young King Manuel, if the latest report is true that his bride wife has left him and sworn she will never live with him again.

Was it not sufficient that he should be dethroned as King of Portugal, but when he thought, and everybody else thought that he was to reign secure on the throne of the German Princess' heart, he is once more dethroned.

Whether it is only a honeymoon tiff, and they will kiss again with tears like Tennyson's couple:

"We fell out, my wife and I,—
O blessing on that falling out,
To kiss again with tears."

This remains to be seen.

Romantic young laides will read into this drama all kinds of stories of jealousy, secret love, love intrigues in Portugal long ago, coming to light on the morning after the wedding. There is matter here for a romantic Royal Love Story in the life of this exiled and doubly-dethroned monarch.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A correspondent writing to a local contemporary asks: "What was the greatest explosion in the world's history?" The editor was wrong in fixing it so far back as "1654, when three thousand people were killed." The greatest explosion in the history of the world occurred slightly over two years ago, when Reciprocity was blown up, the "compact" of which blew the Laurier Government to smithereens. The Times should study history more carefully.

The Bishop of London is reported to be advocating the invocation of the saints in the Anglican Church. It is strange how hetrodoxy comes back to orthodoxy again. Is not Sir Oliver Lodge advocating the same thing when he speaks of communication with the "beyond"? The Pope may yet get Sir Oliver as well as the Bishop of London.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

The body of Joseph Johnston was found in his home at Southeampton, Ont., yesterday. He had committed suicide by taking paris green.

THE REVIEW ROASTED; REPORTER'S FATAL JOKE

Libel on Mr. John Did He Crack Real Chestnuts? Are There Any "Scotch" in the South Surgeon Wanted

Some exception has been taken to a report of St. James' Church Brotherhood concert, which appeared in the Review yesterday. Our reporter, who is an irresponsible at times, in referring to Mr. John's humorous contribution to the program took Mr John's line and tried to be funny.

The passage in the report objected to is as follows:

> "Mr. J. John contributed recitations, serious and otherwise; he cracked some chestnuts with which he ought to be 'roasted.'"

Now, our reporter thought this an exceedingly good joke, and presumed that the people of St. James' and Peterborough generally would appreciate the exquisite humor and cleverness of that pun, "roasted."

But he presumed too much upon the sense of humor of certain of his readers, for a great many people have taken it for granted that Mr. John very indecently cracked real and actual chestnuts and ate them on the platform.

Mr. J. John, as everyone knows, is a good, respectable citizen, who confines his business operations to the tea trade, and does not deal in nuts. The chestnuts which he cracked were jokes, and whether they were old or new ones, the audience enjoyed them immensely.

It has been said that it would take a surgical operation to make a Scotsman to see a joke, and our reporter has been warned that there are quite a number of Scotch people in Peterborough.

The Review offers its apologies to Mr. John, and assures its "Scotch" readers that this gentleman positively did not have any nuts with him on the platform at St. James', but that he cracked some "chestnuts" in his inimitable way.

Castle is Sold.

The sale by auction of the estate and castle of Drumlochy, Kincardineshire, Scotland, including Glenfarquhar, will take place in October next. About the year 990 Kenneth III. had his palace of Kincardine in the neighborhood, the old dyke enclosing the king's deer park being still visible. The chapel dedicated to the patron saint of the parish, St. Palladius, still exists, and was of considerable importance in the tenth century, when it contained a silver shrine to which the pilgrimages were made. The estate belong to Mr. Sidney J. Gammell.

A disappointed burglar, who broke into the Parish Church at Sunnybrow, a Durham mining village, and found he was unable to force open the safe, left a message for the vicar to the effect that next time he paid an early morning call he hoped he would find the safe open. An entrance had been effected by breaking a window. A torn surplice was found stained with blood, suggesting that the visitor had been as clumsy in getting through the window as he was in his attempt to rifle the safe.

KIDNEY STONES DISSOLVED

Dear Sirs,—I have seen several testimonials in the paper who suffered with their Kidneys and were cured with SANOL, so I think it is a duty I owe the public to let them know also my experience. I suffered for a long time with stones in the Kidneys, and have to say, like everbody else, "tried everything known to the medical practicioners, except an operation, but found no relief." I was for two days in bed suffering untold agonies and had to get several injections of morphine to relieve the pain, when an old friend of mine, a Mr. McColl called on me and induced me to try SANOL. the second day I had taken it I had a little relief; the third day I was able to sit up in bed, and when Mr. McColl called me up on the phone the fourth day I was able to go down stairs and talk to him, and tell him what a wonderful cure SANOL was. A week from the first day taking it I was back in my office doing business, but continued taking it for three weeks after until I passed the Kidney Stone, which stone I always will keep to show anyone who is suffering like I was what SANOL has done.

Please use this letter for publication, and send copies to everyone in Canada, as everybody should and must know about a cure which you have, also refer them to me for further information, as I could write all day, and then would not have told you all I think about SANOL.

I cannot, on paper, wish you the succes I wish.

Yours Sincerely,
THOS. JOBIN,
Of the Jobin, Marrin Co., Limited,

GIFT OF MOUNTAINS

They Restored to Young Wife Her True and Loving Husband.

BY H. M. EGBERT.

When John Anderson, at the age of forty, married Miss Lucy Page, aged twenty-five, the gossips shook their heads and smiled. Fifteen years' difference in the age of husband and wife is not an insurmountable barrier, other things being equal. But Anderson was a bookish man whose sole hobby was botany, and Miss Page was the only daughter of a worldly mother who had suddenly been reduced from affluence to poverty.

For a year they lived happily, travelling as the needs of the encyclopedia dictated. They learned the habits of the rarer orchids in South America and studied the hardy mosses in Labrador. The volume on Alpine plants was to be the chef d'oeure of the great work, and thus their second summer found them in Switzerland. And here it was that the inevitable occurred. Lucy Anderson's emotional nature, which had concentrated itself upon flowers, found its attraction in Hubert Trench.

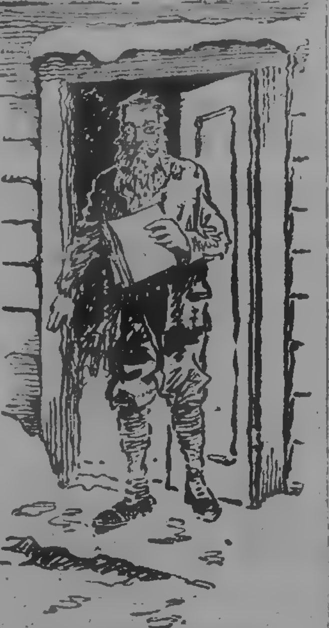
It was a commonplace affair, and, since both were persons of some character, the awakening came slowly. Anderson was taken with the younger man when the three met at the Hotel Anglais in Zwingli. The professor intended to spend three months there, under the shadow of the frowning Col Saint-Jean, where rare species of the edelweiss flourish. Trench was a resident at the hotel, whither he had come to ward off a threatened pulmonary attack.

"Trench, I want you to take care of Mrs. Anderson while I am gathering my specimens," said Anderson frankly. "You two young people will amuse each other, and she cannot fairly be tied perpetually to an old fogy like me."

So he left them there and went away, and lo! half way up the ascent he found what he was seeking, hidden in a tiny nook in the side of the Col. He hurried back with it triumphantly, eager to display his trophy.

There was a little window in the hut, and the professor, childlike as he was in many particulars, halted outside and peered in. It was his intention to fling his nosegay at his wife's feet. What he saw, however, arrested his attention. Trench was kneeling before Mrs. Anderson, who was seated in the little wooden chair. His head was raised and hers bent, and her tears fell on his face.

"I love you, Lucy," he said. "So I shall go away and never see you again. I am not ashamed of my love for you, though I tried to hide it. But before I go tell me that you will always love me."



His Clothes Were in Rags.

Half an hour later he came noisily around to the entrance, to find his wife and Trench, seated apart, talking with reckless gaiety. The professor showed them his specimens and seemed in a boisterous good humor. They congratulated him mirthlessly. Then, at his suggestion, they roped themselves together for a descent.

The descent of the Col is harder than the climb. One false step in the icy slopes and the lives of all are endangered. The professor went first, Trench following him, and Mrs. Anderson bringing up the rear. Cautiously they proceeded until they reached the declivity where the Col falls in a sheer precipice to the hotel, a thousand feet below. Then Trench felt the rope tighten and was flung to his knees. He heard a cry from above. Next moment he became aware that the three were clutching for life at the slippery walls. And Anderson's legs dangled over the precipitous edge.

After five minutes they knew the issue. If the professor's dead weight did not drag them down they two could win to safety. With him, poised over the abyss, unable to move, held only by the rope, death from the cold would be inevitable. There was but one chance of safety, and that for two, not three.

Anderson glanced up. His wife lay upon the top of a little outcrop of rock, some distance away. Trench was almost at Anderson's side, for the rope was knotted and caught around a rocky spur. He made a sign of secrecy and strained himself upward until his lips were almost in Trench's ear.

"Cut the rope!" he hissed, and saw the look of terror on Trench's face.

"It is for her sake," he continued. "Trench, I was looking in at the window this afternoon. I don't blame you. I was an old fool to ruin her life, and as long as I live she will be in torment. I ask only two things of you: that you will marry her and always treat her with the love she craves; and that you will publish my encyclopedia."

There was no thought of concealment at such a juncture. Trench bowed his head in shame.

"I can't cut the rope," he answered "I am no murderer. I would rather die."

"For her sake," whispered Anderson, but Trench only shook his head and turned away.

Suddenly the rope quivered. The dead weight ceased. He looked around. Where Anderson had been was only the clean-severed edge of the rope, and he was not visible.

The searching parties failed to discover what they sought. Doubtless they said, the body had fallen into the glacier. It would be years before it yielded up its dead. There was nothing to do.

Two days later Trench and Mrs. Anderson sailed from Genoa for America. Though no word of love had passed between them it was instinctively recognized that their lives could not be divided. But all during the voyage she kept to her stateroom and he to his, and hardly a word passed between them. After their arrival she went to her mother's house and Trench to his hotel. For three weeks she met his perfunctory visits with cold indifference.

The professor had been dead a month when Trench resolved to put an end to the suspense. He called again and for the first time brought up the subject of the future. He asked her formally to be his wife. But she who had been martyrized by her husband's life, now felt the shadow of the dead man between them. She felt no love for Trench.

"But why?" he asked desperately.

"I saw the rope," she answered.

"You saw the rope?" Trench stammered.

"It was cut through, not frayed," she cried angrily. "You killed him Mr. Trench. Had it been otherwise—but in God's sight you are a murderer."

Then he told her "It was he who cut the rope, Lucy," he pleaded. "He knew; he saw us that afternoon; he wished to sacrifice himself to make us happy. And he asked only that I would marry you and—and bring out his encyclopedia," he ended lamely.

"I shall never marry you," she answered, and left him.

The next week Lucy sailed for Europe. The Swiss season was over and the snow which always shrouded the mountains had crept down into the valleys.

The hotel was closed, but she found winter quarters at the home of a peasant guide. Those simple folks remembered all the details of the tragedy. The body had not been found, they told her. Years might pass. Could one not explore the glacier? Undoubtedly.

She would go alone, she said. She would ascend the peaks in early winter, when the snow hid everything.

She remembered now that, in the excitement of that afternoon, she had left the professor's notes, which he entrusted to her, in the hut.

The journey to the hut was accomplished by midday. A heavy gale had sprung up, but, even through the driving snow she fancied that she saw smoke ascending from the chimney. Suddenly her heart began pounding wildly. She found the door closed and began hammering on it; and in the snow all round were tracks of shoes. And suddenly it swung open and the professor confronted her.

His clothes were rags, his beard hung down upon his breast; but his blue eyes shone clearly behind the thick convex lenses; and in his hand were the lost notes, now greatly amplified and a perfect volume in themselves. And the two stared at each other as though they had arisen from the dead. Then suddenly the professor's arms opened and he drew her to him and led her inside the hut.

"But you did not fall?" she asked him presently. "You planned to escape, so that I could marry that—that man?" She could not bring herself to mention his name.

"Well, I—I planned to fall," answered John Anderson in embarrassment. "But I didn't know there was a tree growing just under the ledge that would catch me and hold me. So, when I found myself safe, I said, 'Here's your chance to make three people happy, John!'"

"'Three'?" said his wife in unutterable reproach.

"Well, you and—and him," he corrected. "And I knew I could live here for three months, with the government provisions and fuel from the hills—though it has been cold, my dear; and since I hadn't anything else to do with myself I thought I'd work on the encyclopedia. And it's finished today!" He pulled out a huge handful of notes. "Sixty-five new alpine specimens and four complete genera and—"

"And one wife," said Lucy, nestling up to him.

"It Had to Be!"

The war in the near east has been responsible for a number of little stories about the inhabitants of the Balkans that throb with human interest. One of the latest and most pathetic of these tells how a soldier leading a horse stopped before the door of a peasant's house in Old Servia. The householder came forward, smoking a long pipe.

"Isn't that my Ivan's beast?" he asked, after a pause.

"Yes, good uncle."

"Where was he killed?"

"At Veless, good uncle. He fell at the capture of the town."

"Then it's all right. My father and my two brothers were driven out of their homes by the Turks of Veless. Now they are avenged; but Ivan gave his life. It had to be!"

"Where shall I put up the horse, uncle?"

"Take him, my friend, for yourself. I have no further use for him. Take him and ride with my blessing to Constantinople."

Then the old man re-entered his lonely cottage, repeating to himself, "It had to be! It had to be!"

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

By Timely Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Here is her own statement.

Cary, Maine. — "I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Cary, Maine.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

VANISHING BEAVERS.

A Plea For the Protection of These Interesting Creatures.

Over wide areas the beaver is already exterminated, and he is rapidly diminishing elsewhere. Though more than twenty states have recently passed laws for the protection of this animal, these laws will give this useful creature but little protection until a greater interest is awakened in his works. Beaver fur is temptingly valuable. Beavers multiply rapidly where protected. Man is their worst enemy. All others are easily outwitted, and where man keeps hands off the beaver readily maintains populous colonies along the streams where his ancestors long held dominion.

A beaver colony is one of the most alluring attractions of the outdoors. The gnawed stump, the picturesque dam, the strange canal, the crude, primitive house, and autumn's harvest home for long winter, all form an endless source of interest for the old and the young. Increase the number of beaver colonies and this will lead to a large increase of people out beneath the open sky.

Children are ever interested in the beaver, and this animal might be helpfully used to promote thought and to push education. If boys and girls became thoroughly acquainted with the beaver, with his adventures, labors and accomplishments, they would thereby acquire interesting information concerning our natural resources. Aroused by the fascinating information concerning the beaver, these children would perhaps desire to know more about the practical things in the lively university of nature.—Saturday Evening Post.

Last Year's Coinage.

The total coinage for the fiscal year ended June 30, according to the statement of the director of the mint, is as follows: Double eagles 462,091, value $9,241,820; eagles 809,050, value $8,090,500; half eagles 2,140,099, value $10,700,495; quarter eagles 810,165, value $2,025,412.

The total gold coinage was 4,221,400 pieces, value $30,058,227.

Of silver half dollars there were coined 3,982,235; quarter dollars, 4,144,235, and dimes, 4,210,235, making a total silver coinage of 12,336,705 pieces, amounting in value to $3,448,199.75.—New York Commercial.

Palawan's Underground River.

A subterranean river in the island of Palawan, one of the Philippines, has been explored and surveyed by two officers of the United States coast and geodetic survey and is described in the last annual report of that service. The river is navigable for a small boat for about two and a half miles from its mouth, the tunnel through which it passes widening in places into large chambers containing beautiful stalactites.

Grim Jest of War.

The Excelsior, Paris, relates the following story from the Tchatalja lines: The Bulgarians were attacking the lines. A regiment hitherto held in reserve was about to be sent to what appeared certain death.

"Your regiment is the first in the world," said General Savoff to the colonel in command of the regiment.

"General," replied the colonel gravely, "it will also be the first in the next world."

Chinese Colony In Paris.

Paris now has a Chinese settlement, which is both law abiding and picturesque. The first family arrived a year ago, and now one hotel shelters fifty-three Chinese in five rooms. The men are mostly engaged in making toys, which the women and children sell throughout the city.

OCTIVIA HILL

Social Worker Ranks High Among Nineteenth Century Women.

When the roll of famous English women who, during the nineteenth century, rendered distinguished public service, comes at length to be seen in its true perspective, whose names, it may be asked, will stand out most prominently?

Queen Victoria and Florence Nightingale we take for granted.

We may, however, venture to assert that in the next ranks a place will certainly be accorded Miss Octavia Hill.

Her work belongs to the history of the nineteenth century, but has not remained there. Its abundant harvest we of the twentieth century enjoy, as a legacy which she in person handed on to us, that we may yet further its operations.

Octavia Hill is a name indissolubly associated with one of the most satisfactory solutions of the housing problem — in this she had the heartiest sympathy of Mr. Ruskin—and with the allied beneficience of providing open spaces in the crowded districts and preserving to our own and succeeding generations, not only the common land of England—our commercial heritage—but also sites of historic interest and of picturesque beauty.

Though born so long ago as 1838, we must go yet further back to learn the secret of the forces for good within her. Her grandfather, Dr. Southwood Smith, born in 1788, and intended for the Calvinistic Dissenting ministry, at length found his sphere, not by finishing his course at a Baptist college, but in becoming a doctor, taking a London practice in Trinity Square, by the Tower, and identifying himself with all the sanitary reforms of the Metropolis, with a Sanatorium, in which he had the co-operation of Dickens, and with a scheme for improving the dwellings of the industrial classes, and began operations in old St. Pancras Road.

Married at an early age in Bristol, two children were born to him, Caroline and Emily. The elder married, in 1835, Mr. James Hill, and had five girls. The eldest, Miranda, and the third, Octavia, naturally link themselves together, for though the latter stands out most prominently, the two sisters were natural partners in the work of reform.

These girls were deeply imbued with the grandeur of their grandfather's work. For some years their mother, it may be mentioned in passing, had kept house for their grandfather, who was early left a widower. First one and then the other of these grandchildren wound their way round the old man's heart; and, as they grew older, found his influence strong within them.

The early years of Octavia Hill were spent in an atmosphere favorable to the consideration of social problems and the duties of citizenship; and needless to say, her sympathies were richly developed beneath such influences, as we can see in the splendid volume of her "Life and Letters," so ably edited by her brother-in-law, Mr. C. E. Maurice (Macmillan and Co., Ltd., 16s. net.) A volume which all who are interested in Social Reform should make a point of reading, for it is the record of a singularly attractive woman who spent a long life in the service of humanity, and one who according to Carlyle, was giving a good account of herself.

One of the great influences in the life of Octavia Hill was John Ruskin—an influence both artistic and social, for he helped her in her housing schemes, on the one hand, and, on the other, encouraged her in her painting and even engaged her to copy for him some of the Old Masters in the London galleries.

It is in a letter to Ruskin in the following year that Octavia gives a lively little sketch of her own personality:—

"As to sentiment there are few people who have not stronger feeling than I have. I assure you, I am considered the person in the family who is without imagination, poetry, feeling affection. Good only to do a sum, carry a weight, go a long walk in the rain, or decide any difficult question about tangible things. You happen to know the other side of me. As that's kept in, that I may do my work; and you don't know what a life of calculation and routine and steadiness mine is. I am told that the best developed organ that I have is that of caution."

A PASSER BY.

(By Robert Bridges)

Whither, O splendid ship, thy white sails crowding,
Leaning across the bosom of the urgent West,
That fearest nor sea rising, nor sky clouding,
Whither away, fair rover, and what thy quest?
Ah! soon, when Winter has all our vales opprest,
When skies are cold and misty, and hail is hurling,
Wilt thou glide on the blue Pacific, or rest
In a summer haven asleep, thy white sails furling.

I there before thee, in the country that well thou knowest,
Already arrived am inhaling the odorous air;
I watch thee enter unerringly where thou goest,
And anchor queen of the strange shipping there,
Thy sails for awnings spread, thy masts bare:
Nor is aught from the foaming reef to the snow capped, grandest
Peak, that is over the feathery palms more fair
Than thou, so upright, so stately, and still thou standest.

And yet, O splendid ship, unhailed and nameless,
I know not if, aiming a fancy, I rightly divine
That thou hast a purpose joyful, a courage blameless,
Thy port assured in a happier land than mine.
But for all I have given thee, beauty enough is thine,
As thou, aslant with trim tackle and shrouding,
From the proud nostril curve of a prow's line
In the offing scatterest foam, thy white sails crowding.

The man who argues that it doesn't pay to jump at conclusions probably makes his mistakes in a more leisurely manner.

TAYLORVILLE, ONT.

"I was a sufferer from Fearful Headaches for over two years. Sometimes, they were so bad that I was unable to work for days at a time. I took all kinds of medicine, was treated by physicians, but yet the Headaches persisted.

A short time ago, I was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives" and I did so, with I must confess, very little faith. But after I had taken them for three days, my Headaches were easier and in a week they left me.

After I had taken a box of these tablets, my headaches were quite cured. My appetite was always poor and my stomach bad—and now my appetite is splendid and my digestion excellent.

I had become thin and weak from the constant Headaches but now not only have I been cured of all these awful Headaches, but my strength is growing up once more and I feel like a new man"

Fire Insurance

Important? You fully realize it. You would not allow your house to remain uninsured over night.

Your house may never burn. Comparatively few buildings ever do,

Important? Oh yes, you intend to insure after a while when "a little better able to do so."

You will surely die. All men do. You are more likely to die within a week or a year, than your house is to burn,

TOLD OF THE HEALING OF HER SON

Montreal Lady at First Church of Christ, Scientist

Mrs. Ayerst, of Montreal who is visiting in the city, gave a very interesting talk last night at First Church of Christ, Scientist, Aylmer street on the healing of her son through Christian Science treatment after materia medica had failed. The medical doctor who had the case in charge, pronounced it the most wonderful case of healing he had ever known. Mrs. Ayerst has been many years an active worker in the Methodist Church, and is still a member of the same, is convinced that Christian Science is meeting a need of this age in carrying out the requests of Christ Jesus in its mission of healing, for which every good Christian should rejoice and take courage.

ALD. BULLER'S EXPERIENCE WITH AN AUTOMOBILE

And Now He Intends Looking up the Act

Ald. Buller intends to look over the Act governing the movement of automobiles, He doesn't think the "gasoline cars" should have any more rights than other vehicles.

Only a short time ago as the South Ward representative was hurrying across a street, he had one of those close shaves. His was a wonderful escape. Last night he told his experience to the Board of Works after he had read a communication from the Ontario Motor League, in which the co-operation of the city was asked, by the erection of signs on the outskirts of the city, to warn motorists as to speed limit in the limits.

It was remarked that Ald. Buller wore at the time a plug hat, and somebody was cruel enough to add that it was because of the hat, special effort was directed towards him by the autoist.

As to the suggestion that people stand still and show the autoists that they come first, Ald. Buller said, "I wouldn't take any chances with this fellow."

The communication was passed on to next year's council as there is no funds for such work this year.

Special Officer Weller of the C.P.R. has received a communication from headquarters asking that he assist in locating Miss Irene Smith of Ottawa who mysteriously disappeared from a train somewhere between Ottawa and Vancouver.

Miss Smith had been visiting in Vancouver and notified her Ottawa friends that she would leave Vancouver on Sept. 22 for her home. She purchased a ticket for Ottawa and checked her trunk on this date. Her trunk has reached Ottawa but no word of the girl has been heard since.

All efforts to locate her made by her Ottawa friends proved unavailing. The Department of Immigration has been asked to assist.

"For 11 months I was so badly afflicted with Rheumatism that much of the time I was obliged to use a cane. I used one bottle of RHEUMA and THE CANE IS IN THE CORNER NOW. HAROLD HILL SHOWS UP WELL WITH QUEEN'S SENIOR TEAM

Kingston Standard.—Queen's senior football team turned out again last night on the campus and had the first practice of the season. There were twenty-five men out and several new men showed up to good advantage. The most noticeable of the latter was Hill, who hails from Peterborough, and who was trained by J. J. Thompson, who was at one time physical director in the Y.M.C.A. He is a very fast runner and a good tackler and did fine work at full-back. During the practice, Watts, who was playing on the half-line was injured and had to be taken to the General Hospital, where he received medical attention. He got a very nasty cut on the side of the face when he collided with Hill. The latter was unhurt, but Watts will not be out to practice for some time as a result of his injuries. Among those who showed up well at the practice were: Lunch, Hill, Hazlett, McIlquham, McLaughlin, Mullen and McCuay.

NOTES FROM KEENE

Special Correspondence.

KEENE, Oct. 1.—At the Town Hall, Keene last Thursday, Sept. 25, the Rural School Fair was held. Schools 2, 3, 5, 7 were to have been represented, but for some reason the 6th Line School failed to be present. The articles judged were flowers, fruits, vegetables, seeds, painting, drawing, sewing, etc. During the summer all of the plots planted by different pupils were inspected and discussed with the pupils. About one hundred and fifty pupils were present in the competition. The result of the competition was very satisfactory to the Department of Agriculture. In the afternoon the exhibit was open to the public and was taken great interest in by the parents after which a special entertainment was provided for the children at all sorts of sports, which was greatly enjoyed by them, and we are sure was so much appreciated by them that it will be eagerly looked forward to by them for next year.

A very pretty and quiet wedding was solemnized at the residence of Mr. James McNeil, jr., about half a mile from Keene, on Wednesday evening, September 24, when Miss Mary Katarine McNeil was united to Mr. James N. Miller, of the Seventh Line of Otonabee. The Rev. Goodwill performed the ceremony. The bride entered the drawing room to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Vera McNeil, and was given away by her father. She stood when the ceremony was performed under a massive wedding bell, while the room was beautifully decorated with plants and cut flowers. After the ceremony the guests sat down to a dainty supper to which ample justice was done, after which followed toasts to the bride's health, which were responded to by Jas. McNeil, sr., John Miller, Mr. James McNeil, jr., and Rev. Goodwill. At an early hour the happy couple left for the home of the groom. The many beautiful presents spoke of the popularity of the bride and groom.

The free-for-all race at the Roseneath Fair last Friday was very interesting. One of the villagers drove a horse from Havelock, and we are pleased to say he made a grand finish for 3rd place.

Mr. William Kempt, a farmer south of the village, near the shore of Rice Lake, has made a very mysterious discovery on one of his farms known as the "Riverview Farm," a few weeks ago. While ploughing he was very much surprised to find a pair of handcuffs caught on the end of the plough point. A little later he turned up another pair (single) and only a few feet from the spot where he made the first discovery. It shows where the attempt has been made to file it apart, and of course, goes to show that the prisoners have had help to make their escape. Mr. Kempt takes great pleasure in showing the handcuffs, and would be glad to have some one call on or write to him any information that may clear up the mystery as to how they came there. The escape was made a great many years ago, for the cuffs are a very old style.

Mr. Z. Tucker has the contract for painting the fence at the Presbyterian Manse, and is busy at work.

The Government will finish the wharf it has in course of construction here in about two weeks. They raised the old wharf about two feet and are putting in 170 feet of concrete wall at the south side.

Mr. John Moore left on Monday for Norwood, where he will engage in putting on the metal shingles on the armory at that place.

Mr. Thomas Nelson is visiting friends at Lakefield this week.

Mrs. (Dr.) Harrison, who attended the Board meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society the past week, returned home on Saturday.

A good crowd from Keene attended the Fair at Roseneath last Friday the Fair a good one.

Mr. and Mrs. William Wedlock, sr., spent Sunday with Villiers friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Howson, of East City, Peterborough, spent the week end with friends in the village.

Rev. F. Goodwill spent a few days at Port Hope this week.

Memorial services will be held for the late Mrs. John Wrenwick at the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning.

Misses Teenie McIntyre and Hazel McFee, who were spending a few days at Oshawa, returned home last Friday.

Mr. H. Butt of Winnipeg is visiting the home of his aunt, Mrs. (Dr.) Harrison.

Anniversary services for the Bethel church will be held on Sunday, Oct 12th. Music will be furnished by the Chemong and Hiawatha ch[illegible].

Messrs. John and George McFee of Iowa, U.S., are visiting friends in and around the village. It is their first visit in 30 years and are heartily welcomed by old acquaintances.

Mr L. Burley and family spent Sunday at Wm. Nelson's.

Rev Thompson Jr., of Hastings filled the pulpit at the Presbyterian church last Sunday morning.

DENTISTS IN ECUADOR.

Prehistoric People Had Developed Wonderful Skill.

Professor Marshall Howard Saville, who has been making extensive excavations in the State of Esmeralda, Ecuador, tells of discoveries that, among other things, seem to prove that dentistry of a high order was practiced in the Inca country more than 1,000 years ago.

"This is the end of my twenty-second trip of exploration in the tropics," said Professor Saville, "and this time I did all of the work. I am glad to say the trip has been a most successful one in every respect. I managed to get along very well in places that are seldom visited by man. I found a number of human skulls in a splendid state of preservation. The teeth were in perfectly even rows.

"The scene of my work this time was the State of Esmeralda, in Ecuador, and I was able to gather much new data bearing on the ancient civilizations of this hemisphere. The skulls I have referred to had their teeth decorated with gold, being filled with gold on the inside, but showing only slightly without. The teeth seemed to have a gold band stretched across their edges either for decoration of the mouth or to strengthen the incisors. Some of the skulls had the incisors neatly chiseled and in others with a material that seemed to be a kind of dental cement.

"In another type the gold band was cemented to the teeth, but most remarkable were the chiseled holes, most of them little ones, all filled with gold. The effect is striking and the work may be 1,000 years old—as a matter of fact it may have been done before the Incas.

"The skill with which these people worked speaks volumes for the civilization that centuries ago preceded us. I myself expect to get one full volume out of it.

"I have brought back with me articles which show how wonderfully skillful those people were in pottery work. I have examples of the most distinctive kind of pottery making."

Among other things the professor brought back with him were a miniature face and bust and a perfectly formed clay head about the size of an apple.

One of the heads was so finely finished that it seemed to be of marble instead of clay. The nose was delicately chiseled and the lips were gracefully arched.

"These are among the most perfect specimens of pottery figures I have ever seen," Professor Saville said, "and show that these early inhabitants of South America were the only people on that continent to bring pottery making to such a high state of perfection. They are, so far as I know, the only people of that time and region who worked with jewels and platinum. It proves that these people were highly cultured. They were purely South American, and must have had highly skilled dentists among them."

Professor Saville said he was confident that many more wonderful discoveries awaited the archaeologist in Ecuador and the adjoining countries.

DON'T MISS SEEING "THE PINK LADY" TO-MORROW (FRIDAY) EVENING

PERFORMANCE STARTS 8 O'CLOCK SHARP. GALLERY OPEN 7:30

WEDDING—PERSONALS

TREBILCOCK — SCOTT

A pretty wedding was solemnized last evening at 7 o'clock, at the residence of Mr. Wm. Scott, Hunter street east, when his youngest daughter, Florence Stewart was united in the bonds of matrimony to Mr. Paul E. Trebilcock, one of Peterborough's popular young business men by the Rev. Robert Pogue, pastor of St. Paul's church.

The bride was most charmingly attired in a white brocaded satin dress with veil and orange blossoms and carried a beautiful bouquet of lillies of the valley.

Miss Francis Scott, who attended her was dressed in a becoming costume of pink satin with an overdress of cream lace and pleated chiffon, and she carried a bouquet of pink roses. Dr. Garnet Greer of Toronto assisted the groom. The wedding march was played by Miss Minnie Trebilcock of Bowmanville, sister of the groom. Mr. H. Hutchinson sang "Oh Fair, Oh Sweet and Holy," while the register was being signed. Only the immediate friends of the contracting parties were present at the ceremony.

After a honeymoon spent in New York, Mr. and Mrs. Trebilcock will reside in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Pady came from Havelock this week to reside in the city.

Mrs. J. W. Grice, of St. Thomas is visiting her sister, Mrs. S. Kemp, George street, and other relatives.

Mr. T. P. Connor, formerly manager of the Canadian Cordage Company, and now of Waupun, Wis., is in the city to-day.

Mr. Geo. D. Perry, General Manager of the Great North Western Telegraph Company, Toronto, was in the city yesterday accompanied by his wife. Mr. Perry paid a visit to the city G. N. W. office.

Another Peterboro young lady will add her name to the list of students attending St. Joseph's Academy of Music, Toronto. This is Miss Florence Leahy, Sherbrooke street, who left to-day for Toronto.

Mr. George Henry, son of Mr. T. Henry, Wescott street, who has been confined to St. Joseph's Hospital for the past few weeks with typhoid fever, was removed to his home yesterday. His many friends will be pleased to learn that he is convalescing.

In Brantford and in several other Ontario cities and towns the barber shops are closed on Wednesday afternoon, and also close at 10.30 on Saturday evening.

THIS QUARTET NOT WANTED

Two Men and Two Women Arrested by the Police

The police made quite an extensive round-up last night, and the sequel was told in Police Court this morning.

Charged with cruelty to animals, Ernest Wallace was fined $5.

A woman whom Wallace claims is his wife, was charged with being a common prostitute. She and her husband, and also Martin were told to leave the city.

Mrs. Peter Munroe, who faced the same charge as the other woman, was remanded to jail.

The quartet said they came from Campbellford and Trenton.

"I think this gang had better get out of the city as fast as they can," said His Worship.

Both Wallace and his wife said they did not know Mrs. Munroe.

CHARGED WITH NON SUPPORT

Local Man Was Taken Into Custody at Brockville

(Brockville Times.)

Acting on instructions from the Chief of Police of Peterborough, Chief Burke took into custody yesterday afternoon a man named Larry Stinson, wanted in Peterborough for neglecting to support his wife and four children. Stinson came to Brockville several weeks ago and secured employment as bartender at a local hotel. He admits to the police that he has not contributed to the support of Mrs. Stinson and their children since May last, and maintains that he will not do so. A Peterborough officer arrived here to-day to day to take the prisoner back for trial.

Stinson appeared in Police Court this morning. The case was enlarged.

After all a man soon gets tired of resting.

CONTRACTORS MUST NOT STOP WITH HUNTER STREET

Specifications Say the City Engineer is the One to Decide.

Despite the report that the paving operations would close down for the season when Hunter street is completed, the work will proceed so long as the City Engineer decrees.

This is what the specifications say. Therefore it is quite probable that part of George street will be paved this fall.

The argument of the contractors, it is said, is that bad weather might be encountered during the work on the busiest section of George street and with a cessation of operations, the street would be in poor shape for traffic.

But the Board of Works is optimistic. Favorable weather is hoped for and the members want to see pavement laid on George street in the near future.

At the Board meeting last night, Ald. Buller said that he understood the contractors did not want to do any more than Hunter street, this fall. He suggested that they could start at McDonnel street and work down, or from the C. P. R. or G.T.R. tracks.

Two weeks has been spent in the work so far accomplished and figuring on the same rate of speed, the City Engineer opined that one block on George street could be done in the same time.

Ald. Buller remarked that the Street Railway Company had their new rails and were ready to go ahead. He thought all the work should continue.

THEY SAID THIS FALL.

Ald. Gillespie understood that the contractors were to lay all the pavement this fall.

"That's what they said," added Ald. Buller.

In answer to the query as to how long it would take to lay the asphalt, the City Engineer said, "probably 1,000 yards per day."

Ald. Johnston—Let the Railway Company go ahead and lay their rails.

Ald. Anderson said he wanted to see two or three blocks of pavement laid on George street.

"That's what I have been figuring on," said the Engineer. "I don't think they should stop."

After some further discussion, the Engineer was instructed to write the Railway Company, saying that the city would proceed with the work on George street.

PLENTY OF CEMENT.

Ald. Buller asked if sufficient cement was being used, and the Engineer replied that the contractors were using more cement than called for by the specifications.

MUST PREPARE NEW PLANS FOR SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT

The Provincial Board of Health has made certain recommendations which mean that the City Engineer will have to prepare new plans for the sewage disposal plant.

It is suggested that the disposal plant be on the east side of the river. This would necessitate a pumping station on the west side of the river, which would force the sewage at high pressure across the river.

This means another design of the whole works. No fault is found with the plans of the Engineer, but the Provincial Board has the power to compel any municipality to follow out all recommendations, drastic though they may be.

It will be necessary to take new levels to ascertain if the proposition is feasible.

During a discussion on the question last night, Ald. Buller said that the Board of Health should not permit drainage into Little Lake as had been done.

THE SIDING FOR TURNER FACTORY

Board of Works Send Application Back to Council

The Board of Works, last night took up the communication from J. J. Turner and Sons in regard to their application for a railway siding to the factory.

Members of the Board felt that the question was one that should receive the deliberations of the whole council and this will likely be done.

"I was ashamed that night when I saw it go the way it did," remarked Ald. Gillespie in reference to a meeting some time ago, when after the Hamilton application was granted a resolution was passed giving practically the same permission to J. J. Turner and Sons, although the application had previously been turned down.

This was the meeting when Ald. Johnston asked the question "are you fellows joking?"

MORE RED LIGHTS ARE NECESSARY

For Protection Against Accident on Streets

Ald. Buller does not think sufficient protection is given to guard against accident on the streets where trenches and other work is in progress. The People's Candidate would have more red lights.

At the Board of Works meeting last night, the City Solicitor remarked that a lady residing in Keene was looking for damages because of an accident on Hunter street when the vehicle in which she was riding struck an obstruction. There was no warning light.

The City is also threatened with various other claims for damages.

"It's a case of not using good judgment in protecting these places," said Ald. Buller. "There should be more lanterns."

APPLICATIONS OF THE CITY

The Dominion Board of Railway Commissioners will sit at Toronto on Monday, October 13.

DOWNIE ST. CREEK

Mr. D. W. Dumble, who, with others conveyed certain property to the city, to permit of a diversion of the famous creek on Downie street, wants some of the soil.

According to the agreement, the Board of Works understand that Mr. Dumble is to receive the surplus soil but the chairman and the City Engineer will take the matter up with him.

A MERITORIOUS PRODUCTION

A Company of Clever Artists

The attraction at the Grand Opera House, Saturday, Oct. 4, will be J. Hartley Manners' exquisite comedy "Peg O' My Heart," which has been enjoying a continuous run at the Cort Theatre, New York, for nearly a year. The action of the play takes place at Scarboro, England and has as a central figure, a wild, mischevous girl, who has been reared amid poverty in New York and who, nevertheless has preserved a flower-like fragrance of a nature born to the wildwood. Loyalty to her father and to her father's country, Ireland, and the memory of an aristocratic mother is the watchword of her nature. The play is said to have an abundance of humorous situations and heart interest. Oliver Morosco who has made the production, has given it a splendid setting and supplied an excellent cast. Miss Elsie Ryan will be seen in the title role and others in the cast are Fanny Addison Pitt, Wilda Mari Moore, Lillian Keller, Henry Stanford, Gilbert Douglas, Frank Burbeck and Brien Darley. There will also be a matinee on Saturday.

DAVIS' CRIMES RIVAL THOSE OF McMAMARAS

CONFESSION OF DYNAMITER

Structural Ironworker, Who Was Employed Like McManigal to Intimidate Employes, Turns on Former Colleagues.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Dynamite outrages that rivalled the exploits of the McNamara brothers and Ortie McManigal were confessed yesterday by George E. Davis, a union ironworker. Davis, who was arrested here yesterday, was the "George O'Donnell," who figured in the trial in Indianapolis that resulted in the conviction of Frank M. Ryan, president of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers, and thirty-seven of his associates. His arrest and its consequences wound up the work the Federal Government started more than two years ago, when the dynamiting of bridges and steel frame buildings all over the country became a national scandal.

All the explosions that Davis says he caused were touched on and testified to at the dynamiters' trial in Indianapolis, but the fact that Davis caused them remained unrevealed until he himself told of it yesterday. Davis' confession resulted yesterday in the arrest in Indianapolis, Ind., of Harry Jones, secretary-treasurer of the Ironworkers' Union. His confession supplements the evidence presented at the Indianapolis trial, and makes fresh charges against some of the men there convicted and now in prison.

Some of his revelations concern President Ryan, who is now out on bail, pending appeal from a prison sentence of seven years. Davis says that he was the man chosen to kill Walter Drew, attorney for the National Erectors' Association, in December, 1911, after Drew was charged with kidnapping John J. McNamara. It was suggested also that he try to "get" William J. Burns, the detective employed by Drew and his associates to unearth the dynamite conspiracy. The price on Drew's head at that time, Davis said, was $5,000. "I told them," he says in his confession, "that I didn't want to mix up in such business."

Davis consented to return to Indianapolis without extradition. His bail was fixed at $10,000. The conspiracy thought to have been broken up by the conviction of Ryan and others still exists, according to Davis' confession. With the exception of Harry Jones the men he mentions in connection with his various dynamite jobs already had been arrested, although the confession indicated that the Government had not obtained all the incriminating evidence against these defendants when they were tried at Indianapolis.

Apprehension of this McManigal of the east was due to Robert Foster, a Louisville detective, who shadowed the iron-worker through eastern cities. Finally, several weeks ago, when Davis was displeased with his treatment by the union, Foster persuaded him to make a full confession. This was on Sept. 16. For a week Davis had been working in Pittsburg for the Thompson-Starrett Co. Then the local delegate of the Ironworkers' Union told him he must pay a $26 initiation fee to the local union or quit work. Davis quit. The detective told him he knew all about his deeds anyway, and Davis, feeling that the union had deserted him, accompanied Foster to New York. Here in the presence of representatives of the Federal District Attorney and the National Erectors' Association he made a long detailed confession which was given out by the District Attorney's office yesterday.

Davis said he had been an ironworker since 1901 and had been employed at Denver, Pueblo, St. Louis, New York, Washington, Providence, Cleveland, Pittsburg and Birmingham. In the early days of the troubles between the union and the bridge builders he was a member of the entertainment committee whose duty it was to assault non-union workers. He began his career as a dynamiter at Trenton, N.J.

In careful detail, the confession describes how he blew up or tried to blow up buildings in various cities and towns of the east.

A feature of Davis' statement was a story of a gigantic scheme to set off simultaneously explosions of Omaha, San Francisco, St. Louis and New York city while the McNamaras were in jail. This was to create the impression that the McNamara brothers were by no means responsible for all the dynamiting in the country. The consummation of the plot was nipped by the confession of the two men in jail.

MORE CHARGES ARE PENDING

Another Official Likely to be Accused at Kingston

KINGSTON, Oct. 3.—Although the name is not given, it is understood that Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P. for Frontenac, has a charge to make against another penitentiary official, and that this charge will be lodged when the prison reform commission resumes sessions.

"I want to see fair play," said Dr. Edwards yesterday. "Even if a man is a convict I want to see him used like a human being. I do not care who the man is, what his politics are, or by what Government he was appointed, there must be fair play. I want the investigation thorough, not through any personal motive or animus, for I hold no animus against any prison official."

It is stated that the official to be charged was appointed by the present Government.

Major W. S. Hughes, inspector of prisons, who is wanted as a witness, is now in the west on a holiday trip with his wife and family. It may be four weeks before the commission will sit again."

That radical changes in the system which has prevailed for the past 20 years or more in Kingston Penitentiary will follow the investigation by the Government commission, is the opinion to-day of those who claim to be in touch with the situation here.

Ex-Warden Platt, who contributed valuable evidence drawn from his long experience in connection with the institution, expressed the opinion at the conclusion of his testimony that the existing order of things were forty years behind the times and entirely out of touch with modern reformative methods.

DIESEL MYSTERY DEEPENS.

German Inventor Did Not Sail For England.

ANTWERP, Belgium, Oct. 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The mystery of the disappearance of Dr. Rudolfo Diesel, th German inventor, while on his way from Germany to England, was still further deepened yesterday by the assertion of a member of the crew of the cross-channel steamer Dresden, who said that Dr. Diesel went on board the steamer at half-past five in the evening of Sept. 29, but on learning that the vessel was not to start until half-past seven, went ashore and was not seen again.

RADIUM COST SOLVED.

It Gives Off a Curative Gas Without Wasting Away.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—"A complete revolution in the future of radium." In these words the distinguished surgeon, Sir Frederick Treves, announced a momentous discovery to a party of journalists at the Radium Institute in London yesterday. "There comes off radium a gas called the emanation, which has exactly the properties of pure radium. I venture to claim for the scientific members of this institute the credit of having demonstrated that. We have proved now for curative purposes that emanation of radium is as efficient as radium itself. Radium gives off these emanations constantly. The amount of emanation depends upon the amount of radium used. The emanation never weakens. The radio-activity of a piece of radium from which it exudes it is like the burning bush of Moses, inextinguishable."

This gas in proper receptacles is being sent out and so far emanations equal in value to $86,000 worth of pure radium have been distributed.

GREEKS SEIZE AMERICAN MISSION SCHOOL AT KORCHA; HEAD IS ORDERED TO LEAVE

GROUP OF MISSIONARIES IN FRONT OF SCHOOL SEIZED BY GREEK AUTHORITIES

THE REV AND MRS PHINEAS B. KENNEDY

The Greek authorities at Korcha, in Albania, seized the American mission schools, where instruction is given to nearly one hundred Albanian girls.

They have also arrested and persecuted a large number of Albanians who recently returned to Korcha from America and other foreign countries, releasing them from detention only when the Albanians had promised to join in the agitation for the incorporation of the district in Greece.

The mission is in charge of the Rev. Phineas B. Kennedy, a native of New Jersey, who was educated at Princeton. In the educational work he is assisted by Mrs. Violet B. Kennedy, who also conducts the Ladies' Literary Society, whose object is to give the elements of education to the women of Albania.

INCOME IS NIGGARDLY

Judge Snider Says Hamilton Hospital is Doing It's Best

HAMILTON, Oct. 3.—The Hamilton hospital investigation was brought to a close yesterday when Judge Snider submitted his finding to Mayor Allan. Although his honor held that Dr. Bruce Smith's criticism of the institution was wholly correct, he found that the officials were not to blame. It says in part:

"The correctness of the criticisms of Inspector Dr. Bruce Smith is apparently unquestioned when he said that the nurses' quarters are so cramped that he wonders they can be contented to stay; that there is not a maternity ward worthy of the name or in any degree fit to be occupied for that purpose; that the laundry is most unsatisfactory; that the lavatories are disgraceful; that there are not nearly enough baths; that there are no balconies for those patients for whom the open air is absolutely necessary; that the wards are so overcrowded and so poorly ventilated that only patients with a good constitution could be expected to improve in them.

"The evidence brought out quite clearly that the building and equipment are insufficient for the requirements of the citizens of Hamilton.

"The overcrowding in all the wards and want of renewal or repair in many parts of the building make it impossible to keep the hospital in good condition, and lessen the benefits the patients should receive.

"There is not a sufficient supply of bed linen, and the laundry is so poorly equipped that the proper work cannot be turned out.

"Upon the whole I am satisfied by the evidence that the best is being done that can be done with the poor equipment and with the wards so overcrowded with patients that it seems practically impossible to keep them at all times in a sanitary condition, or as clean as they should be and extremely difficult at times for nurses and others to properly discharge their duties. At the present time the cots are full and stretchers occupied by patients fill the aisles. I find that no misconduct, mismanagement, or serious neglect prevails at the hospital."

It is understood that no indictments were found against Thaw or anyone else who might have been charged with helping him to escape.

TEMPLEMORE LOST AT SEA

Freighter Destroyed by Fire but Crew Were Saved

MADE BRAVE FIGHT

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 3.—Fifty-four shipwrecked persons from the British freight steamer Templemore which was burned at sea 800 miles east of the Virginia Capes, were brought here last night by the Hamburg-American steamer Arcadia. No lives were lost and no one was seriously injured. The hulk of the burned vessel is believed now to be beneath the waters of the Atlantic. The value of the vessel and her cargo is estimated at $700,000, covered b by insurance.

Capt. Isaac Jones of the Templemore, which left Baltimore for Liverpool last Saturday, said the fire was discovered at 11.30 Monday night in the hold where cotton was stored and it was his belief that it was caused by spontaneous combustion.

"I ordered the hold flooded by means of the fire-fighting apparatus which we had in every part of the ship," said Capt. Jones, "besides two powerful streams of water were sent into the ventilators just about the burning cotton.

"Within twenty minutes the fire reached the oil and lumber which was stored in the hold. I ordered the wireless operator to send out an 'S. O. S.' Word came at 11.50 that the Arcadia had heard our call and was coming at full speed. Still we fought the blaze, by men appearing unmindful of danger.

"I saw we had done the best we could, and three boats were lowered. No man left the ship until he received instruction to do so from me. I have never heard of men who behaved so admirably under such trying conditions. It was a few minutes after one o'clock when I left the ship. All on board preceded me to the boats.

"Our experience in the small boats was the worst of all. A storm was raging and the wind nearly upset our slender bottoms. Under such conditions, however, we managed to keep our boats head to the wind until 3.05 o'clock, when the Arcadia came along."

Woman Gets Ten Years.

SASKATOON, Sask., Oct. 3.—Mrs Dora White, convicted last Saturday of manslaughter for killing her husband, George White, at Govan, on June 2, was sentenced yesterday afternoon to ten years' confinement at Prince Albert Penitentiary. Negrophobia Is Dangerous.

SOUTHAMPTON, Oct. 3.—At the Anglican Church Congress yesterday Sir Sydney Olivier, former Governor of Jamaica, expressed the opinion that negrophobia was in mixed communities one of the most active sources of danger. In such communities where a more wholesome and hopeful equilibrium had been attained it had been brought about through the steadfast exclusion from public policy of all questions of race discrimination.

Bruce Writ Issued.

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—The writs have been issued for the federal bye-election in South Bruce. Nominations will take place on the 23rd of October, and polling on the 30th.

Both parties have their men in the field for several weeks, and the contest is expected to be a very spirited one.

Hon. Geo. E. Foster will stump South Bruce and East Middlesex in the interests of the Conservative candidates.

Boys With Hardened Convicts.

KINGSTON, Oct. 3.—The Children's Aid Society in drawing the attention of the prison reform commission to the fact that there are a number of youths in the penitentiary who have not served in the industrial school or prison, and that to give them long sentences and class them with hardened criminals is detrimental to reformation. The society asks that young prisoners be kept away from the hardened class.

PREMIERS TO MEET

Invitation to Provinces to Confer at Ottawa Accepted

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—The joint invitation of Sir James Whitney and Sir Lomer Gouin, to the several provinces of Canada, to be represented at a conference, to be held in Ottawa during the last week of this month has been accepted by all.

The doubt expressed in some quarters regarding the attitude of British Columbia was set at rest yesterday by the semi-official announcement that Sir Richard McBride is leaving immediately to attend the conference. The doubt with regard to British Columbia's position was caused by Sir Richard McBride's withdrawal from the conference of 1906. The representatives of the other provinces conceded that British Columbia had made a good case for better terms and decided in 1906 to recommend that the Dominion Government grant $1,000,000 additional over and above the fixed per capita subsidies, this million dollars to be paid in ten annual instalments of $100,000 each. As Premier Borden has made good his pre-election promise and has referred British Columbia's case to arbitration, Sir Richard has no hesitation in accepting the invitation to attend the forthcoming conference.

Many questions of Dominion-wide importance will be presented for consideration. The Maritime Provinces will again ask for a ruling on the issue of their diminishing representation in the Federal Parliament, and the west will insist on some decision regarding their crown lands and natural resources, still being under federal control.

[illegible] Five Years.

TORONTO, Oct. 3.—Frank Bincetti, found guilty by a jury of attempting to kill his wife by firing three shots at her while she was walking up Jarvis street on May 17, was sentenced to five years in Kingston Penitentiary yesterday by Chief Justice Meredith. Bincetti had been separated from his wife for some time and followed her as she was leaving her work at a restaurant. T. C. Robinette made a strong plea for the prisoner, but the chief justice could find no extenuating circumstances.

SENATE ACCEPTS AMENDED TARIFF REVISION MEASURE

Signatures of Speaker Clark, Vice-President Marshall and President Wilson Alone Required to Make Legislation Operative.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The signatures of Speaker Clark, Vice President Marshall and President Wilson are all that is lacking to put the Underwood tariff bill on the statute books, and those three signatures will be affixed early this afternoon. Last night, with many Republicans absent and unpaired, the Senate adopted the conference report by a vote of 36 to 17—more than two to one. Then, in accordance with an understanding to save Senators embarrassment, the Senate voted without a rollcall to a disagreement to the House compromise on the tax on cotton futures. Still without a rollcall the Senate then receded from its original amendment levying the tax, and the whole subject was stricken from the bill.

This action by the Senate will leave no loophole for further attempts in the House to insist on the tax in any form. But it is understood that some of the extreme Radicals, like Representative Wingo of Arkansas, are studying the rules in an effort to force another vote. To prevent any mishap, Majority Leader Underwood has sent out instructions for every Democrat to be in his place to-day when both Houses will convene at noon. The bill, with notice of the Senate's action, will be sent promptly to the House, where the speaker will order it enrolled and then sign it. As fast as messengers can rush it the bill will then be sent back to the Senate for the signature of Vice-President Marshall, thence to the White House.

There was talk last night that as to-day is Friday the President might be asked by superstitious Democrats to delay signing the bill until Saturday. An argument in support of this delay that had no wedge of superstition in it was that as the act will become effective on the day following its passage the customs officials would be overwhelmed on Saturday, a "short day," by hundreds of tons of goods held in bonded warehouses until the lower duties of the Underwood law went into operation. The customs officials want the act to go into effect on Monday instead of Saturday. It is not likely that President Wilson will be influenced by these considerations, superstitious or practical. He said yesterday that he would sign the act the minute it was laid before him.

WRECK ON T. H. & B.

New York Train is Derailed and Only One Man Hurt

WELLAND, Oct. 3.—Speeding at 45 miles an hour, the westbound New York to Toronto train was derailed on the T., H. & B. track at a curve near St. Ann's, twenty-five miles west of here, at 9.38 yesterday morning.

Although there were about two hundred passengers on board, only one, William Hogg of Spadina Gardens, Toronto, was injured. His head struck a plate glass window, which broke, and he suffered several gashes on the face and head. Scores of others were badly shaken up.

The accident was caused by the tender leaving the track, carrying the rest of the train with it except the engine.

A wrecking train and a relief train were hurried from Hamilton to the scene along with doctors. The passengers were sent on to their destinations as soon as possible.

The roadbed is torn up for a distance of about 500 feet and the line is closed for traffic.

WANTS TO HEAR FUNERAL SERMON

Dying Man Makes Strange Request to Minister

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Oct. 3.—Angus Tubbs, 41, who is dying of tuberculosis, yesterday asked Rev. P. H. Thompson, pastor of a Methodist Church, to preach his funeral sermon while he was alive.

Startled by the strange request, Mr. Thompson asked Tubbs why it would not be better to wait until he had died. Tubbs answered that he would like to hear what the minister had to say about him.

"All I ask of you is that you visit me a few hours before my end comes," he said. "I will arrange to have all the mourners here, and then you can go ahead and preach my funeral sermon. I am no better than a dead man now, and I would like to watch the funeral services."

When Mr. Thompson refused to grant the request, Tubbs said he would try to get another minister. Physicians say Tubbs can live only a few days.

Mad King Dying.

MUNICH, Oct. 3.—The condition of King Otto of Bavaria, who has been a lunatic since 1879, has changed for the worse, and his death is expected. One of the symptoms of his madness has long been a constant craving for food and a desire to eat anything, even leaves and earth.

CATHOLICS MAY VOTE

Pope Will Possibly Waive Prohibition in Rome

ROME, Oct. 3.—After the fall of temporal power the Pope issued an order forbidding Catholics throughout Italy to participate in political elections. For the first time the present pontiff at the last general elections waived the prohibition in certain constituencies, where Catholic candidates opposed anti-clerical socialists.

Recently there has been a rumor in circulation that at the coming election also the prohibition would be waived in the constituencies of Rome. The Vatican organ, The Osservatore Romano, in a statement published last night, announces that the Catholics of Rome will not go to the polls. No reference is made to other parts of Italy.

Japan Is Patient.

PEKIN, Oct. 3.—The Japanese legation denies that Japan is making fresh demands on China, and points out that China has satisfactorily complied with the original requirements with the exception of the punishment of the officers commanding the offending troops and the execution of the soldiers who killed the Japanese at Nanking. Japan, it is added, recognizes that it will take time to make a proper investigation by the Chinese Government and anticipates no evasion on these points.

Would Boycott Militia.

MONTREAL, Oct. 3.—Resolutions denouncing the practice by union men joining the militia, favoring the bi-monthly system of paying wages for transportation companies, and advocating the federation of all crafts engaged in railroad work have been passed by the International Association of Machinists, Canadian branch.

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 3.—Reports from several cities in southeast and southwest Texas indicate that damage from floods resulting from almost unprecedented rainfall in those sections will reach probably more than one million dollars.

Offer Made For Line.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 3.—W. P. Kellett, chief engineer of the Lake Erie & Northern Railway Co., has made an offer to buy the holdings of the company at $75,000. The company is considered a money-making proposition, and the bondholders who represent millions in capital invested will not consent to the deal.

It is announced that an appeal will be entered against the decision of Chief Justice Meredith whereby the street railway is obliged to pay all back taxes and make good within a year's time.

UNION LABEL

THE "SEVENTY FIVE PER CENT"

We are indebted to the Toronto Globe for bringing to our notice this gem from the Moose Jaw Times:

"Your true blue Tory has a great contempt for the working man who makes up seventy-five per cent of the population of our great cities. He believes him to be an ignorant dullard who will accept any old story told him by a man who will wave the flag, denounce the other side as traitors, and perhaps hand out a few cheap election cigars and a little intoxicating liquor. The Tory filibuster in politics has so often gotten away with it, that he has come to have a wholesome contempt for what he is pleased to call the "mob" in private."

Note that according to this authority, this unflattering theory about the working man has often been proved "correct" and the "filibusters" contempt for seventy-five per cent. of the population is described here as "wholesome." What a profession of faith in the people to come from a western Liberal paper, and by way of the Toronto Globe!

But let us be charitable. The writer did not intend to say that at all. He is probably quite a nice man who is far from thinking "contempt" a wholesome sentiment. And as for that theory about so many people being "ignorant dullards," he does not really think that it has been often "proved." We do not believe that he ever means to say it.

The trouble was that he had to try and say something in defence of the unhappy position in which so many Liberals feel they have been placed by their Ottawa leaders. And as so often happens, once having begun to abuse the wicked Tories, all sense of the meaning of words was lost. It was an unfortunate mishap for the Moose Jaw Times, which the Globe might have been friendly enough to cover up instead of passing on.

MR. WELLS' LATEST PROBLEM

Mr. H. G. Wells has added yet another to his long list of novels, and in his latest, "The Passionate Friends," he deals once more with the eternal and infernal sex problems.

The hero is an Anglican clergyman's son who has been brought up to a narrow, aristocratic view of life. But he has not the means to live up to it. He falls in love with a Lady Mary, daughter of a wealthy family and his love is requited, but the lady's family will have none of the young man, and the lady marries a millionaire.

The hero, whose name is Stratton, goes off to the South African war, in which country he remains for a few years. When he returns he plunges into politics and eventually marries a pretty girl named Rachel More, with whom he lives happily enough.

Then comes Lady Mary again into Stratton's life with the result that the millionaire sues for a divorce. Lady Mary cuts short the proceedings by committing suicide and Stratton comes to love more dearly his real wife.

This is a very scrappy and perhaps slightly incorrect outline of the story, but the problem is the old one, of two women and one man.

There seems to be a certain fascination for these stories of double-lives with the modern novelist. One wonders at times if those writers are defending themselves, or have some particular friend whose conduct has been mis-judged in the eyes of the world.

There are no doubt a great many men in the world who have fallen in love twice and perhaps more than twice, but are these the best kind of company for our young or old novel readers? Is the polygamist the only interesting person in modern life?

Mr. Wells' object may be of the best, but the effect of these sex mix-ups presented as mental fodder for our young people is to aggravate the problem, and by means of "suggestion" to turn them into the way of imitation.

AN HONEST BUSH RANGER

Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton some time ago offered a prize of £1,000 for the best novel sent in by a certain date. Many stories were submitted and the £1,000 was divided up between three writers. The second prize was taken by Mr. David Hennessey for a story entitled "The Outlaw" which is now published.

The scene of the story is laid in Australia, and has a colonial tang about it. Canadians can easily enter into the atmosphere of the story, for it would appear that life in the Australian backwoods is similar to that of this country some fifty years ago.

The hero is a bushranger named Salathiel, who for a petty theft was sent to some sort of convict settlement, where the brutal governor ill-treated him, and becoming desperate he escaped into the bush, and eventually became captain of a notorious gang of highwaymen.

But Salathiel, while he was desperate, was nevertheless good at heart and of a refined disposition. He, like Robin Hood, was honorable in a sporting fashion, and often did kindly acts which betrayed his better nature and high moral principles.

After a while he tired of his outlaw life, but as there was a price upon his head he could do nothing but follow his lawless trade or live life under an assumed name. This latter he tried, and as he was well educated he easily got a position as school teacher in a country district. He taught school, and while doing so fell in love with one of his scholars, Betsy Carey.

But he was soon discovered and had to flee to the bush again. His subsequent escapades and endeavors to reform this mode of life and settle down to respectability with Betsy make interesting, thrilling and at the same time, clean and healthy reading.

HELEN KELLER

Helen Keller, the remarkable lady who is cut off from the world of sight and sound, is still adding to her wonderful accomplishments. The British Weekly contains the following account of a meeting addressed by Miss Keller recently:

"Mrs. Griffith Thomas writes from Sagamore Beach, Mass., where she and Professor W. H. Griffith Thomas, of Toronto, have been holiday-making:

"At a Sociological Conference held here; Miss Helen Keller attended two of the meetings and spoke at one of them. Happening to go in late, I dropped into one of the very few vacant seats, and found myself sitting next to Helen Keller, with Mrs. Macey (Miss Sullivan) on her other side. Miss Keller's right hand was held in Mrs. Macey's right hand. Any interesting sentences were thus communicated by fingers and palms by Mrs. Macey, while an occasional query or reply was returned by Miss Keller. Towards the end of the meeting both went to the platform for Miss Keller's address. The tones of the voice were somewhat strange and the pronunciation of a few words either over or under articulated. But it was nevertheless very wonderful to hear one speak who knows nothing of sound and who dwells in perpetual darkness. The happy, smiling, intelligent face must have preached a sermon to many. Apparently, she was aware of applause expressed by the feet, and which caused vibration, for she at once paused and waited, while of hand-clapping she took no notice."

If we who have the full use of our faculties could take life so keenly and cheerfully as this soul bereft of vision and hearing does, this world would be a happier and more interesting place. Can not Miss Keller whisper to us her secret?

Smoking In Commons.

Smoking during Parliamentary proceedings is the latest precedent set up in the House of Commons. The other day, in the Scottish Grand Committee, which was considering an important bill, a member was seen lounging at his ease, a pipe between his lips. A colleague drew attention to the "offence" on a point of order; but the chairman, Mr. Arthur Henderson, promptly replied that the objection was not sustained. Thereupon a dozen members or more produced their pipes and lit up. This is the first time smoking has been permitted during Parliamentary proceedings.

THE FIGHT IN CHATEAUGAY

Race-Conflict Begun

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—The following clipped from the Toronto Star, (Liberal) is a most sensational admission of the fact that a race conflict is [illegible] in earnest in Canada. As in the case of religion the fault certainly does not lie with Ontario; our skirts are clean. The extract is:—

"Ottawa, Oct. 2—"The Chateauguay election, which takes place a week from Saturday, should tell something about the trend of political feeling in Quebec," says the Ottawa Citizen (Conservative). "The seat has been Liberal since Confederation, Hon. Luther Holton being member from 1867 to 1891, and J. P. Brown from 1891 until his recent death. For 20 years the Liberal majority has been in the hundreds, except at the last election in 1911, when it was only 10. There are less than 4,000 voters. A majority of 400 in such a constituency is equivalent to a majority of 2,000 in a constituency like Ottawa.

"The complexion of the constituency is a peculiar one. About two-thirds of the people—1,000 out of 15,600 — are French-Canadians. Nevertheless by an old convention, the understanding and practice in both political parties is that an English-speaking man shall be nominated for the Dominion House, and a French-Canadian for the Quebec Legislature.

"The French Liberal press in Quebec have set out in the most approved partisan buccaneer fashion to excite racial feeling in Chateauguay against the Conservative party. That this sort of campaign may result in a restoration of the former scale of Liberal majorities in Chateauguay is quite possible. If it doesn't, the meaning will be that Quebec is largely back into the straight Conservative ranks. The personalities of the candidate will not count for much either way."

Yours truly,

Dear Sir,—By all means continue the paving operations as long as the weather will permit.

The Board of Works took the only sensible step, when it was decided that the City Engineer should compel the contractors to live up to the agreement.

AN AVERAGE COUPLE

That Was Just Why They Loved Each Other So Much.

By HENRY P. BENTON.

In the first days of their engagement Ralph and Cynthia loved each other to distraction. Ralph Blair was twenty-five, and had a prosperous future in the office of the telephone company; Cynthia was just a nice American girl of a well-to-do family. There could not have been a more average couple in the world.

That was just why they loved each other so much. They had grown up in the same circle in the same town; they had always been expected to marry, and they were to be married—at the end of the year.

"I tell you, I'm as happy as a king, old man," said Ralph to his chum, Peterson. "It seems as though I want to sing all the time."

"How long have you been engaged?" asked Peterson gloomily.

"Two weeks," answered Ralph ecstatically.

"Wait till it's two months," said Peterson darkly.

Henry Peterson was nearly thirty. His life was supposed to have been permanently blighted by an unfortunate and mysterious love affair a year previously. The discriminating, indeed, claimed that they could see signs of a swift recovery, but nevertheless Peterson, as a gloomy ascetic, convinced of the hollowness of life, and experienced in the ways of women, occupied a romantic niche in the minds of his friends of both sexes which he did nothing to destroy.

"What do you mean by that?" demanded Ralph Blair hotly.

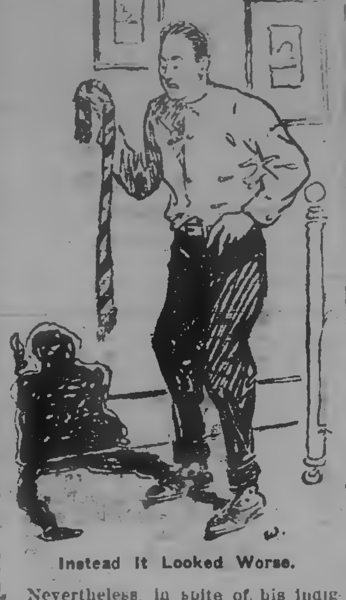
"I mean," answered Peterson, "speaking quite impersonally, of course—I mean that woman must be kept in subjection in order to insure happiness. The worst of it is, they are so cunning."

"Cynthia isn't cunning!" exclaimed Ralph indignantly. "At least, not in the way you mean."

"They are all cunning," insisted Peterson. "At first they are as meek as milk; then, when they have wound their tentacles firmly round their victims they begin to exercise their power. Little by little they claim dominion; at last the day arrives when they have enmeshed their victims and are supreme."

"Peterson," said Ralph, his face pale with anger, "if ever you speak in that way about Miss Dunn again I shall have nothing more to do with you."

Peterson only laughed—that hollow, mocking, cynical laugh which had done more than anything else to make him interesting.



Instead It Looked Worse.

Nevertheless, in spite of his indignation, Ralph was vaguely conscious of Peterson's remarks when Cynthia began to shower loving little attentions upon him. For instance, there was that birthday gift of a box of cigars. Ralph Blair was fond of cigars, but Cynthia had chosen these because of the picture on the box, which she considered artistic. Cynthia was very artistic. She was becoming more so. She liked poets and writers, and before their engagement Ralph had often sniffed scornfully to see some long-haired devotee of the Muses seated languidly in the Dunn parlor.

That he had to hurry through the box of cigars, with painful results, rather than deceitfully destroy its contents, might have been a passing affair only. But then came the affair of the neckwear. On the fifth of October Cynthia handed him an oblong box, surrounded with prettily colored paper. Inside Ralph found a crimson and yellow tie. He stared at it in dismay.

"That is for you, dearest. I made it myself," said Cynthia proudly.

"But Cynthy, I can't wear this!" exclaimed Ralph in horror. Then, seeing her eyes cloud, he added hastily: "I mean, it's too good for me, dearest. What would a fellow like myself look like, wearing a beautiful tie like this?"

Cynthia smiled happily.

"Never mind, dear," she said, kissing him. "When it's worn out I shall make you another."

Before he left she made him promise to wear it every day. He dressed too somberly, she told him. Ralph promised, and fled home, gulping. When he awoke next morning he hoped that the tie would look better by daylight. Instead of which it looked worse. It was not only yellow and red, but it had a pale green stripe in the fabric, which Ralph had not noticed in the gaslight.

"Ho, fellows, look at Blair," sang out the youngest bookkeeper at the office. "Say, Blair, you ain't married, are you?"

"Shut up!" yelled the victim, picking up a ledger, and the youngest bookkeeper discreetly withdrew into himself. But Blair could not avoid overhearing whispers which seemed meant for his ears. In the street, too, a boy looked at him and, with his eyes fixed on his throat, asked for a light.

The next morning, when he was not wearing the tie, he met Cynthia in the street. Her manner was cold, to say the least. Ralph resumed his neckwear, and, returning to the office, encountered Peterson, who grinned maliciously.

The final blow was the matter of the haircut. Ralph had incautiously remarked that his hair was growing long.

"Ralph, dearest," said Cynthia, perching herself upon the arm of his chair, "what are our lives going to be?"

"To be?" repeated Ralph. "Why—lives, I suppose."

"Yes, I know," answered Cynthia, nodding. "But are they going to be noble lives, Ralph, full of beauty and inspiration, and filled with sublimity, or are they going to be just common business lives?"

"It's something about my hair!" exclaimed Ralph desperately. "Go on, dearest."

"Don't have it cut," said Cynthia. "I don't want you to look like a common business man without poetry or individuality. I want you to look like—an artist. There, the secret's out. Ralph, promise me you'll let it curl over your forehead like—like Byron."

Ralph Blair drew himself up firmly.

"Now, Cynthia," he said, "let us understand one another. I am not going to be a poet. I am going to be a telephone man. And I am not going to look like Byron. Byron was a slob and spent the best years of his life among Greeks and Dagoes. They wouldn't have him in his own country. I am going to have my hair cropped; and I am going to wear a black tie until I get tired, and then I shall switch off to any color I choose. Now, dear, I don't want to be harsh, but you must choose between Byron and me."

"Brute!" sobbed Cynthia, and buried her face in her hands. Overcome with remorse he gently withdrew them. Cynthia was laughing.

"Cynthia!" he exclaimed indignantly.

"O, I'm so glad, dearest," she exclaimed, throwing her arms round his neck. "It was all that horrid Mr. Peterson. He said you'd told him that you would die for me, but that he knew you wouldn't have the grit to live your own life if I tried to make you different, and he dared me to try. And I was right! I hated the tie I gave you, and I thought you were the bravest person on earth to wear it; and I wouldn't have you with long, greasy curls for all the world. Where are you going, Ralph?"

"Just out to kill Peterson," he answered.

"No, don't do that. Poor Mr. Peterson! You see, he did think quite a good deal about me once, dearest."

Not the Tragedy She Thought It Was.

Things are not always what they seem, as a wealthy old lady recently discovered in Paris. While passing along the Rue Cardinal Lemoine she saw a crowd gathered round an omnibus. Elbowing her way through to the front, she was horrified to see two legs protruding from between the wheels of the vehicle. The rest of the dreadful story was too obvious. With a piercing scream the lady fell fainting into the arms of some of the other spectators. The commotion caused by madame's fainting fit took the interest of the crowd away from the man beneath the bus, who, in his turn, dropped his spanner and crawled out to see what the counter-attraction was. When the old lady recovered she would not believe that what she had seen was only the driver tightening a nut under the omnibus. "They are hiding the truth from me," she muttered as she continued her walk.

More Burns Relics.

The Burns' relics in the Monument at the Kay Park, Kilmarnock, have lately been added to. The addition consists of a drinking glass which was bought at the sale of Burns' effects when he removed from Ellisland to Dumfries. It is a gift from Mr. John McGregor, Dunedin, New Zealand, acting on behalf of the executor of the estate of Mrs. Margaret Quayle, whose grandfather bought it at the sale of the effects of Ellisland Farm.

Good Form

The Silver Wedding.

Many of the wedding anniversaries are passed by unnoticed, but the "silver wedding," that comes after twenty-five years of married life, should always be celebrated. A quarter of a century of more or less happy married life is not so common a thing that it should be slighted.

Even if one's pocketbook will not stretch to cover an elaborate celebration it is always possible to invite a few relatives and old friends and do the thing simply but none the less enjoyable for all that.

If a big reception or dinner is given on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the wedding the invitations should be engraved. Sometimes a folded sheet of heavy unglazed paper similar to a wedding invitation is used and sometimes the invitations are like those used for an evening reception or "At Home." The wording should be engraved in silver and usually runs as follows:

> 1888. 1913
> Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stanton Brown request the pleasure of your company at the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding (or silver wedding, as one prefers) Tuesday evening, June nineteenth, at eight o'clock, fifteen hundred and two North Broadway.
> R. S. V. P.

House Decorations.

A very pretty idea is to decorate the house with white flowers, thus recalling the original bridal day, but it is, of course, perfectly permissible to use all sorts of colored blossoms, and many people prefer this as looking gayer and more festive. The hostess, who was the bride of twenty-five years ago, should, if it becomes her, be gowned in white. She is assisted in receiving by her husband, who stands beside her, and who is, of course, in evening dress and wears a white flower, a tiny rosebud or a single white carnation or gardenia in his buttonhole. The grown daughters of the family, whether they are married or single, assist their mother in receiving, while the sons and sons-in-law circulate among the guests and do what they can to make them have a good time.

The refreshments can either be served at small tables with an especial table for as many of the original wedding party as can be gathered together after the lapse of years, or they can be served "en buffet," as it is called—that is, passed around to each guest by the waiters assisted by the male members of the family with the single exception of the host of the occasion, and such intimate men friends of theirs as may be pressed into service. "En buffet" means "from the sideboard," but in most cases such refreshments are really served from the large dining table and direct from the kitchen. And this, at a silver wedding, gives occasion for very effective decorations.

Appropriate Presents.

The question of bringing presents on a wedding anniversary is a vexed one, and many people hesitate to accept an invitation of this sort, fearing that they will be expected to give an expensive piece of silver. Now, such gifts should be left for relatives and intimate friends, and unless one comes under that category it is not really necessary to give anything at all. But so many dainty trifles in silver can be picked up cheaply nowadays that this aspect of the case need not frighten any one who feels better not to go empty handed. Delightful little vases decorated with silver deposit can be purchased as low as 50 cents and odd spoons for a very little more.

The Third Person.

Frequently the third person is ignored in a conversation. Two friends will indulge in reminiscences that place the extra woman decidedly beyond the pale. This is the height of rudeness. Some explanation that will politely let the outsider know the trend of the talk is due. "The trip of which we are speaking, Miss Jones, was abroad. You probably have had the same experience," will let Miss Jones know that she has not been forgotten and frequently will give her a chance to contribute to the conversation. If by these indirect means you cannot make the third one feel at ease, ask her direct questions. Make her feel that she is welcomed and not ignored.

So much can be done by a tactful woman in this big question of the unexpected outsider that it is shameful to ignore the chances. And, my dear readers, do not let a day come when you will be ashamed to look in the face a friend or acquaintance who has been unfortunately an outsider. Above all, see that the third person is escorted to her home before you yourself are seen safely to the front door.

Vacation Introductions.

Now that summer vacations are in order, the need of frequent introductions is very apparent, for new faces are constantly appearing, and custom demands that strangers be formally introduced to each other by a third person.

Remember that the simplest form is the best. Do not give a lengthy introductory paragraph which leaves the two strangers standing in embarrassment.

If you will keep in mind that a name should be clearly pronounced, to prevent all future trouble, you will form a habit of saying the names slowly and distinctly.

Sandwich Fillings.

Ripe bananas, mashed, seasoned with lemon juice and sweetened to taste, make a hearty sandwich filling. The bread on which this filling is spread should be only lightly buttered.

A sandwich filling with a flavor which puzzles is made by mixing half a cupful of grated maple sugar with a quarter of a cupful of chopped roasted peanuts and a tablespoonful of sweet cream. This filling is delicious on either brown or white bread.

Waylaid and battered to death, an Englishman, named Moseley, a native of Birmingham, met with a tragic fate on the Rand, near Johannesburg, South Africa, not long since. The brutal murder was committed on the high road about one and a half miles from Pilgrim's Rest on the Sabie Road. Moseley, who had a Kaffir store on the same road, came into town to transact business and to obtain his mail, which arrived at about seven o'clock in the evening and was sorted by eight. When within sight of his store he was waylaid, knocked down, and murdered. The body was then thrown into some bushes adjoining the road, where it was discovered on the following morning by a passer-by, who reported the matter to the local police. Moseley was well known on the Rand, where he had relatives. He had only been there a few years, and carried on a remunerative business.

HIS FAITHFUL SPY.

Gentle Persuasion Induced Him to Take a Trip Abroad.

In countries where special privilege exists, the law pays to particular persons openly flattering attentions. The story of the eminent Venezuelan who had a policeman detailed to run his private errands—especially in the matter of bananas for the family parrot—is capped by one of another military aristocrat of the same country whose reputation as a malcontent induced the president of the republic to assign a spy for constant service in his immediate vicinity.

Wherever this aristocrat went—his name was Tarantara—the spy went also. There was no shaking him off. If Tarantara, doubling in his tracks, came suddenly face to face with his official shadow, the spy saluted politely, grinned amiably with no shade of embarrassment, and, when the other had passed haughtily by, fell in exactly ten paces behind. If Tarantara motored out in the peaceful country, the spy accompanied him upon a motorcycle at precisely the same respectful distance. At last the monotony of the thing got on to the great man's nerves. Upon one of those brisk spins in the vicinity of Caracas, he stopped his machine in a lonely spot, turned upon his follower, put a pistol to his head and said in choice Castilian:

"My friend, I am leaving a country which has become insupportable to me. I am going abroad. But I cannot bear to be deprived of your company. You must come along."

"Delighted, general," was the prompt reply. "I have always desired to travel in foreign parts."

According to the latest advices, General Tarantara and his faithful spy are enjoying the delights of a sojourn under the protection of the Dutch flag in the island of Curacao and are nightly seen in company (but exactly ten paces apart) in the cabarets of Willemstad.—New York Post.

A good supper dish is made by buttering rounds of toast, then spreading sardine paste over them before the welsh rarebit is poured on.

PRAISE FOR THE TEMPLE BAND

During his visit to the Salvation Temple on Wednesday, Col. Mitchell was very favorably impressed with the work of the local Temple Band. He said their work was very creditable.

The Colonel was given a rousing welcome at the citadel for which he returned his thanks. He promised his assistance to the proposed trip of the band to England next year.

BURGLARS AT HASTINGS

Entered Two Stores and Made Their Escape

HASTINGS, ONT., Oct. 3.—This town was again visited by burglars Wednesday night. They forced the windows of Lambert's hardware hardware store, where they secured safety razors knives and other goods to the value of about $100. They also entered Baker Bros.' general store, where they were discovered, and when an alarm was sounded they escaped.

Several persons saw the two burglars after they left Baker Bros.' store. They have a good description of them. The men tried to get into Coughlan's drug and jewelry store but as the telephone exchange was there and a night operator on hand they only succeeded in removing a little of the putty from the window panes. This is only one of a series of burglaries here. A gang has been operating also at Norwood, Warkworth, and Westwood.

TORONTO PAPERS TO COME EARLIER

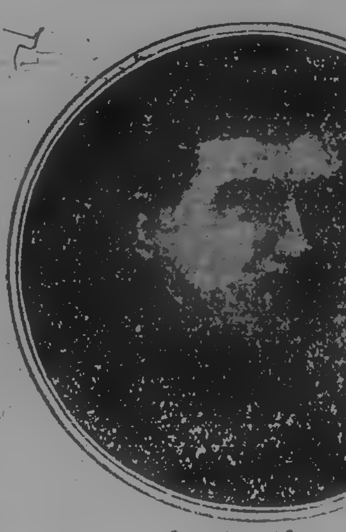
More Satisfactory Arrangement to be Made by C.P.R.

The Mail and Empire says:—As a result of a conference yesterday with Superintendent Arundel, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the late delivery of the Toronto morning papers, which has been troubling the citizens of Peterborough for some time, will soon be done away with. Yesterday C. H. Pennefather, president of the Peterborough Board of Trade; Hon. J. R. Stratton and representatives of the Toronto morning papers waited upon Mr. Arundel and laid before him their grievance. He assured the delegates that the matter would be remedied as soon as possible, and it is likely that in the very near future a freight train will run from North Toronto to Peterborough carrying the morning papers. If this service is opened the people of Peterborough will have the Toronto papers shortly before eight o'clock each morning instead of at noon and sometimes later, the hour when the people of Peterborough first see their morning papers.

Pale Blue Lobsters.

The latest fad in Berlin, once noted for "plain German cooking," is to have the feast aglow with color. Pale blue lobsters, rose colored consomme and delicately tinted bread and pastry are set on the table amid a profusion of chemically colored flowers. The pale blue lobster is said to be the masterpiece of a professor, Joseph Kornfeld. This savant discovered that the lobster turned red on boiling because of the presence in its shell of the dye alizarin in natural form. This led to the conclusion that a small amount of an alkali added to the boiling water would turn the lobster blue. Further experiments showed that by the addition of iron salts and other chemicals one could have lobster in pale green, purple, violet or any other color that might be desired.

Another German Royal Romance



Prince Henry of Bavaria

Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide of Luxemburg, Who Is to Marry Prince Henry of Bavaria.

ONE of the latest romances of European royalty is that in which the Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide of Luxemburg figures as the heroine and Prince Henry of Bavaria as the hero.

The Grand Duchess, who is nineteen, is the youngest ruler in Europe at present. Moreover, she rules her miniature kingdom with an absolutism that is amusing and piquant in the light of her youth and prettiness. Prince Henry of Bavaria is twenty-nine years old. He is a nephew of the Regent of Bavaria. The betrothal of the royal couple would be looked upon with complacence by their families.

COMMITTEE RECOMMEND CHARGE BE WITHDRAWN

Eastwood Building to Remain as it Now Stands.

Mr. Eastwood, Mr. Rutherford and Mr. Peck waited upon the Board of Fire, Light and Water Committee last night, and on motion of Ald. Duncan and Ald. Buller, the explanation was received and the building inspector requested to withdraw the police court charge.

Mr. Peck, acting on behalf of Mr. Eastwood, asked that the Board moderate the by-law so as to allow the building to remain as it is. The building is well bonded together. He submitted that it is more solid than if it were built on solid walls. It is also isolated. "Mr. Wm. Langford looked the building over and I will be pleased to have you discuss the matter with Mr. Langford. To change the building would necessitate the demolishing of the building."

Mr. Langford said that the building should be treated differently, as it was braced across the creek, and therefore the superstructure was far better than a heavy foundation or better than a brick wall.

Mayor Bradburn—"Do you understand the circumstances under which this building was constructed?"

Mr. Langford—"I do not."

Mr. Rutherford, contractor of the building, said there was no intention on his part or Mr. Eastwood to evade the by-law. He considered it a first class job, better than a solid brick wall.

"I don't think there is another fourteen inch wall built over the creek in the city to-day," remarked Mr. Rutherford.

Ald. Buller—"I think the explanation is quite sufficient. As far as I am concerned I think it is a very good building."

Mayor—"As a contractor Mr. Langford, do you think it a good as the 9 inch wall specified in the agreement?"

Mr. Langford—"I do."

Ald. Gillespie—"The whole trouble arose over Mr. Eastwood not agreeing with the plans of the council."

Mayor—"Mr. Langford, as an experienced contractor, says it is a good building, although both Mr. Rutherford and Mr. Eastwood completely ignored the agreement."

Ald. Anderson—"I understand that the parties treated the council with contempt in regard to this building by ignoring the agreement of the council."

The discussion was ended by the motion being passed.

PRESENTATIONS TO FR. GUIRY

Clock From Sanctuary Boys and Purse From Congregation

A handsome clock was presented to Rev. Father Guiry, on the eve of his departure for Kinmount, to which parish he has been appointed by Bishop O'Brien.

The presentation was made by the Sanctuary Boys at St. Mary's Church.

Another presentation of a purse of gold was made by the congregation. Rev. Father Cote, of St. Peter's Cathedral, was present and was one of the speakers.

A paste made of equal parts of turpentine and myrrh applied to the white spots on finger nails will prevent them from developing.

USELESS TEACHING

Schoolbooks With Problems That Are Sadly Out of Date.

Several educational experts recently examined the public school curriculum in one of the large New England towns. They found that most of the children who dropped out of school did so in the seventh grade. Probing further, they found that the course in arithmetic in that grade dealt almost wholly with the tables of measurement.

The experts took ten representative problems from this course and submitted them to ten business and professional executives in New York—men whose salaries run from $3,000 to $15,000 a year. The result was astonishing. Most of them failed utterly to solve the problems. The highest mark, 25 per cent was scored by the secretary of a society engaged in social work. The editor of a magazine and the head of a book publishing house found a problem dealing with the buying and selling of paper in bulk too much for them.

Both these men declared that the terms employed in the problem had not been in current use for fifty years. Each of the ten men who were examined explained his low mark by saying: "I learned that stuff once, but I haven't had any use for it since."

There seems to be a vital connection between that course in antiquated arithmetic and the discouragement of the parents of those seventh grade pupils. How much similar "stuff" is being taught school children of the country? How much of it is there in the curriculum of the Cleveland schools?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

When a cloth dress becomes spotted sponge it with equal parts of hot water and turpentine, from the parts when dry over a damp cloth.

Pieces of old kid gloves are excellent for mending the back seams of children's shoes. Sew the patch neatly on the inside of the worn place.

HE FORGOT TO PAY, BOARD BILL AND WAS FINED $100

HAMILTON, Oct. 3.—Bertram Kelley, Toronto, appeared in Police Court yesterday morning on a charge of attempted fraud laid against him by Harry Kempf, proprietor of the German hotel. Kelley, it seems, is another of that light-hearted species who believe that hotels are a free institution. He was fined $100 or three months for holding this belief. He breezed into town last week. Since then he had left with the bartender and the proprietor checks with an aggregate value of $525. On these checks he obtained $22.25 credit. He also owed $11 for board. But money Kelly had none of it. This is the second conviction this week for board beating.

Coroner's Jury Return Open Verdict at Lakefield

In the adjourned inquest into the death of the man who was killed in an auto accident, three miles north of Lakefield on Tuesday Sept. 25th, the jury returned an open verdict.

Much evidence was given at Lakefield yesterday afternoon but chief interest centered in the statements made by Roland Darcy, who was in the auto at the time of the accident and escaped injury.

Darcy said that his companion was driving the automobile when the machine turned turtle. He admitted that they had been drinking.

Wm. Bell, of Smith, another witness, told of his identification of the body at Fellegham's undertaking establishment. He believed the body to be that of a man who had been employed by him at his farm.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

The Swiss Protest Against Having Theirs Taken In Vain.

A curious request was recently made by the Swiss government to the government of Germany relating to the common use of the word "Swiss" in Germany in the sense of a farmhand. The German government has courteously replied to these representations by the assurance that henceforward the offending word, when used in any depreciatory sense, will be deleted from all official reports. To be consistent in its position the Swiss government will be obliged to make similar representations to France, where the word 'Suisse' has for centuries been used in the sense of a porter. Perhaps too Switzerland will ask for the abolition of a familiar proverb. "Pas d'argent, pas de Suisse" (no money, no Swiss), is hardly complimentary to the nation.

Surely the Swiss government is a little oversensitive in the matter. From the time when Cicero pointed out that 'stranger' and "enemy" were the same in Latin, to call a person by a foreign name has been an easy method of depreciation. Shakespeare's use of the word Frenchman would hardly suit the entente cordiale. At the time when Englishmen were fighting bravely for Greek independence at Missolonghi the current term in London for a swindler or a card sharper was "a Greek." When a small child is particularly obstreperous he is called a Turk, and when he is particularly unintelligible he is called a Dutchman. Finally, we may expect in addition to the protests of these maligned nations a deputation of North American Indians to protest against the French habit of calling their most desperate criminals by the name of Apaches.—Westminster Gazette.

Patron's Appreciate Grand Trunk Service

During the past summer the Grand Trunk have been in receipt of many letters of appreciation from patrons who have travelled over their lines, the latest is an unsolicited letter received from a prominent traveller of Baltimore, Md., who conducted a tour through the Muskokka Lakes region last month. He writes as follows:

"The service given by you in the interest of the welfare of my party was of the best and deserves the highest commendation. Every member was delighted with the manner you arranged for our pleasure and entertainment and for the splendid equipment we had throughout the entire journey.

After using the Grand Trunk many times, it seems that the system grows better and the trip of this month was the best I have ever ever had." 6.

Another Musical Wonder.

"Is he another Beethoven, will he develop into a musical giant, this six year-old boy, or will he—? Who knows?" An American who saw young Ferrero direct a large orchestra at the Augusteum, in Rome, asks the question in a letter in which he describes the unique performance. "The hall was full, even to the top gallery, the foremost men and women of Italy's musical world were present, and they wondered, as did I, to see this boy of six direct the Meistersinger Vorspiel without a note before him and with a certainty and a dash which convinced me that he knew every note of it."—New York Tribune.

Bombs For Forest Fires.

Ammonia bombs are being tried out on some of the national forests for the purpose of extinguishing forest fires. They are said to have worked well in the case of brush fires where the fire fighters find difficulty in getting near enough to the burning area to beat out the flames. Each bomb exploded will extinguish fire in a circle of about five yards in diameter.

A Billion Eggs on Ice.

The report of forty five public refrigerators of the United States, just out shows that on July 1 there were stored in these houses 2,922,800 cases of eggs thirty dozen to the case. At the same date last year the holdings were 3,330,700 cases, showing a shortage in the holdings of 407,700 cases. Storage eggs today are worth $7.20 a case, so that the holdings on July 1 were worth $21,044,160 at wholesale. The average consumption of eggs in Greater New York is 100,000 cases a week, or three million dozen. At an average retail price of 35 cents a dozen this would amount to $1,050,000 a week, or a trifle over 54,000,000 a year.—New York Sun.

Gallagher

The Boy Who Hunted For Him Found Him

By EDITH V. ROSS

"Is there a man around here by the name of Gallagher?" asked a pale faced boy who, judging from his appearance, might have been almost any age between fifteen and twenty-five.

"What do you want o' Tim Gallagher, sonny?" asked the rough, red bearded man of whom the inquiry had been made.

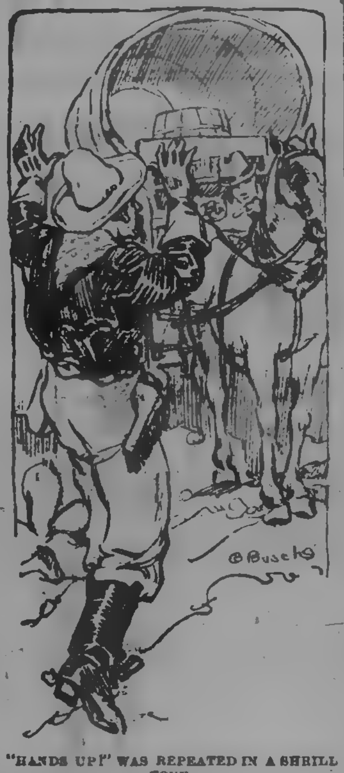
"Oh, nothin' particular. I was just wonderin' if he was in this camp."

"Well, you give him a wide berth, and don't go round makin' inquiries for him; he mought hear about it and want to know if you had any particular business with him. If you couldn't satisfy him he mought reckon you war a-spyin' on him for some one as was tryin' to get a drop on him."

"Mebbe," said the youth listlessly, moving on with a heavy step that indicated either bodily or mental infirmity. He wore a baggy suit of clothes and a felt hat that he kept drawn down over his eyes. Nevertheless, loose as his coat was, as he walked away his adviser saw something evident on each hip that suggested the outline of a revolver.

The youngster lounged about the camp, occasionally asking some one if he'd seen Mr. Gallagher. His inquiries were usually received with a surprised stare by the person inquired of, who in most cases walked away without a reply. The only person who answered the question was a woman, who said "There he goes now," and the boy without stopping to thank her moved away in the direction of the person he was looking for.

Nevertheless he didn't join Mr. Gallagher; he sauntered along behind him till Gallagher came to a team standing before a cabin. He unhitched the horse, got into the wagon and was driving away when the man who owned the team came out of the cabin and asked him what he meant by taking his horse.



"HANDS UP!" WAS REPEATED IN A SHRILL TONE.

"I want to go to the camp up the canyon around the divide. I'll send your team back."

"Who are you, and what business you got to take my team?"

"I'm Gallagher, and I take your team because I want it."

"Oh, Mr. Gallagher. All right; send it back when you're done with it."

The youth stood listening to this bit of dialogue and at this point offered for a quarter to go with Mr. Gallagher and drive the team back. Gallagher didn't object. The owner of the team looked pleased. The boy climbed up beside Gallagher, who drove away.

"I'm in luck," said the boy confidingly. "I thought I would have to make this journey on foot."

"You don't look strong enough to do that." It's a good fourteen mile there and back."

"Your name's Gallagher, I reckon."

"What's that to you?"

"Oh, nothin' in particular."

"Where do you live?"

"I? Oh, I don't live especially any where."

Gallagher had killed so many persons whose relatives had sworn to have his life that he was very suspicious. He felt assured that he would not be openly attacked, for he was the quickest shot in the territory, and every man who had ever heard of him was afraid of him. But it occurred to him that this boy might have been sent by some enemy to spy upon his movements and decoy him into a trap. As to being afraid of the boy, that did not occur to him.

"Did you ever hear of me?" he asked.

"I've heard of a man named Gallagher that's considered a desperado and has had no end o' fights around this part of the country, but you're not that Gallagher, are you?"

As the boy spoke this in an ingenuous tone, he looked up at his companion in a mild way that brought confidence. The look of suffering in his face had disappeared, but was not replaced by any that could be definitely described. Gallagher looked into his mild eyes and saw nothing there but innocence or guile. When Gallagher's gaze was not bent upon him, however, the boy's expression changed. There was in it self control, craft, hate.

"See here, sonny," said the man beside him. "I am that Gallagher, and I want you to understand that if you try to play any pranks on me I'll chaw you up as I would a worm."

The youth looked up at the desperado with an affected surprise that might have deceived Satan himself.

"Good Lord, you don't mean it!"

"Yes, I do mean it. I'm Gallagher, the man that there's a reward offered for. A reward! The only reward any one will get for tacklin' me is a bullet."

"Are you the man that killed Cy Allen?"

"Yes."

"And Burt Holmes?"

"Yes, and a lot more of 'em. But how did you hear of these fights?"

"Oh, everybody round here has heard of 'em. You better look out for Burt Holmes' widow. I heard"—

The boy shut himself up suddenly.

"Well, what have you heard?"

"I suppose I oughtn't to tell."

"You will tell," and the man held a cocked revolver near the lad's temple.

"She's got three men on your track. They're goin' to surprise you, comin' on to you from different points."

"Well, go on; tell all you know."

"I don't know any more—I swear I don't."

"Yes, you do." And Gallagher gave the boy a cuff. He was about to repeat it when the boy cried:

"Don't! I'll tell!"

"Well, tell, then."

"They're watchin' you now. They know just where you are. They're goin' to shoot you from behind trees when you go through some bit of timber."

Gallagher looked at the boy suspiciously. It did not seem likely that he should know these things. The desperado didn't believe that there was a word of truth in what he said, but that he had been frightened into confessing a falsehood in fear of another cuff or something worse. But when a man has had warning of a plot against his life he is not likely to ignore it.

"How did you get wind of all this?"

The boy's explanation was not at all satisfactory. He stammered through two or three stories, all disconnected, and at last broke down and confessed that he had heard only what he had first said—that Mrs. Holmes had hired three men to come on him from different points and kill him. Gallagher seeing that nothing was to be gained by browbeating, desisted, making up his mind that the boy was like any other boy and his story only worthy of attention so far as what he had stuck to was concerned.

But the story had its effect on him. He never entered a wood that he did not hold a cocked revolver in each hand and peer ahead of him, darting his eyes in every direction. Presently when they were approaching a sharp turn in the road the boy said:

"I reckon if I were you I'd git out and make this turn through those saplin's."

"Why?"

"Well, it's a mighty good place for any one to make an ambush."

A hidden enemy even in imagination is more apt to affect one than an open enemy in the flesh. Gallagher knew he was giving way without due cause, but he had been so reckless in his killings that he had begun to fear retaliation and was ready to see an enemy behind every bush. Pulling up and handing the reins to the boy, he alighted, telling him to drive on. He had walked a few yards in advance of the wagon when he heard an ominious click behind him and a boyish voice say:

"Hands up!"

He turned to see a wonderful change in his companion. He had dropped the reins, and in each hand resting on the dashboard, behind which he crouched, he held a revolver. It did not occur to the man to obey such an order from a boy. He was simply looking in wonder.

"Hands up!" was repeated in a shrill tone, and at the same time a bullet sang within an inch of his ear. There was something in the "plug" that moved the hands up mechanically, as the limbs of a jumping jack are moved by pulling a string.

"Do you know who I am?" asked the boy.

"No."

"I'm Betsy Holmes—Bert Holmes' widow."

Gallagher had looked into eyes behind weapons before, but never had he seen death more surely depicted than now. The chances were against him, but he must take them. He had a chance to get off with a wound, and before a second shot could be fired, or at least a third, he might raise his weapon and get in a shot. But his enemy saw his design in his eye. Her revolver cracked, and Gallagher staggered. He stood long enough to fire one shot; but, being wounded to death, it went wild. A second shot from the woman pierced his brain, and he fell.

A wagon turning the bend in the road came suddenly upon a man lying dead there, a horse nibbling grass beside it and what was supposed to be a boy lying in a faint in the bottom of a wagon.

The murder of Bert Holmes was avenged.

HOLLAND IS MOIST ENOUGH.

And Germany Wants the River Rhine All to Herself.

That their great river should at last dribble to the sea through a number of mouths in foreign territory has long been a cause of sentimental regret to the German people. A society has now been formed at Coblentz to correct this mistake of nature.

Professor Hans Buzz of Munster has just published a book to help on the objects of the new society. He urges that the Rhine, instead of flowing, as it does, northwest through the Netherlands, ought to flow from Duisburg, in Rhenish Prussia, northwest of Emden, the most westerly port of the German empire. The distance would be about 150 miles, and no locks would be needed.

The professor wants a canal of first rate proportions, comparable to those of Suez or Panama, and seeks to show that such a waterway would capture the traffic which now goes to Rotterdam and the Maas and that in a few years Emden would become a world port. Professor Buzz estimates that the "New Rhine" would cost $187,500,000.

A year ago the Prussian minister of public works announced that the government regarded the project favorably and had it under consideration. The new society starts under favorable auspices.—Boston Transcript.

Poison Ivy.

After exposure to poison ivy the best preventive measure is to take a bath immediately, which will partly and possibly entirely remove the irritating substance. Use a flesh brush, plenty of soap and water and rinse with clear water. After drying carefully rub with alcohol.

Developing Australia.

The northern portion of Australia is being developed as a result of the progressive policy of the Australian Government. The Government has made arrangements for leasing large areas of land there for pastoral purposes. It is announced that 55,000 square miles of Crown lands are available, and may be taken up in the near future under grazing licenses. Three special areas are mentioned in this connection—the first in the vicinity of the Roper River, where 30,000 square miles of territory is open for lease; the second lies between the overland telegraph line, the Victoria River Downs, and Wave Hill Station, extending over 10,000 square miles, and the third is situated between the overland telegraph line and the Queensland border, embracing the Barkly Tableland, in the aggregate making up 15,000 square miles. The policy of making available free farms in the Northern Territory and of granting advances to settlers, both financially and in the way of plant, has directed attention to the empty spaces in the North. The farms offered in the Daily River and Stapleton districts had been applied for over and over again, and those lucky enough to secure blocks are now on their way to take possession.

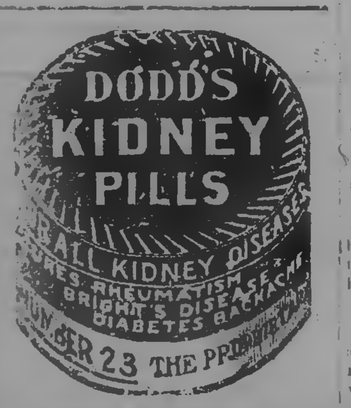
NEW SCHEME TO DECIDE THE WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP

Title Would be Awarded to Club Having Highest Percentage in It's Own and Inter-State Series

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—There is now some probability that this year's championship series may be the last for some time. There is some agitation for the abandonment of the world's championship series as played and a substituting therefore of the past season schedule in which all the [illegible] clubs of the two leagues [illegible]. August Herrmann is said to have proposed that the regular season be reduced to 112 games to be followed by an inter-league series of four games at home and four abroad, the world's championship to be awarded to the club having the highest gross percentage in its own league series and the inter-league series.



SPORTING GOSSIP

With Rugby in full blast everyone has been anxiously waiting during the past month to see how old the season would be before some player was killed. Yesterday came the news from Cambridge, Mass., that Vernon Belyea, half-back of the Norwich University Football team, died as a result of a broken back received in the Norwich—Holy Cross game on September 25th.

Jack Lagere, the hard-hitting first baseman of the M.A.P. team, leaves to-day for Cleveland, Ohio, where he has accepted a lucrative position.

WHITBY WILL HAVE REAL RINK

Ice Surface 75x180 Feet for Coming Winter

WHITBY, Oct. 3.—Whitby has become such an enthusiastic hockey town within the last few years that the announcement that a big arena will be ready for the coming winter season will be hailed with much approval. During the five years that Whitby teams have made such strong bids for the championship, invariably the greatest factor contributing to their defeat in the O.H.A. semi-finals has been lack of practice on a large ice surface. The minimum O.H.A. ice area for new rinks is 60 x 160 feet, while the area of Whitby's rink has been 49 x 145.

The ice surface for the new building will be 75 x 180 feet.

DETROIT, Oct. 3.—Pitcher Ed. Reifer, secured from the Ottawa Club of the Canadian League, has been farmed out by the Tigers to the Nashville Southern League Club (Class A.) Hughie Jennings thinks he still needs more seasoning. Reifer made two starts since joining Detroit, but didn't show up any too well.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Walter Johnson has turned down a theatrical engagement which would have netted him $15,000 in ten weeks. He was made a proposition yesterday by the agent of a booking firm to do a monologue turn on a vaudeville circuit at $1,500 per week and a ten-week contract. Johnson did not as much as give the matter consideration, but turned it down flat, much to the surprise of the agent, who argued that it was easy money.

HORSFIELD HAD HIGHEST MARK IN POLE VAULT

The pole vaulting contest in connection with the Field Day Sports of the P.C.I., held last night, resulted in Horsfield winning the senior event with a vault of 6 feet 10 inches. O'Brien was second with 6 feet 8 inches and Carruthers third with 6 feet 3 inches.

There were no entries in the junior pole vault.

HOW TO DO IT.

If you want to keep a woman bright and smiling for a day
It isn't very difficult to do.
For instance, if together you are strolling down the way
And another portly lady passes you,
When she whispers, "Dearie, tell me, now am I as fat as that?"
All you have to do is promptly answer, "No!"
And with happiness her little heart will start to pitapat,
And a look of real contentment she will show.

If perchance a woman passes who is somewhat out of date,
If her shirt waist slightly sags above her waist,
If she looks as though she hadn't put her bonnet on just straight
And her costume shows decided lack of taste,
If your wife says: "Tell me, dearie, do I ever look like that?
Have I ever in my life been such a fright?"
"I should say not!" without a look you should answer off the bat,
And whatever happens after is all right.

If with wifie you are strolling and a stunning girl appears
In a slit skirt showing most expensive hose,
With a set of golf ball pendants gayly dangling from her ears
And a hat with all the latest furbelows,
When she asks you: "Dearie, do you think she looks as swell as I?
If I looked like that would you still care for me?"
"No," is all you need to answer, even though you have to lie,
And a very happy woman she will be.

Fixing the Blame.

Lived Too Long.

Pittsfield, in the Berkshire hills, had in the old days, like many another New England town, a number of men and women who were called "characters." One of these was Bill Brown, a man unfortunately addicted to drink and frequently intoxicated for days at a time. On one occasion he went into the shop of the local hatter, Mr. Smith and asked for the best beaver he had. Mr. Smith produced the desired article, saying as he took the money:

"That beaver will last a man a life time."

Bill went proudly down the main street with his fine beaver on his head and immediately celebrated the event with a protracted debauch.

When he recovered he returned to the shop with a most disreputable hat.

"Look here; I thought you said this here beaver would last me a lifetime."

"So it would," growled Mr. Smith, "if you had died when you ought to."

THE WEED IN ENGLAND

Growing of Tobacco a Steadily Expanding Industry.

I have just had the pleasure writes "Home Counties" in the World's Work, of paying a visit to the largest tobacco grower in England this year Mr. A. J. Brandon, of Redfields, in Hampshire, the Chairman of the Tobacco Growers' Society, and the landowner on whose premises is being built the rehandling station to which the English crops will be going. Mr. Brandon grew fifteen acres of tobacco last year and thirty this year.

When I was at Redfields the tobacco has just been planted out in one of the fields, and if it had not a velvety leaf, was not unlike cabbage. It looked as if it were going to die, but that is a way it has. A close inspection showed that the hearts were fresh and strong. At certain distances across the field the rows of tobacco were interrupted for a strip of hemp. The hemp will grow high and make a shelter for the tobacco. But most of the crop was still in frames. The seed was raised on these frames in soil which had been sterilized, and lying upon about a foot of manure bought cheaply at Aldershot camp. Mr. Brandon had about 300,000 plants to set out in all, but he is sending 30,000 to Norfolk and other counties.

The seed was sown in March. The next operation is to set out the seedlings. Later on these are planted out in the fields. It is quite possible that the ordinary farmer who takes up tobacco growing may be glad to buy his seedlings, as without experience he could hardly raise them properly. The tobacco plant is, however, by no means so delicate as is popularly supposed. The slightest touch of frost makes an end of French beans; tobacco will stand five degrees of frost if properly hardened. The harvest is in August and September. The leaves are carefully taken into sheds. There they undergo air curing, though as a matter of fact fires are lighted below the leaves. At first the fire insurance people did not like the risk, but at length they found that the drying operation looked more risky than it really was. Even with the help of fires, all the moisture is not got out of the stalks and midribs of the leaves. Therefore hot air drying in a special shed has to be resorted to as a final process. This shed is well piped for hot water and the leaves are in 125 degrees of heat for four days. The time spent in the field sheds is about two months.

When the tobacco comes out of the hot drying house it is brittle, and has to have about three minutes in a kind of Turkish bath, an experience which makes it more amenable to handling. The leaves are laid into hogsheads by men wearing slippers, and in due course the hogsheads are placed under a heavy press, which quickly squeezes out of sight the four or five-feet pile of leaves showing above the top of the hogshead.

The duty on tobacco is 85 cents per pound if there is more than 10 per cent. of moisture and 90 cents if there is less, and has to be paid before the tobacco leaf is sent away unless it is going into bond. Mr. Brandon has a little bill of $15,000 to pay the Excise. Mr. Brandon's tobacco is following oats and other crops. He has used twenty loads of dung for the acre, and two hundredweight of potash, three of s[illegible] two and a half of guano, and fo[illegible] bone meal; manuring has cost him £50 per acre.

The men at Redfields smoke a good deal of the tobacco they have helped to grow for Mr. Brandon, but it is the tobacco out of the hogsheads upon which duty has been paid, and of course by arrangement with the firms with which Mr. Brandon is dealing. The Redfields men like the local tobacco though, perhaps, they may be predisposed in its favor to some degree not only local patriotism but by the cheapness of the supply.

Legend About Names.

There is a charming legend about the name Margaret, and all its variations, from Meg to Daisy, share it. Margaret is of Persian origin, and means child of light or pearl. The Persian legend says that oysters are moon worshipers and that each night they come up from the bed of the deep sea to open their shells and worship their diety.

Each faithful oyster that opens its shell in worship is rewarded for its belief, for the moon deposits in it a drop of dew—translucent, shimmering in light, and showing wondrous colors—which the moonbeams turn into a pearl. Murwari is the old Persian name, and through the Greek adaptation, Margarites, it developed into the name it is today.

Made Panel Machine.

A pioneer in cabinet factories, Mr. John Pollock, is dead at Beith (Ayr.) He was the inventor of several machines used in cabinet and chair construction to-day. Amongst them are the first machines to carve wood panels from an iron casting. This machine carved as many as ten panels at a time, and is still in use in several factories. Mr. Pollock was one of the best known in the West of Scotland.

A MUSICAL EVENING AT THE CONSERVATORY

A Sweet Contralto and a Clever Pianist—New Teachers Display Their Talent

At the Conservatory of Music last evening a Musicale was given by Miss Aileen Sullivan, A.T.C.M., piano, (pupil of Dr. Torrington), and and Miss Winnifred M. Fick, A. A. C. M., vocal.

These ladies are both new teachers on the Conservatory staff and this was their first public appearance in Peterborough in this capacity.

Miss Sullivan is a wonderful executant upon the piano. Among the selections were: "Prelude and Fugue" in B-flat major, Bach; "Deux Polonaise," Chopin; "Concerto" in G minor, Mendelssohn. These gave Miss Sullivan ample scope to display her technical accomplishment. Her nimble fingers flew over the notes like magic and her contributions were greatly enjoyed by the audience.

Miss Winnifred Fick sang some very pretty songs: "A Cycle of Life," Ronald, "Mon Coeur S'ouvre a Ta Voix," (Samson et Delila): "I Hear You Calling Me," "Good-bye Summer," were sung with the true artist touch.

Miss Fick has a sweet, rich contralto voice and sings beautifully in the minor keys. She lingers upon the notes with a tenderness that reminds one of Milton line—

"Linked sweetness long drawn out."

If she can transmit some of her art to her pupils at the Conservatory that institution ought to turn out some talent under her tutelage.

Miss Jean Hall assisted Miss Sullivan at the piano and joined her in pianoforte duet which was very effective.

Miss Pearl McKee accompanied Miss Fick very acceptably. There was a good audience, but it was composed chiefly of ladies. Are there no musical men in Peterborough? If there are they are not living up to their privileges.

FELLOWSHIP WITH GOD GIVES THE BEST IN LIFE

It is Only When We Are Transformed in the Image of the Master That All is Well—Rev. Jas. E. Elliott at All Saints

"Let us remember that life and all it's best possessions come from God. It's development is found in fellowship with Him, and it is only when we are transformed into the image of the Master that all is well. Everything shall live whither the river cometh."

The above is a passage from the splendid sermon delivered last night at All Saint's Anglican Church, by Rev. Jas. A. Elliott, M. A. He dwelt on the River of Truth and Life, as referred to in the 47th chapter of Ezekiel.

After elucidating some points as to the relationship between God and man and the effect of this relationship on man, the preacher referred to the season of thanksgiving.

While man might plough the fields and plant the seed, he alone could not produce. The rain and the sun, were beyond us. Therefore because of the abundant harvest we should give thanks.

Over our country the river of plenty had flown, but man did not live by bread alone. The best of life depended on the fellowship with God.

The congregation entered heartily into the spirit of the occasion and the service, to which added interest was given by the visit of Rev. Mr Elliott and also the special music by the choir, was enjoyed by all. The rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb was assisted by Rev. F. J. Sawers, of St. Luke's.

Y.M.C.A. HAS MEMBERSHIP OF OVER SIX HUNDRED

Officers Elected for Leader Corps for the Employed Boys' Bert Hamilton President

It may not be generally known that for some time past the membership of the Young Men's Christian Association has been steadily increasing and the paid membership is now over six hundred.

This is very encouraging, and when it can be further stated that between fifty and sixty working boys congregate at the institution almost every night of the week, the worth of the present staff of officers will at once be recognized.

In September the statistics on the attendance in the gymnasium were the highest of a number of years.

Last night the Employed Boys' Leader Corps was organized, with the following officers:

Hon. Pres.—J. J. Thompson.

President—Bert—Bert Hamilton.

Vice-President—Geo. Helson.

Sec.-Treas.—Lang Thompson.

The boys were entertained at the home of the physical director, when they enjoyed a social evening.

THE PAVING SITUATION

As Explained by Mr. J. Gleeson of the Contracting Company

Mr. J. Gleeson, of the Foley & Gleeson Co., paving contractors is in the city to-day and to the Review he said the work of placing the asphalt on Hunter street would be started one week from next Monday and that it would be completed in about four days.

Asked as to whether the company start operations on George street this season, Mr. Gleeson stated that if the council were so satisfied to have the work started immediately, the Company would do so.

One advantage to be gained by leaving over the work on George street till next spring was that the street car service would not be interrupted and also there would not be a blockade on any section of the street for any great length of time.

With a continuation of work now, the street car service would be cut in two and should bad weather set in the paving work could not be continued. Hence the service would remain interrupted and the street torn up.

On the other hand if the work were left over till next spring, the car tracks could be placed at one side, and used while the other side of the street was being paved and the new tracks laid. This would not interfere with the car service.

Mr. Gleeson is taking up the question with the City Engineer this afternoon.

Chamois leather should be washed in tepid water and plenty of soap. If dried with the soap left in it, it will be nice and soft.

"Made In Britain" Train.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At Belfast, the Canadian Associated Press learns, the idea of running the "Made in Ireland" train through Canada, to bring Irish manufacturers before the notice of the Dominion has been abandoned in favor of an exhibition train embracing manufacturers from every part of the United Kingdom.

The scheme has been received favorably by manufacturers' association here and Canadian Boards of Trade have already extended a hearty welcome. Addresses will shortly be delivered in the industrial districts setting forth the scheme fully.

He Covets Vesuvius.

Mulai Hafid, sultan of Morocco, recently visited Naples. "I have read a great deal about Vesuvius," he said. "Sometimes in Morocco I envied the Italians the possession of this great natural oven. My brother envied it still more during his troublous reign. If my ancestors had owned Vesuvius we would have more peace now in Morocco, where rebellion has become a hereditary crime. I wonder why Nero never thought of using it for his own purposes? He must have been a very ignorant tyrant and certainly showed very little real enterprise."

LITERARY TREASURES

The Magna Charta Was Rescued From a Tailor's Shears.

Hidden away in national museums and libraries, and zealously guarded, are a number of priceless manuscripts and books which, but for a fortunate chance, might have been lost to the world. The chief treasure of a museum at St Peterburg is the oldest known Greek manuscript of the New Testament which was about to be burnt by the monks of a Syrian monastery when by a lucky chance, one of the priests, struck with the antiquity of the manuscript, interfered in time to save what had been thought to be valueless.

The incident reminds one that the Magna Charta which is carefully guarded in a glass case in the British Museum, was saved from destruction by Sir Robert Cotton, who, so the story goes, one day had entered his tailor's shop precisely at the moment when the knight of the scissors was about to cut up for patterns the ancient looking document with its many imposing seals attached. Although Sir Robert did not at first recognize the value of the document, he judged it was something of historic interest, and purchased it from the tailor for a few shillings. After passing through the hands of various generations of his family it at last found a resting place in the British Museum.

An interesting story, too, is attached to a valuable Greek manuscript which came to the Bishop of Uganto in a startling way. It was wrapped round a fish and brought in to the Bishop's presence. By the merest chance he examined it, and found it to be part of a treatise thought for many centuries to be lost. The worthy Bishop hastened to the stall of the salesman in the market where the fish had been bought just in time to save the remaining pages of this literary treasure.

One of the most highly prized manuscripts of recent times, that of "In Memoriam," was rescued just in time from a cupboard in a house where Tennyson had lived for some time as a bachelor. As matter of fact it was to the poet himself that the recovery was due, for he remembered that the book wherein he had transcribed the original draft had been hastily thrown into the cupboard where he had been accustomed to keep pickles and jams. When the friends sent by the poet to recover the manuscript arrived on the scene the contents of the cupboard had been removed by the landlady, who was just then engaged in her task of house cleaning, and who tartly advised her visitors that they had come none too soon, in so much as she would that day have burnt all the "trash she had found.

Among other valuable manuscripts discovered by chance might be mentioned the famous journal of his Italian travels written by Montaigne, now looked upon as one of the greatest of French literary treasures; while Milton's Commonplace Book wherein were entered the rough notes and plans of his poems, which for over two hundred years was lost, finally turned up in the garret of a neglected house in London.

DEMOCRATS' FAMOUS MEASURE IS MADE LAW

CUSTOMS COLLECTORS NOTIFIED

PRESIDENT WILSON
Who signed the Tariff Bill last night

New Schedule is Now in Force—Bill Was Signed With Gold Pens.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4—Surrounded by the leaders of a united democracy, President Wilson signed the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill at 9.09 o'clock last night at the White House. Simultaneously telegrams were sent to customs collectors throughout the country by the Treasury Department, putting into actual operation the first Democratic tariff revision since 1894.

A happy group of legislators, members of the Cabinet and friends, encircled the President as he smilingly sat down, slowly affixed his signature with two gold pens. He presented to Representative Underwood the pen that had written the word "Woodrow" and the one which had completed his name to Senator Simmons both of whom bowed their appreciation.

In impressive silence, the President rose and delivered in easy, natural tones an extemporaneous speech that brought prolonged applause.

The President declared that the journey of legislative accomplishment had only been partly completed; that a great service had been done for the rank and file of the country, but a second step in the emancipation of business was currency reform. He earnestly called upon his colleagues to go the "rest of the journey" with fresh impulse.

"Gentlemen, I feel a very peculiar pleasure," said the President, "in what I have just done by way of taking part in the completion of a great piece of business. It is a pleasure which is very hard to express in words which are adequate to express the feeling; because the feeling I have is that we have done the rank and file of the people of this country a great service. It is hard to speak of these things without seeming to go off into campaign eloquence, but that is not my feeling. It is one of profound gratitude that, working with the splendid men who have carried this thing through, with studious attention and doing justice all around, I should have had part in serving the people of this country as we have been striving to serve them ever since I can remember.

"I have had the accomplishment of something like this at heart ever since I was a boy and I know men now standing around me who can say the same thing—who have been waiting to see the things done which it was necessary to do in order that there might be justice. And so at this moment that brings such a business to a conclusion, and I hope I will not be thought to be demanding too much of myself or of my colleagues when I say that this, great as it is, is the accomplishment of only half the journey. We have set the business of this country free from those conditions which have made monopoly not only possible, but in a sense easy and natural. But there is no use taking away the conditions of monopoly, if we do not take away also the power to create monopoly; and that is a financial rather than a merely circumstantial and economic power.

"Although I feel to-night like a man who is lodging happily in the inn which lies half way along the journey, and that in the morning, with a fresh impulse we shall go the rest of the journey and sleep at the journey's end like men with a quiet conscience, knowing that we have served our fellow men and have thereby tried to serve God."

SAVED

Imprisoned Miner Rescued After Eight Days

Canadian Press Despatch.

CENTRALIA, PA., Oct. 4.—Thomas Toshesky, the miner, was rescued from the Continental mine at 7.25 this morning after being entombed eight days.

The work of rescue is said by the engineers in charge to establish a record for the Pennsylvania anthracite region. For five days the imprisoned man was without food. During that time he allayed the pangs of hunger with tobacco, as he told the rescuers after communication was established with him. Tuesday night a tube was forced through the barrier from an adjoining chamber, and a small quantity of liquid food was sent down to him. Later came a change of clothing, blankets and rope, from which he wove a hammock in which to sleep. Up to that time Toshesky had complained most of the cold and water on the floor of his cell, which made it impossible for him to lie down. His nerve has been splendid all through the ordeal, men working to dig him out say, and several times he has exchanged jokes with them.

"Tell my wife that I'll eat dinner with her Saturday, sure," was the cheery message sent up through the tube. "I'm feeling fine to-day, much better than I have since the mine caved in on me. I feel mighty strong and I know I can help you boys get me out by digging me from this end. If I only had some meat I could work twice as fast."

GREATER TORONTO

TORONTO, Oct. 4.—City Surveyor Tracy LeMay has just completed the work of surveying some eighty miles of diagonal roads which it is proposed to construct as the city develops.

Mr. LeMay has been quietly working on the scheme for the last eighteen months, and his plans, which have been prepared at a cost of over $8,000, will be submitted to the Board of Control next Thursday or Friday, and passed on to the City Council at its next meeting. If endorsed, they will then be filed with the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board.

Starting near the outskirts of the old city limits, the roads will shoot out into the townships of York, Scarboro and Etobicoke in all directions.

The work now completed is really only the skeleton part of a gigantic scheme. It is proposed in the near future to get down to details and plan for the development of Greater Toronto along modern lines.

ALBANIANS RETIRE

Tribesmen Fall Back Before Trained Servian Troops.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—"The Albanians are falling back along the line," says The Daily Telegraph's Belgrade correspondent. "After desperate fighting the Servian troops have entered Struga, six miles from Ochrida, having cleared that territory and scattered the Albanians, who evidently are at a loss how to escape, their retreat over the River Drin being cut. The damage done by the Albanians is enormous.

"Believing that the Servian abandonment of Yyumukala heralded a general retreat, the Albanians attacked vigorously in front of Prisrend, only to be decimated by the Servian fire, which was reserved until the enemy was within 500 yards of their trenches. Panic-stricken, the Albanians retreated to the four winds.

"Belgrade is confident the rebellion is over, but the Albanians probably will follow the tactics they adopted under Turkish rule, and attack again as soon as they recuperate their forces in the mountains."

PRAISE FOR WILSON

London Paper Likens Him to Abraham Lincoln.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The English newspapers devote much space to-day to the passing by the United States Congress of the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill. The Glasgow Herald prints a supplement to its edition containing the bill in full.

The news of the signing of the bill by President Wilson reached London too late for the editorial writers to discuss the measure to any great extent. The Chronicle, however, says:

"The President has fought for and won a policy of genuine fiscal reform. It marks an epoch in the economic and political history of the United States. The nation, boldly asserting its mastery over the unclean interests that were nearly throttling the country has made an irreparable breach in the monstrous tariff wall which they had reared. For President Wilson the passage of the new tariff is a great personal triumph. No more remarkable man has reigned in the White House since Abraham Lincoln."

"The most striking fact about the new American tariff," says The Daily Graphic, "is the extraordinary personal triumph it constitutes for President Wilson. Not an experienced politician — he was a university professor, unfamiliar with the wiles of Washington—yet he succeeded where Roosevelt and Taft failed. The secret of his success was his own singlemindedness of purpose.

"It would be inaccurate to describe the new tariff as free trade in the sense that that term is understood by the Englishman and the Dutchman. It's passage must be recognized as a crushing defeat to high protection and the inauguration of an era of freer trade between the United States and the rest of the world."

AN IDEAL SCHOOL

Dr. Spankie Describes a Bilingual Experiment in Frontenac.

KINGSTON, Oct. 4.—In an address before the Frontenac Teachers' Association, Dr. William Spankie, ex-inspector of schools for Frontenac County, declared that the school curriculum was overcrowded and that it tended to discourage children and dwarf their brains. He had made special efforts in a school on Garden Island, and he stated that others might learn wisdom from it. This school for twenty-five years had pupils attending it who could not speak nor understand English, and the parents were the same. Yet English was the only language. The school children learned English at school and at home continued their French and there never was a shadow of complaint. The school had always taken a high place among schools in the province, its graduates being among the best, holding important positions all over the country.

BARTENDER MAY DIE

Refused to Serve Man With Drink and Was Shot.

ARREST IS MADE

Thomas Reilley Caught as He Was Boarding Freight.

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Thomas Reilly, a Grand Trunk brakeman, who probably mortally wounded George Blackburn, a bartender at Hotel Cecil last night, was caught by local detectives while attempting to board a westbound freight. In Police Court he was remanded for a week. Blackburn is very low.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 4.—George Blackburn, a bartender at the Hotel Cecil, was last night shot and fatally wounded by a man thought to be Thomas Riley, a trainman who came here a few months ago from Fort Scott, Kansas.

Riley had been drinking, and in the afternoon had some words with Blackburn. Last evening he again entered the hotel bar-room, and on orders from the proprietor Blackburn refused him liquor. Some words followed, and Riley, pulling a revolver of large calibre, fired on Blackburn. The bullet entered the right side, and an x-ray examination showed that the bowels were perforated. The bullet was found to have lodged in the fleshy part of the back near the spine.

Riley escaped, and it is believed he caught a freight train bound for Sarnia. Points between here and Sarnia have been advised to be on the lookout for the would be slayer.

Blackburn, who is a son of Capt. Blackburn of the Allan liner "Tunisian," is 35 years of age, and has a wife and one son. He is a man of good reputation, and Mr. Oke, owner of the Hotel Cecil, conducts an orderly house.

With Blackburn at the time of the shooting was the other bartender, William Burris, and a number of men were in the room, so that when the assailant is caught it will be possible to have him identified. As soon as he had pressed his revolver against Blackburn's body and discharged the bullet he ran away quickly to the Grand Trunk Railway yards close by. The suspect is said to have come to Ontario from Kansas, where he had a reputation as a bad man. The stock train was searched at Strathroy, but no arrest has yet been made. The police are acting on the theory that he left the train and doubled on his tracks, as all trains are being searched before leaving the city. Riley has little chance of getting far away, especially as the police were informed that a man answering Riley's description had been seen in the East London yards.

Australia Will Welcome Cruisers.

Elaborate arrangement have been made for an enthusiastic welcome on which the authorities are in agreement, recognizing the present as the most important national celebration since federation.

Appeal To Railway Board.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 4.—The London Board of Trade, at a meeting last night discussed the increasing of cartage rates and the threats of the railway companies to discontinue the present cartage service. A committee composed of Mr. Philip Pocock and John Dillon was named to take the matter up with the Dominion Railway Commission, and to endeavor to compel the railway companies to provide adequate terminal facilities.

STRIKERS COMPLAIN

Keir Hardie Gets a Cable From Nanaimo Concerning Jailed Miners.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Keir Hardie, the well-known Socialist and member of Parliament, has received the following cablegram from Nanaimo, B.C.:

"Two hundred miners under arrest here under a charge of unlawful assembly, and others charged in connection with the strike of coal miners, have been denied bail, and have been held in prison for six weeks without trial.

"The food furnished the prisoners is insufficient, and of a very bad quality, and is causing much sickness. The authorities refused permission to friends to furnish food to the imprisoned men. The right of peaceful picketing is also denied. Please give this publicity."

Keir Hardie informs the Canadian Press that he has asked the Colonial Office to hold a special inquiry.

Marries His Affinity.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Oct. 4.—Allinson MacFarlane, who two years ago was acquitted of a charge of wife murder in Newark, N.J., was married here Wednesday by a justice of the peace to Florence Bromley. During MacFarlane's trial the prosecution tried to establish his infatuation for Miss Bromley as a motive for the murder. Subsequent to his acquittal, MacFarlane was convicted of counterfeiting and sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment, but he never served the term.

C. P. R. Leaves Pool.

MONTREAL, Oct. 4.—G. M. Bosworth, vice-president of the C. P. R. Co., has announced that the company will withdraw its steamship services from the Atlantic pool, now breaking up.

He states that the C. P. R.'s sailings from Trieste, Austria, promise a large increase in business.

Spain Finds War Costly.

MADRID, Oct. 4. The national debt has increased by about $30,000,000, largely due to the campaign in Morocco. Public sentiment is against the war and a farmers' meeting in Zaragoza asked the Government to abandon it and endeavor to save the country from approaching bankruptcy.

PREVENTED A PANIC

Deutsch Bank Interviewed to Save the "Prince's Trust."

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—In a remarkable statement issued by the Deutsch Bank yesterday it is declared that only vigorous intervention of the affairs of the "Prince's Trust" saved the trust itself from ruin and the German financial and industrial world in general from grave catastrophe. The trust is described as having ventured in the most reckless transactions. The losses in one direction alone exceeded the entire capital and reserve. One of the subsidiary companies of the trust engaged in a number of undertakings without an adequate amount of ready funds with which to finance them.

The financial press remarks that the revelations of the Deutsch Bank expose a state of demoralization which exceeds even the most extravagant fears.

MAN SPENT 50 YEARS IN PRISON FOR FATHER'S CRIME

Since the Death of His Parent Several Years Ago, Charles Gilbert of New Britain, Had Said Father Slew Officer in 1864,

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 4.—After fifty years in the state prison, Charles Gilbert of New Britain died in that institution last Tuesday, protesting that he was innocent, that his father was guilty of the murder of Henry Caldwell, recruiting officer and civil war bounty agent, in 1864.

Charles had never made this assertion about his father until that man died several years ago. Since then he persisted steadily in it.

He was not believed, but startling confirmation came yesterday from the clergyman who attended the elder Gilbert on his deathbed. This clergyman said Gilbert had made a dying confession. Though it was placed before the State Board of Pardons, the clergyman added, the younger Gilbert was not released, because the necessary unanimous vote of the board was not obtained.

Warden Ward A. Garner last night explained why Gilbert's body was not claimed by his daughters or relatives, but was permitted to go to the dissecting rooms at the Yale medical school. Gilbert had asked that his brain be examined after his death by scientists, in the belief that the investigation would corroborate his claim of innocence by revealing that such a brain as his could not have conceived or executed the Caldwell murder.

"If I had committed that murder," he argued with the warden, "the action would be stamped on my brain."

Rev. George A. Lester, formerly pastor of the Chesterfield Baptist Church, said last night that John Gilbert, the convict's father, confessed to another son the day before he died that he was the murderer. The son informed Rev. Mr. Lester, who thereupon interceded with members of the Board of Pardons and with members of the Legislature.

"But I don't understand that some members of the board stood out against the petition for pardon because they wanted witnesses of the confession," said the clergyman. "I feel sure that another brother, who later committed suicide, was implicated with the father in the murder."

ATTEMPTED TO DEFRAUD

Couple Are Charged With Conspiracy, Arson and Grave Robbery.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4. — Charged with conspiracy, arson and the robbery of a grave, Arthur S. Hughes, a ranch owner of Forsyth, Mont., was arrested here yesterday afternoon at the request of Sheriff Mosen of Rosebud County, Montana.

Hughes is charged with having entered into a conspiracy with his wife and a man named Elliott, both of whom the police assert, are under arrest in Montana, to collect from the Montana Life Insurance Co. $8,000 insurance on his life.

According to the complaint, one Craig was killed in Forsyth about two and a half months ago by a railroad train. Hughes, it is alleged, took Craig's body from the grave where it lay, carted it to his home, placed it in a bed chamber, and then set the house on fire. The body, burned to a crisp and unrecognizable, was found in the embers and Mrs. Hughes went into mourning for her husband. Hughes, the complaint continues, disappeared. A few days later Mrs. Hughes married Elliott and put in a claim for the $8,000 insurance on Hughes' life.

Sheriff Mosen believed that the body found in the ruins was that of Hughes, and soon afterward arrested them both while he investigated the supposed death of Hughes.

Mosen and the insurance officials learned that Hughes had come to New York and was in communication with his supposed widow. They notified the New York police and detectives were sent out to find him. After searching for weeks they traced him to cheap lodgings on the east side and found that he was working as a 'longshoreman. Yesterday they arrested him at the entrance to the Brooklyn bridge.

The Montana authorities investigating the death of the supposed Hughes, according to advices received at police headquarters here, caused the body found in the ruins to be exhumed and measured. Then they discovered the robbery of Craig's grave and through measurements of the body learned that it was Craig's and not Hughes'.

JAS. R. BOOTH BADLY HURT

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—J. R. Booth, the millionaire lumberman, was rushed to St. Luke's Hospital at 2.30 yesterday afternoon, suffering from bad contusions about the head and body, and it is reported both his legs are fractured.

He was superintending the removal of the ruins of the old timber mill recently damaged by fire, when a heavy beam became loosened and fell, striking him across the head and chest, and inflicting, it is feared, internal injuries.

Mr. Booth is in his 88th years.

Burglar Given Fourteen Years.

DUNNVILLE, Oct. 4.—Benson Abrams of Napanee, was sentenced to fourteen years in Kingston by Police Magistrate Brown Thursday evening.

Abrams broke into the hardware store of T. G. Scott, stole knives, revolvers and other articles, but by accident cut his hand badly, which circumstance led to his arrest, as the theft was discovered shortly afterwards, and the blood marks showed plainly what had occurred. At the trial he pleaded guilty.

Notwithstanding that Abrams is only 33 years old, he has spent most of the past ten years in various prisons and only recently escaped from the Guelph prison farm.

London Sells Debentures.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 4.—Wood, Gundy & Co.'s tender for the balance of the $764,500 issue of debentures of last year, amounting to $338,000 on the basis of 5 per cent. interest, was accepted by the finance committee of the City Council yesterday.

ARE NOT AT LOGGERHEADS

Stories of Sulzer's Quarrel With His Lawyers Denounced as Untrue.

ALBANY, Oct. 4.—Rumors that Governor Sulzer and his counsel were at the parting of the ways, were denied emphatically last night by D. Cad. Herrick, chief of staff. Herrick broke his "silence" only after a story had gone broadcast that several of the attorneys would withdraw from the case next Monday.

"There is not a word of truth in the stories," Herrick said. "The governor may be having trouble with other attorneys with whom he is reported to have consulted, but not with those who have appeared in court for him. We will be on hand Monday, and, so far as I know, every other day until the trial ends."

To Publish Air Charts.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 4.—The [illegible] national committees charged [illegible] International Aeronautical [illegible] tion with the preparation of air charts met here yesterday under the presidency of Prince Roland Bonaparte. The committee found that except in Belgium and France, where excellent maps of the air had been prepared, little or nothing had been done in this direction during the past year by other countries, owing to lack of support by their Governments. A resolution was passed, inviting these Governments to take upon themselves the task of publishing air charts in the same manner as they do land maps.

Commission To Inquire.

CALGARY, Oct. 4.—A deputation of labor men called on Hon. Mr. Doherty, Minister of Justice, and submitted that certain acts of the military and magistrates in connection with the Nanaimo miners' strike were without reason, and asking for the appointment of a commission to investigate.

The Minister said he would use his utmost efforts to comply.

Still Named "Sir Wilfrid."

HAMILTON, Oct. 4.—Although it is reported from Ottawa that the Government dredge—officially for three years known as "P. W. D., No. 7"—was previously known as the "Quebec," and not the "Sir Wilfrid," as originally christened, the latter name still adorns it. The dredge is now removing sand from the harbor here.

FUTURIST MUSIC

Composer Pratella Will Employ an Original Array of Noise Makers.

PARIS, Oct. 4.—The Futurist Poet Marinetti announces the organization of a new style of orchestra producing various kinds of noises for the purpose of interpreting futuristic music by the futurist composer, Pratella. Fifteen new types of instruments have been invented which produce crashes, roars, whistles, screams, shrieks, thunderings, rappings and smashings with a result pronounced by Marinetti to have an entirely new "accoustic voluptuousness of effect."

A sample program may be given as typical of the new musical art. It consists of four pieces, "Dawn in the Capital" (meaning Rome), "Rendezvous of Automobiles and Aeroplanes," "Dinner on the Terrace of the Casino" and "Skirmish in an Oasis."

For later production the composer is now working on tone poem on locomotives in a railway yard. He is also engaged on several tone poems descriptive of compressed air riveters working on New York skyscrapers. This last effect is admired by the composer as among the grandest of earth's noises, though he confesses that he has never been in New York and has never heard riveters as they rivet at 7 a.m.

But others of futurist musical tastes have told him all about them, and he understands they produce a noise so sublime as to be even superior to that made by a Dreadnought firing 13-inch guns at target practice on the open seas.

UNION LABEL

CHURCH-GOING AND UNITY

Why don't people go to church? That is what parsons are always asking. Many have been the experiments and subterfuges resorted to by the various denominations in order to draw the crowd that "pass by."

Some have said: "If the people won't come to the church, we will take the church to the people," and they have gone out into the highways to declare the Gospel.

Others, with a smug sort of Calvinism, are content to sing themselves away to everlasting bliss and let the wicked world go by.

What can be the reason why more than two-thirds of the people do not attend any place of worship regularly? It cannot be because the Christian churches are unaccomodating.

There are those who believe that the union of Christian churches would change things that they ought to present one solid front to the world and have done with their theoligical and ecclesiastical differences, then these delinquents would, out of admiration and adoration of a United Christendom, flock into the sanctuary.

But this unity, if it were possible, would not make Christianity any more attractive than it is to-day. Indeed, if there is one supreme argument against Church Union, it is that it would create a stereotyped form of service and spoil that variety and diversity which is characteristic of Christianity, and which is part of its appeal to a diversified race.

It has often been said that diversity is not opposed to unity. Each person has a different face, though there are types of faces which we can class as being very much alike. We would be a race of monotonous creatures if every person had the same shaped nose, if every man wore side-whiskers, and all women wore skirts that make them walk as if they were suffering from motor-ataxy. This last is certainly becoming very monotonous, not to say ridiculous.

Variety is the soul of nature, and when women and men and churches become monotonous they lose their soul and become mere automatons; religion becomes a parade, or form, a beautiful form it may be, but hooped in a hobble skirt.

We have not solved the problem why more people do not go to church, but we can safely affirm that it is not because of the lack of outward unity among the churches.

GENIUS HOLIDAYS

Thomas A. Edison is said to have returned from his holiday tired out and to have declared that he will never take another.

The great inventor, as is well known, is an inveterate worker and pursues his studies and experiments in his laboratory from morning till night, and it is said that he often goes for days and nights without sleep.

There may be a great deal of truth in these reports, but Mr. Edison is only flesh and blood. Like the rest of us. The human machine can only endure a certain amount of strain, and the man must give in or give up the ghost.

Mr. T. A. Edison is a genius and no doubt, like Socrates, has abnormal powers of endurance when he is in pursuit of some new invention. But for most of us who are not geniuses we are glad to get away at times from even our favorite pursuits.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is often the boast of Canadians that we have no poverty or poor problem. Yet the other day one of the British labor men at the Montreal Congress, after visiting the slums of that city, said he "had never seen slums as terrible and absolutely filthy."

Canada is getting its name up as a hustler of criminals. Marie Lloyd is not as bad as Thaw, but she is of the type that go to the making of such maniacs. Our emigration authorities returned her to John Bull with a label "infectious goods." But out of justice to John it ought to be admitted that he did send us a wire that Marie was coming. Canada can well afford to lose such emigrants even if they be but birds of passage. We have enough and to spare.

The dying man who wanted the minister to preach his funeral oration probably felt like the Irishman who remarked at a funeral: What a fine thing it is to be dead and hear your friends speak well of ye.

Mr. Will Thorne, the English labor leader who is touring Canada, told an interviewer the other day that he thought Great Britain was on the eve of a slackness of trade. It does not seem long ago since the British Isles were at the midnight of bad trade, but the morning and noon has flown and now it is evening. The morning will come again. Trade always did come in cycles.

THE SON OF A FENIAN.

Mr. James Larkin attended a meeting held in Manchester for the purpose of demanding an inquiry into the action of the Dublin police during the recent disturbances.

Addressing the meeting he said he was the son of a Fenian, and never felt ashamed of any man who was a Fenian. The Fenians were the outcome of certain conditions in Ireland at that time, just as he and his friends were to-day, only they had a broader and clearer gospel than the Fenians had. He claimed that he had been the means of bringing new hopes to the working classes of Ireland.

Came To See Her.

Sir Herbert Tree tells a number of good stories. One of his favorites is about an old lady who had invited some friends down to pass the week end at her little country cottage.

Her guests arrived in a tremendous downpour of rain.

"Dear, dear!" exclaimed the hostess as she welcomed them in; "what a day! I'm glad you've come, but do hope the weather will clear up, or you won't enjoy yourselves much."

"Oh, but, my dear Mrs. Jones," replied one of her guests politely, "we didn't come to enjoy ourselves; we came to see you!"

Scotch Whales Dying Out.

The ancient and famous whaling industry of Scotland is rapidly dying out; such is the unmistakable meaning of the returns just published in the annual report of the Fishery Board of Scotland. It appeared that the total catch of whales in Scottish waters during 1912 was only 440, as compared with 503 in 1911. This represents a decline of 13 per cent. in a year. If less than 40 per cent. Curiously, however, an altogether exceptional number of sperm whales were captured—18, as compared with nine of the previous year.

AFTER DEATH --- WHAT?

Thoughts From Poets and Writers

Sir Oliver Lodge's statement in his address to the British Association on the limitations of science and on the great outlying regions [illegible] which human consciousness has not penetrated recalls the utterances of "poets and prophets and saints and inspired seers" (to quote Sir Oliver) on the subject.

Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting:
The Soul that rises with us, our life's Star,
Hath had elsewhere its setting,
And cometh from afar:
Not in entire forgetfulness,
And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God, who is our home:
Heaven lies about us in our infancy!
—"Intimations of Immortality."

We are—we know not what:—light-sparkles floating in the aether of Deity!
—Carlyle.

"In Being's floods, in Action's storm,
I walk and work, above, beneath,
Work and weave in endless motion!
Birth and Death,
An infinite ocean;
A seizing and giving
The fire of Living;
'Tis thus at the roaring Loom of Time I ply,
And weave for God the Garment thou seest Him by."
—Goethe.

From too much love of living,
From hope and fear set free,
I thank with brief thanksgiving
Whatever gods may be
That no life lives for ever,
That dead men rise up never,
That even the weariest river
Winds somewhere safe to sea.
—Swinburne.

Gone for ever! Ever? No—for since our dying race began,
Ever, ever, and for ever was the leading light of man;
Those that in barbarian burials kill'd the slave, and slew the wife
Felt within themselves the sacred passion of the second life.
Indian warriors dream of ampler hunting grounds beyond the night;
Ev'n the black Australian dying hopes he shall return a white.
—Tennyson.

"We are no other than a moving row
Of Magic Shadow-shapes that come and go
Round with the Sun-illumined Lantern held
In Midnight by the Master of the Show.
—Omar Khayyam.

Sir Oliver Lodge also spoke of the work being done by psychical researchers. It is this aspect of the address which appealed to the Rev. R. J. Campbell, who, when interviewed on the subject, said:—

The reference to life after death is only one valuable point in Sir Oliver Lodge's general argument, a train of reasoning of the greatest value for the future of scientific and religious thought. A new and most important step has been taken in the rapprochement of science and religion which is steadily going on. If the fact of survival after death can be scientifically demonstrated, it could not fail to have some effect upon theology, but perhaps not so very much. It is hardly theology that is in question, but religion. Theology is only thinking of the results of the thinking upon religious experience. It would be an enormous gain to human welfare if, say, there could be no more question about the continuance of individual self-consciousness after the shock of death than there is, say, about the properties of radium. If that question were once settled so that no one could dispute it, I think there would be an enormous recrudescence of interest in religious experience.

All equipment is owned and operated by the C.P.R. affording the highest form of efficiency. If such a trip is under consideration, apply to any C.P.R. Agent for full particulars, or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

He Pinched the Egg.

An extraordinary incident which resulted in a very short-lived railway strike, occurred at the North Eastern Railway joint station at Leeds, the other day. A porter in moving a crate of live hens noticed that one of the birds had laid an egg, and, slipping his hand through the bars of the crate, he took the egg out and placed it on his barrow in safety. At that instant, however, a railway detective who had watched his actions swooped down upon the porter, arrested him, and conveyed him and the egg to the railway police station. Within a few minutes the whole of the railway staff on duty at the station ceased work until the district superintendent, was informed of the incident, and at once ordered the man's release. The staff at once returned to work.

HIS IMPULSIVE NOTE

The Answer Was Hard to Get, but Then the Birds Sang On.

By WALTER J. DELANEY.

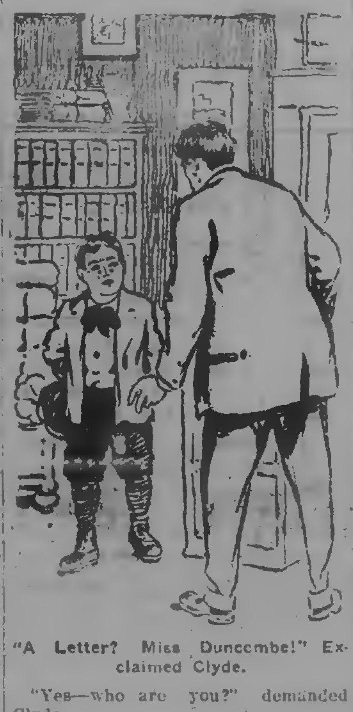
The young lawyer paused in his restless walk, and looked irritably at the office door, as there was a low, hesitating knock. It might be a client. Clyde Bissell had found only three within the two weeks since he had hung out his shingle. A few days previous he would have hailed the approach of a prosperous litigant with eagerness. Now he shrugged his shoulders and looked annoyed.

He had inherited a fortune, but he was ambitious. The one thought, when he proudly received his diploma, was that be would win a high name by championing ever the cause of the downtrodden and oppressed, but now—life had suddenly become dun and sere, and he had lost interest in everything. There was in Fairview a certain lovely witch of seventeen, namely, Miss Viola Duncombe. For over a month Clyde had paid her marked attentions. Only four evenings since he had very nearly told her the state of his distracted feelings. They were interrupted, but surely her heightened color evidenced that she understood him. The next day Clyde learned that Viola was about to depart on a long visit to a relative. He impulsively sent her a little note, and it said: "May I hope to call upon you to tell you something you must surmise I left unfinished the other evening?" No response came, and the days grew dreary and the nights sleepless.

"Come in!" ordered the young lawyer sharply. The door moved, opened a crack, was closed to again, and Clyde fancied he caught a vague sniffling sound. He pulled the door open wrathily, and confronted a small boy with traces of tears in his eyes.

"Well, what do you want?" rather ungraciously demanded the disturbed young man.

"Please, sir, are you Mr. Bissell, the lawyer?" faltered the little fellow.



"A Letter? Miss Duncombe!" Exclaimed Clyde.

"Yes—who are you?" demanded Clyde.

"I'm Mrs. Wood's boy," explained the urchin, and he began to cry. "My ma said I'd got to see you—that is, look for the letter first and then come and tell you if I found it, and if I didn't find it to tell you all about it."

"See here," spoke Clyde impatiently, "how am I interested?"

"Why, some one gave me a nickel to fetch a letter to you. As I was crossing the school lot Billy Norton chased me. I got away from him, but then I found I'd lost the letter. Then I made up my mind not to say anything about it. Miss Duncombe came over to the house today to bid me goodby, and they got asking me about the letter, and I told. I went up to the big lot to look for it again, but Billy was there, and I was scared, and so—so I came to you," and Mrs. Wood's boy broke down with a wail.

"A letter? Miss Duncombe?" exclaimed Clyde, mightily aroused. "What did Miss Duncombe have to do with it all?"

"Why, she sent it, don't you see—it was her letter that I lost."

Clyde was dazzled, then confused, then roused to intense excitement. He made a grab for the terrified visitor and rushed him to the street.

"Young man," he ordered sternly and breathlessly, "you lead me quick as you can to where you lost that letter." "Viola answered my note!" he told himself raptly—"three days ago. I must find that letter if it costs me a thousand dollars!"

"There's the place where I lost the letter," announced Clyde's guide finally, pausing at the edge of the school lot. Immediately a lad with the face of a bully made a dash for them, leaving a crowd flying a kite. Then he halted, observing the Wood boy's companion.

"See here," spoke the young lawyer, "have you or your crowd seen anything of a letter around here? One was lost. I'll give five dollars to whoever finds it."

"You will!" cried Billy Norton excitedly. "Say, mister, was it a flat little envelope? Smelled of musk?"

"I don't know. I shouldn't wonder," said Clyde vaguely.

"I just found one," explained Billy. We were looking for a piece of paper to make a 'messenger' of, to send up on the kite. See, there it goes whizzing up the string."

It had been several years since Clyde had sailed a kite. He knew what a "messenger" was, though, all right. Many a card had he punctured, run the string through it and watched it gyrate like a top up hundreds of yards of string.

Billy gaped at the young man as he made a dash for the group near by. Clyde seized the string to pull in the kite. It dived.

"Mister, mister, it'll break loose if you do that!" shouted half a dozen voices.

Twang! With a snap the frail cable parted.

"Broke loose! Whoop! after it!" arose tumultuous voices. Dashing away, the young lawyer cut a strange figure leading a mob of flying boys.

Twice he stumbled, once falling. People stared at him as he tore across the road. The kite made a final dive and landed on the roof of an old ruin of a barn.

A woman at the door of a house near by screamed hysterically as Clyde seized a ladder at the doorstep. Her husband came running out with a gun. Heedless of everything save that precious letter, Clyde placed the ladder against the eaves of the barn. Their rotted ends broke away like punk, but he ran up the ladder, crept across the mouldering shingles, and reached the kite.

"Got it—at last!" he gasped joyfully, as he tore the coveted "messenger" from the string—"the mischief!"

Under his weight the flimsy roof bent in like a piece of rubber. His clothes caught on a score of nails. Rip-snip-tear! Clyde rolled a foot, a cloud of dust covering him. A big spike ripped one sleeve from end to end. Clyde dropped to the ground.

He was a doleful sight—smudged, perspiring, in tatters—but he laughed gaily, exultantly—he had the letter!

"Why, Mr. Bissell!" exclaimed a surprised voice as he came out on the road—that of Viola herself, halting the automobile she drove and stared startled but amused. "What has happened?"

"This!" replied the young lawyer promptly, desperately—"a lost letter."

"Oh, dear!" and Viola flushed all over her fair face. "I—that is—shall I not take you home?"

She made room for him. But the shy miss did not start the machine villageward. She took the quiet, beautiful brookside road, canopied over with arching trees, and lined with radiant flowers, and with singing birds all about them. The auto went slower and slower, and stopped in a lovely nest of greenery.

Viola regarded her prince in tatters archly as he told his story. A smile—she could not help it—mingled with the lovelight in her gentle eyes.

"Shall I open the letter?" inquired Clyde.

"But it is too late to come now, as I asked you," she said, dropping her glance.

"Oh, then you asked me to come!" cried her lover, in a tone like a cheer. "It was to tell you something. Shall I tell it now, here—how much I love you."

He took silence for assent—such sweet, modest, inviting silence, indeed! and the birds sang on, and the flowers appeared to nod blessings towards them, and all the good, happy world seemed young.

THE BLESSING OF MOTHERHOOD

Healthy Mothers and Children Make Happy Homes

Motherhood is woman's highest sphere in life. It is the fruition of her dearest hopes and greatest desires; yet thousands of noble women through some derangement have been denied this blessing.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong. This is evidenced by the following letters which are genuine and truthful:

London, Ont.—"I wish to thank you for the benefit I received by taking your famous medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before my baby was born I was so ill I could not stand long or walk any distance. I had to lie down nearly all the time. After I took your medicine I felt like a new woman. I could work from morning till night and was happy and well. I certainly think it relieves pain at childbirth and recommend it to every woman who is pregnant. You may use this testimonial if you like. It may help some other woman."—Mrs. FRANK CORRIN, 132 Adelaide St., London, Ont.

Brooklyn, N.Y.—"I was ailing all the time and did not know what the matter was. I wanted a baby but my health would not permit it. I was nervous, my side ached and I was all run down. I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was good and took the medicine. I have now a beautiful baby and your Compound has helped me in every way."—Mrs. J. J. STEWART, 299 Humboldt St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

Wicked Cost of Cheap Beauty.

A newspaper picture of a music hall dancer, accompanying an article in which she is supposed to tell how to become beautiful, shows her wearing a headdress of aigrettes and swathed in white furs, other details of her costume being lost in the blur of ink. In England, where aigrettes are known as the "white badge of cruelty," the sale of these plumes is forbidden by law, and similar statutes have been enacted in several American states. The reason is that these plumes of the female heron can be taken most readily during the breeding season, and when the mother has been slain for the sake of this ornament, the young perish from starvation. The destruction of dozens of mother herons and the slow torture of their broods must have been required for this particular headdress, and a score of ermines would be needed to make a wrap of the generous proportions portrayed. Quite aside from the market value of the plumes of dead birds and the skins of dead animals, the young woman has paid a high price for her beauty, such as it is.—New York Evening Post.

What We All Do.

Jones—That was a scathing sermon on mean men the parson gave us last Sunday. Wonder what Smith thought about it? Brown—Singular! I met Smith yesterday and he said he'd like to know your opinion on it.—London Telegraph.

When one has really learned the joy of giving it is useless to talk to him of hoarding.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

NO PLACE FOR WOMEN.

British Commons Looks On Fair Sex With Suspicion.

Collectively the British House of Commons does not approve of woman and she is only allowed within the precincts on sufferance. Even the wives and daughters of Cabinet Ministers walk along the corridors in a furtive manner, and no woman on any pretext may move from one part of the building to another unescorted by a man.

Should a woman wish to speak with a member she must present herself at the lobby entrance and humbly give his name to the policeman on duty. After scrutinizing her bag and parcels the policeman will pass her on till she finally arrives at the outer lobby, where she can inscribe her name and that of the member she wishes to see upon a card. It may be sent in at once, or the gold-chained official may decide that he will have a nap first.

The woman waits patiently, or impatiently, according to temperament, seated upon a narrow green leather bench between cold and supercilious statues of politicians of a bygone day. If the member wishes to see his visitor he may appear in half an hour or an hour, or he may merely tear up the card, when his name will presently be called as "not in the House." The unwritten law that no woman must move about the House unescorted existed long before the suffragettes spread panic among politicians.

Only the other day Mrs. Asquith and Mrs. Winston Churchill were chatting with a party of members when the division bell rang as a signal that a vote was to be taken. The ladies were hastily deposited on the nearest bench, and told not to move till they were fetched. Not long ago the daughter of a titled lady was thus left by her hosts, a father and son, both members of the House. After the vote each man thought the other had returned and escorted their guest to a place of safety. Only at dinner time, some hours later, was the absence of the girl noticed. She had remained obediently on the spot where she had been left, under the impression that dire consequences would follow any attempt on her part to find her way outside alone.

The ladies' gallery is ridiculously inadequate as regards size and the possibility of seeing and hearing. It holds only forty, and of these not more than a dozen can see and hear. Outside in the corridor there is a long uncomfortable bench on which women who have secured supplementary tickets (that is, a ticket to admit if there is an empty place) sit sometimes for hours. The Speaker's gallery is rather smaller, and is entirely at the disposal of Mr. Lowther. If a Cabinet Minister or other member is going to make a special speech, his wife will write to Mrs. Lowther begging as a favor to be permitted to occupy a seat in this gallery.

The Pocket Workbox.

The tidy and provident woman will delight in the rolls containing cottons and needles of such convenient size that they may be carried in the purse or pocket. The rolls, which are made of leather fastened with a patent snap, contain three small reels of cotton, a needle book and thimble.

A BEAUTIFUL BABY

Gained Wonderfully After Being Put On A Well Known Food.

Mrs. E. Warner of 32 Winnifred Ave., Toronto, in writing about Neave's Food, says, "I have used Neave's Food for my baby and it has agreed when everything else failed. He has gained wonderfully since I started giving it to him."

Mr. A. J. Forgue, Labelle Street, Montreal, writes, under date 13 Oct: "My little daughter, born Aug. 15th., likes Neaves Food very much. She is a bunch of fat."

Mrs. J. Fallon of Whitby, Ont., says "Neave's Food is the only food that has agreed with our little boy. He is brighter, and his flesh is firmer, since taking it."

Neave's Food has been the standard Infant's Food in Great Britain for more than 85 years.

Mothers and prospective mothers may obtain a free tin of Neave's Food and a valuable book, "Hints About Baby", by writing Edwin Utley, 14 Front Street East, Toronto, who is the Agent for Canada. (Mention this paper.)

Neave's Food is sold in 1 lb. air tight tins by all Druggists in Canada. 43

On Solitude.

There can be no very black melancholy to him who lives in the midst of Nature and has his senses still. There was never yet such a storm but it was Aeolian music to a healthy and innocent ear. Nothing can rightly compel a simple brave man to a vulgar sadness. While I enjoy the friendship of the seasons I trust that nothing can make life a burden to me. The gentle rain which waters my beans and keeps me in the house today is not dread and melancholy, but good for me, too. Though it prevents my hoeing them, it is of far more worth than my hoeing. If it should continue so long as to cause the seeds to rot in the low lands it would still be good for the grass on the uplands, and, being good for the grass, it would be good for me.—From Henry David Thoreau's Essay on "Solitude."

ARREST IN MURDER CASE

Police Think They Have Man Who Killed McNulty

(Edmonton Journal.)

Lewis Waller, the smooth shaven young Englishman who has been sought for by the Edmonton police for the past three weeks in connection with the murder of James McNulty, was arrested in Calgary yesterday afternoon and word to that effect was received by Chief Carpenter last night. Waller will be brought back to the city and formally charged with the murder of McNulty, who was found dead beneath a mattress by his shack-mate some weeks ago.

The old system followed by all police departments in taking photographs of their prisoners caused the arrest of Waller in Calgary. Last July Waller was arrested in the East End Park on the complaint of several persons who happened to be in the park on that particular afternoon. He was given thirty days in jail for the offence he committed, and, on account of Nereek Michlazek, the young Polack who is under arrest pending an investigation into McNulty's death, stating that he knew his English friend to practice such habits, the police were led to believe that Waller, who was arrested in July, and the murderer of McNulty were the same man.

A photograph had been taken by Detective Shaw in July and when Michlazek discussed his friend's habits, the picture was produced with several others. After going over them all, the prisoner picked out Waller as being the man the police were looking for.

There are several pieces of material for the police to yet work on. Michlazek has said that Waller, when he returned to their shack the the night of the murder, had blood on his clothes, and an effort will be made to locate the garments. Michlazek also declares that Waller returned with a double-barrelled gun and he recognized the gun case found near the scene of the crime, as being the one which his friend had with him at different times when they were together.

The man arrested in Calgary is supposed to be going under an alias and that his right name is John Neklava. Furthermore he is not supposed to be of English birth but Michlazek merely presumed that he was of that nationality. The man en route from Calgary at the present time in the charge of a mounted police officer is an Austrian but speaks the English language fluently.

On arrival of the prisoner in Edmonton, a warrant will be served on him charging him with the murder of McNulty. He will be taken before the police magistrate here for a preliminary hearing and, if evidence warrant, will be sent to the higher courts to decide whether he is guilty of the crime or not. According to the police, there is a very strong case against him and several links of circumstantial evidence will be submitted at the trial.

When arrested in Calgary Waller was living in a Galician colony. It is still believed by the Edmonton police that the man is half-witted. A photograph found in the home of a Galician woman he kept company with, and which was taken three years ago, is very much different from his present appearance.

Humors of Insurance Act.

The volume recently issued as the first report on the administration of the National Insurance Act contains some interesting reading. Among the incidents mentioned is that of a father who was so grateful for the maternity benefits that he asked the inspector's permission to call the baby by that official's name.

An amusing story is told of a certain employer who dismissed all his domestic servants. He told them, however, that if they would consent to remain in his house as his guests he would be glad if they would do so, but that they were not his servants and were not bound to obey his orders. It was admitted that from time to time he made them presents, and that they kindly consented to assist in the household work; but, as proof that he had no power of control, evidence was given that upon occasions this quondam employer had to rise early and light the fire in his own kitchen range in the morning. Such persons as "paying guests" were already a well-recognized element in the community, but it remained for the Insurance Act to call into existence "paid guests." The magistrates, however, held him responsible for the insurance of his "guests." On appeal to Quarter Sessions their decision was confirmed.

WHY SCOTSMEN SUCCEED.

England's Inferior Education Is Alleged as a Reason.

Harold Spender, in a recent London News says:

The vivid pen picture of English private schools given to the House of Commons by the Minister of Education have come as a shock. Dotheboys Hall, it seems, still flourishes in our midst, and the work of Dickens requires to be done over again.

Matthew Arnold pointed this out with all his power a generation ago, and the story has been since repeated by many brilliant writers and critics. But the English people are deaf, and in hundreds of cases parents prefer to send their children to these schools even when there are the very best free public schools round the corner. Bad education seems somehow always to consort with "gentility."

But now certain remarkable signs are appearing. The boys from the council schools, profiting by a thorough training at the most impressionable years, are invading our secondary schools and universities, and compelling the middle classes to look the facts in the face. The other day ten council school boys appeared as wranglers at Cambridge. I am informed that in many of the secondary schools of the L.C.C. winners of scholarships often rapidly take the lead of the middle-class children.

At the universities the public schools still keep an iron hand over the sports, but in matters of education they are often beaten by boys from the grammar schools and the council schools. It is clear that a great crisis in education is approaching. The middle-class parent will have to wake up if he and his offspring are to avoid defeat in the struggle. A national comparison reveals the same facts. In secondary education England is far behind both Scotland and Wales. The higher education of Scotland, stimulated by the great boon of the Carnegie Trust, is moving steadily forward both in the schools and in the universities.

The result is seen by the fact that the unhappy English boy, though born of a stock certainly not less gifted, is too often beaten by the Scots boy in the competition for all the higher offices and posts, both of learning and business. The attitude of the middle class in England is, indeed, one that exceeds wonder. They pay the education rate, but in nine cases out of ten they refuse to avail themselves of it. They actually pay in order that their children should receive a far worse education than the working classes receive without paying another penny.

Exhausted with the expense of paying for bad schooling they often find themselves, at the critical moment, unable to start their children in life. Thus they lose the one great financial handicap that they have over their working-class competitors. Meanwhile, these parents are too often unnecessarily obsessed with the middle-class habit of sending their children away from home—a habit produced by the lack of good secondary schools evenly distributed throughout the country. By sending their children away they lose control over their lives and they sacrifice all influence over their characters.

And then they are surprised to find that at the age when life is opening to their children they have lost all parental control, and have not even obtained any superior educational value.

Indian Massacre Plot.

The Barital conspiracy case, received a hearing in the Calcutta courts, a few days ago. A native lawyer, Mr. Gupta, in opening the case for the Crown, in which charges of plotting to seduce native troops and bring about a wholesale massacre were brought against the 44 defendants, asked for a free pardon for the two approvers who were giving direct evidence regarding the working of the Barital and Dacca sections of the conspiracy. Gupta gave a long list of murders and outrages which the police have connected with the society. He produced documents showing how the conspirators divided the country into districts in which organized sedition was reached, chiefly by means of religious services, students and unmarried youths being their special concern.

KIDNEY STONES DISSOLVED

Dear Sirs,—I have seen several testimonials in the paper who suffered with their Kidneys and were cured with SANOL, so I think it is a duty I owe the public to let them know also my experience. I suffered for a long time with stones in the Kidneys, and have to say, like everbody else, "tried everything known to the medical practicioners, except an operation, but found no relief." I was for two days in bed suffering untold agonies and had to get several injections of morphine to relieve the pain, when an old friend of mine, a Mr. McColl called on me and induced me to try SANOL; the second day I had taken it I had a little relief; the third day I was able to sit up in bed, and when Mr. McColl called me up on the phone the fourth day I way able to go down stairs and talk to him, and tell him what a wonderful cure SANOL was. A week from the first day taking it I was back in my office doing business, but continued taking it for three weeks after until I passed the Kidney Stone, which stone I always will keep to show anyone who is suffering like I was what SANOL has done.

Please use this letter for publication, and send copies to everyone in Canada, as everybody should and must know about a cure which you have, also refer them to me for further information, as I could write all day, and then would not have told you all I think about SANOL.

I cannot, on paper, wish you the success I wish.

Yours Sincerely,
THOS. JOBIN,

Which Is More Urgent?

Fire Insurance

Important? You fully realize it. You would not allow your house to remain uninsured over night.

Your house may never burn. Comparatively few buildings ever do.

If your house does burn, your property is destroyed, but you can still provide for your loved ones. Your income remains unaffected, your earning capacity unimpaired.

If your house is not insured at all, or for an insufficient amount,

YOU
Carry the Risk

Your friend has had his home insured these thirty years and has had no fire. He has been fortunate in that, though he has nothing now to show for the money paid out.

Life Insurance

Important? Oh yes, you intend to insure after awhile when "a little better able to do so."

You will surely die. All men do. You are more likely to die within a week or a year, than your house is to burn.

Death destroys at once and irrevocably, in whole or in part, the income that provided for the daily wants of those you love, the income that was counted on to feed and clothe and educate your children.

If your life is not insured at all, or for an insufficient amount,

Your Wife and Babies
Carry the Risk

Your friend has had his life insured these thirty years and is now an old man. He is fortunate in having lived, and he has something now to show for the money paid out. His cash value affords a comfortable support for his own declining years.

Cause and Cure of Headache

The cause of headache as you know, is the stoppage of the circulation resulting in pressure on the delicate nerves of the head. In time nature will start the blood going again, but meanwhile we suffer and are unfit for duty.

Assisted by two ZUTOO Tablets, which by the way are as harmless as the soda they contain, nature will remove the pressure and stop the headache in twenty minutes. Why continue to suffer? Why be unfit?

It is really remarkable how many people now use ZUTOO to cure their headaches. Do you? If not, why not?

BIG ENROLLMENT FOR THE CLASSES

One Hundred and Sixty Young People Make Application

START ON MONDAY

Some eighty young ladies and about eighty young men of the city have enrolled in the Industrial Night School classes which commence on Monday night in the old Collegiate building on Murray street.

The large enrollment was far beyond the expectations of the committee and Mr. Hagerman, the principal.

The problem which faces the committee now, will be the accommodation of the students. In all probability eight classes a week will be held, making two classes on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

APPRECIATED THEIR TEACHER

Gold Bar Pin and Hymn Book for Miss Allan

The girls of Miss Allan's Sunday School class gave her a surprise last night when they met at her home on Aylmer street and presented a gold bar pin set in amethysts and a hymn book in leather. The address was read by Adeline Grant and the presentation was made by May Shearer. The address was as follows:

Dear Miss Allan,—We, the members of your Sunday School class, regret very much that you are unable to teach us any longer. We are sure that in the past six years you have done all in your power to guide us. We ask you to accept this gift as a slight token of the appreciation in which you are held by us.

Signed,

A. GRANT,
M. SHEARER

Miss Allan, though taken by surprise, gave a suitable reply.

BANNER YEAR FOR THE MILLBROOK EXHIBITION

Directors Met With Splendid Success—Some of the Prize Winners

Large Crowds.
Fine Horses.
Good Weather.

And numerous other things was what the directors of the Millbrook Fair met with yesterday at the big day of their annual fall fair.

"This year's fair is one of the grandest we have ever held," remarked more than one gray-haired director of the Board. The crowd was certainly a record one and the officials have every reason to be proud of their endeavors to please the public.

The fair itself was far in advance of any previous year, while the exhibits were more numerous and of a better class than formerly. The prize winner at the Millbrook fair can be well proud, as the competition was strong.

The horses which turned out in the carriage, road, agriculture, heavy draught classes and others were the finest in the county of Durham. There was no lack of entries in the different classes and every man was after the red ribbon. Some very clever driving was evinced in the ladies' driving.

The cattle, swine and sheep exhibits were numerous and compared most favorably with those of other years. The poultry exhibit was very [illegible] and some exceptionally fine [illegible] were in evidence.

The exhibits in the building were also far ahead of other years. The grain and seeds were of excellent quality, as was the dairy produce and bread. The fruit, despite the fact of the discrepancies in many an orchard, was as good as usual and the vegetables also came up to the standard. The majority of the upper building was filled with fancy work and fine arts, which was most pleasing to the eye and the judges had no easy time in endeavoring to decide the winners, so good was the work.

Some of the prize winners were:

Championship for best span of horses, agricultural or heavy, Lewis Bros.

Special prize for the best 1913 foal, Mr. F. Ware.

Mr. W. Handbidge, of Otonabee, won the special for the high steppers.

The best lady driver, Miss Geraldine Howson, of this city.

Mr. Chas Calvert won the special for the best heavy draught foal of this year.

Five dollar gold piece donated by Mr. R. J. Munro, of this city, for the best agricultural mare, Shaw Bros.

Best gentleman driver, Mr. Alex Anderson.

Brood mare and foal, John Earle.
Foal of 1913, John Earle.
One year old gelding, Jas. Bengber.
Two year old gelding, W. Rodwell
Three year old gelding in harness, J. W. Walker.
Pair of horses in harness, over 15 hands, Ormie Ball.
Single horse in harness, W. Handbidge.

ROADSTERS IN HARNESS.

Brood mare with foal, Chas. Calvert.
Foal of 1913, Chas. Calvert
One year old gelding, I. Allen
Two year old gelding, Geo. Eghson.
Gentlemen's turnout, Jos. Staples
Single pony, R. Doak

AGRICULTURAL HORSES.

Foal of 1913, Shaw Bros.
One year old gelding or filly, Shaw Bros.
Two year old gelding or filly, R. A. Henry
Three year old gelding or filly, Geo. McGee
Pair of horses in harness, John Byron.

HEAVY DRAUGHT HORSES.

Brood mare with foal, H. McAllister.
Foal of 1913, H. McCallister
One year old gelding or filly, Jas. Baptie.
Two year old filly, Robert McKnight.
Three year old filly, S. Redmond
Pair of horses in harness, Joseph Staples.

THE HORSE RACES

Despite the fact that only three horses faced the starter in both classes, every heat was keenly contested and the horses generally finished close together under the wire.

The free-for-all went to "Susie Hal" owned by Dr. Johnston, of this city. "Harry Direct" old familiar, was on the scene and put up a game fight although he finished in the rear on two occasions.

The 2.30 class was won by "Little Jerry" owned by Jas. Redpath of Cobourg, who managed to get second place in the first heat, but after a change of drivers, the horse went out and took the next three with ease.

Mr. Jas. O'Neil of Cobourg, acted as starter, while Messrs. Robert Munroe of Peterboro, Jas. Carew and Jas. Baggs, of Lindsay, acted as judges.

The result of the races:

FREE-FOR-ALL

"Susie Hal," owned by Dr. Johnston, Peterboro	1	1	2	1
"Harry Direct," owned by Dr. Johnston, Peterboro	3	3	1	2
"Sadie Bell," owned by Ira Watters, Port Hope	2	2	3	3

2.30 CLASS

"Little Jerry," owned by J. Redpath, Cobourg	2	1	1	1
"Ora Tariff," owned by J. Fife, Otonabee	1	2	2	2
"Mistress Hallie," owned Dr. Johnston, Port Hope	3	3	3	3

"What a lot of magnificent horses remarked more than one visitor at the fair. Some of the finest horses ever seen on the grounds were witnessed in the championship for the best heavy agricultural, or heavy horses. This was won by the Lewis Bros. Fourteen teams were in the contest.

The usual pink lemonade and other refreshments were very much in evidence.

Mr. A. T. Armstrong, President of the exhibition, was a very happy and also a most busy man. The genial secretary-treasurer, Mr. J. N. McGill was in his glory. Why should not he—think of the big gate receipts.

The judges of the different classes were fair and just to everyone, and their work was highly commented upon.

The officials in the racing events gave every satisfaction.

Mr. Jas. Carew, President of the Lakefield Central Fair was a prominent figure on the grounds.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON GRAVES OF GREEDINESS.

—October 5.—Numbers 11:4-33.—

'The supplication of a righteous man availeth much in its working."—James 5:16.

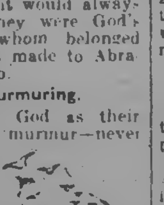
THE Israelites remained at Mt. Sinai about a year learning important lessons as a result of their new conditions. The Tabernacle was set up as a meeting place between God and the people. God was represented by the pillar of cloud, which rested upon its top, and which at night flamed up like a torch.

God's presence inside the Tabernacle was seen only by Moses and Aaron, in conjunction with their privileged services. He was represented by the glorious Shekinah brightness upon the Mercy Seat. Thus the Tabernacle became the centre of the nation's life and interest in relation to their God, their Leader, who communicated to them through the mediator of the Law Covenant—Moses.

The people had flocks and herds and these would necessitate their being at some distance from the Camp. But the pillar of cloud by day and its fiery torch by night would always remind them that they were God's adopted people, to whom belonged the gracious promises made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

The Sin of Murmuring.

Those who accept God as their leader should never murmur—never complain. To do so is to dispute the Divine Wisdom and the Divine promises, and to that extent break their covenant of faith, obedience and loyalty. St. Paul reminds us that the murmuring of the Israelites on this occasion carries such a lesson to us.—Hebrews 3:7-19; 4:1-11.



Gathering quail.

The Lord's dealings with Israel show us that justice, love, mercy, loyalty to God and to principle are in the Divine estimation the highest qualities, and their violation the most serious crime. If this is not the way we have looked at matters, it behooves us to change our viewpoint and to take the Almighty's.

This murmuring against the Lord was concerning the manna, for which the people had at first been very thankful. They allowed their minds to become so vexed that they wept like children at the thought of the fleshpots of Egypt and desired to have back the conditions which they had left. Little did they comprehend the situation. Had they returned to Egyptian bondage, even after a year's freedom, their lot would have seemed more wretched than ever.

Moses Too Greatly Burdened.

The result of this murmuring was severe upon Moses. He was the people's representative before the Lord, and the Lord's representative before the people. Heart-broken, he sought the Lord, saying that his burden was too heavy, and that if it must remain with him, he had better die.

Then it was that God directed the institution of the Jewish Sanhedrin—seventy Elders, to be the court of judges, responsible to the people, to deal with them and to counsel them properly. While Moses remained head of the nation, the seventy Elders shared his responsibility.

By Divine direction Moses made out the list of these Elders, and requested them to meet him at the Tabernacle. All but two came. There God honored Moses as the head of the nation, and then placed a share of the responsibility upon the seventy. This was indicated by their prophesying. Even the two who remained in the Camp prophesied.

Quail In Over-Supply.

God then sent word to Israel through Moses that He would send them a thirty days' supply of flesh, such as they had murmured for. Under the Lord's providence, a strong wind across the Red Sea drove thousands of quail to the vicinity of the Camp. Two days and nights the people gathered quail.

Graves of lust.

Agnostics have questioned this statement, thinking it a declaration that birds fell in a solid mass two cubits high. The proper thought is that the birds, driven by the wind across the sea, were so fatigued that they flew low, about two cubits (three feet) above the ground, where they could be easily caught.

The murmurers ate so heartily that pestilence broke out among them, a fever from over-eating, called "a fire from the Lord." Many died and were buried there. Thus the place was called "Kibroth-Hattaavah"—"Graves of Greediness." Thus the Lord permitted the murmurers, the unthankful, to cut themselves off from further opportunity for murmuring.

The happiest mental condition conceivable is that which is satisfied with God's appointments. The spirit of discontent looks away from the Heavenly Manna, longing for other food. To such the Lord grants opportunity of feasting to the full on what they crave; but the murmurers cease from being members of His family.

The Bible supplies the Manna of Divine Truth. The Truth needs to be gathered, ground and baked. But it is God's provision, wholesome, nutritious, necessary for our perfecting as God's people. Yet some crave the fleshpots of Egypt—the world's theories. These He allows to come within their reach. They fill themselves with Higher Criticism and Evolutionary theories, and perish as New Creatures—cease to be God's people.

THE MILITIA GETTING READY

DETROIT, Oct. 4.—Governor Ferris announced last night after a conference here with Adj.-Gen. Vandercook, that he will immediately instruct Gen. Abbey, in command of the state troops in the Calumet strike zone, to order three additional militia companies to be prepared for service in case their presence is deemed necessary.

To Auction Doukhobor Lands.

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—The Minister of the Interior will probably put up at public auction thousands of acres of lands which have been abandoned in Saskatchewan by the Doukhobor followers of Peter Veregin, who have gone to British Columbia. The question of compensation to Veregin's followers for their abandoned farms is unlikely.

Many are called, and most of them deserve it.

Another Smart Striped Cotton Coat Worn at Deauville.

Maison Chanel.

"GOLFINE, a striped cotton material, the creation of Mr. Rodier, will be 'all the rage' next winter. In the United States it will supersede everything else for fashionable women's wear."

The foregoing statement was made by Mr. Lucien Schloss, head of the commission firm of Adolphe Schloss, Fils et Cie., to a correspondent for this paper who called at the Paris establishment a few days ago.

Mr. Schloss had just returned from Deauville, where, he said, he had been charmed by the variety, refinement and simplicity of the prevailing fashions. "Simplicity," he said, "is the real characteristic of the French 'mode,' and every dress worn at Deauville corresponded to the moment of the day and the appropriateness of the occasion on which it was worn.

"In the morning in the Rue Gontaut-Biron one could see and admire the gay character of light white silk and tulle and light taffetas and lingerie dresses. The great fad replacing the colored woollen or silk sweaters, in fashion some weeks previously, was the long coat of a striped cotton material, in yellow, red, orange, blue and white shades, the collar and sleeves trimmed with fur. This is golfine."

[illegible] Sensational Novelty.

[illegible] continuing, said:—"For [illegible] Maller is preparing a [illegible] novelty of brocaded designs [illegible] ground which will be [illegible].

"[illegible] the Deauville [illegible] more elaborate dresses [illegible] but they were not [illegible] and embroidery, [illegible] in Paris. The dresses [illegible] Grande Semaine [illegible] produced the impression [illegible] taking part at a formal [illegible] diplomatic or official [illegible].

"[illegible] the correspondent [illegible] at Deauville of [illegible] with double volants of [illegible] muslin or in pink, [illegible] taffetas, the volants having in [illegible] instances borders of skunk or [illegible]. One photograph showed a [illegible] of black velvet on a [illegible] skirt. Then there were dresses of a decided Japanese character with broad collars set far from the neck, round sleeves and an immense satin bow on the waist line."

Regarding winter fashions, Mr. Schloss said:—"Although every firm has launched some particular creation of its own, the prevailing shades will be red, dark green and living orange. Materials of 'duvetyn' silk, 'velours de laine' for the tailor made suits, and silk plush and silk velvets for the more elaborate coats will be worn. For elaborate afternoon or evening dresses rich silks, brocaded with gold and silver, and silk muslins and taffetas are to be used.

Back of Dress Is Important.

"The trimmings, other than furs, will be narrow silver and gold tinsel galloons, crystal similis, white wax beads, and a fair amount of jet beads and pendants. All these will be employed in such a manner as not to overcharge the dress. The drapery effects are quite new, and the back of a dress is to be as important a matter as the front. One of the leading dressmakers is showing evening dinner very décolleté on the back, whereas the front is high and almost 'timid' in character. The neck is always without covering; even the fur coats are not closed over it, but are round, rolling over themselves from one shoulder to the other, and are worn hanging loose and dropping in the back.

"Skirts are decidedly short, but wider and with numerous wide pleats on the hips and below as well. They have a lifted up, 'retrousse' effect and are of a provocative nature, as if the wearer were inviting attention. The slit is still in favor and its ambition seems to be, in many instances, to find itself at the back instead of the front of the skirt.

"There are no sleeves on evening dresses and the arms are free. A narrow attached 'bride' is all that retains the dress on the shoulders, and this is made of silk, muslin or crystal beads. If a sleeve is desired light tulle or muslin scarfs, attached to the neck of the dress, can be rolled over the arms.

Increases Commission System.

"Furs will, as usual, be an important factor. When used as a garniture on coats or on the sleeves and collars of tailor made dresses German and Russian fitch, skunk, colinsky and civet are chosen. The fur coats in breitschwanz and caracul are worked so soft that the drapery effects are equal to the lightest silks. Ermine and sable furs are combined in wonderful designs, and the mole coats [illegible] seal are real creations."

Mr. Schloss further said:—"If we [illegible] commission agents, formerly [illegible] the direct delivery from the dressmakers [illegible] our mutual customers, one of our principal reasons was that we considered the measure entirely unnecessary. If some commission houses have been suspected of allowing models to be copied, they are altogether the exception. All of us look upon such ways of doing business as absolutely dishonest, and there is no reason for our being suspected.

"In my experience the most courteous and agreeable relations have always existed between dressmakers and commission agents."

Materials for Autumn Elegant

NOT since the reigns of the Louis of France have such beautiful imported fabrics been seen for dress. Last season we had, it is true, the lovely brocades and matelasse materials, but this year the coloring is much more beautiful and the weaves even more elegant. The typical blues and pinks of the days of French elegance in dress, which have come down to us in the costumes and paintings of those times, contrast interestingly with the Chinese and Japanese colorings that are used also in the new materials.

There is as yet no sign of stiffening in silks or woollen material. In fact, one of the principal peculiarities of the new fabrics is their supple limpness. There is a velvet that is perhaps the softest and thinnest velvet that ever has been made. It is extremely light weight, without any hint of transparency, and only that it has a velvet weave and lights might be called by some other name. It is called Venetian velvet, and can be used like satin or any other pliant, soft fabric.

The duvetyn velvet has a mirror glacé effect, but is otherwise like chiffon velvet. Velvet is to be high fashion this winter and is to be combined often with cloth, as, for instance, the new drap de [illegible], which is after the [illegible] old Venetian cloth. [illegible] duvetyn and peluche de laine [illegible] novelties [illegible] the woollen materials [illegible] cloth, [illegible] off [illegible] in [illegible] the high novelty in [illegible] material, and [illegible] very smart to [illegible] suits for autumn and winter are already on view.

In figured materials having brocaded effects the great novelty is the peluche. There is brocaded plush, voile peluche— [illegible] ground, with the plain [illegible] figure so [illegible] But quite [illegible] suitable for evening [illegible] on a tinsel, gold or silver ground.

Next come the brocaded velvets in odd Eastern patterns and on all sorts of grounds. There is the velvet figure on a faille ground that, because of the design, looks like moire. A velours frisé that is very expensive—about $25 a yard—has a design that has the appearance of cameo cutting. There are gay velvet figures embossed on the gay silk colored backgrounds [illegible] pink, azure blue and citron [illegible] Velvet brocaded designs [illegible] the same colored [illegible] voile and chiffon grounds are the brocaded velvet figures which hang with a delightfully artistic limpness. Velours façonné is one of the most beautiful materials for an evening wrap that can be imagined. The design is of velvet leaves in relief shaded in two tones, black and a slightly lighter blue. This design covers well the ground, but what can be seen of it is of satin of a vivid tint, for instance a glorious orange that throws the whole design into relief and is as beautiful as a painting.

The designs in all these brocaded velvets are mostly smaller than those of last year, and many of them are authentic copies of antique stuffs. There is an old museum in Lyons, France, where all textiles that have been designed during the last thousand years have been collected, and it is there that many of the ideas and copies come from.

In the lighter silk weaves the tinsel brocades are the fashionable novelty. They are ideal for evening dresses and wraps, according to the size of the design. There is a tinsel voile pompadour which is surely a copy of some French court costume, in lovely old pompadour designs and colorings. A voile broché tinsel has tinsel designs on gay colored grounds, and the silver tinsel designs are seen even on chiffon backgrounds. In a lamé broché the satin figure is shot with tinsel and contrasts with a cascade green ground. A crepon fantasie brocade has the addition of a brocaded chintz pattern in the old chintz colorings. One of the matelasse materials has a tinsel thread in the raised figure.

To replace the charmeuse there is a crêpe Lucia, a satin on the same order as charmeuse, but with a slight crêpe in the weave that gives it an added elegance. Crêpe Trianon is like that of last year, except that it seems a little heavier, is more crêpelike in appearance and comes in wonderful Japanese designs. Faille Trianon has a clear cut rib like old Ottoman silk and has a glorious lustre. Crêpe craquelé looks like a serpent's skin. In heavier mixtures for afternoon tailored suits the crêpe Albanais has an indefinite pattern, and crêpe brocade has a little of the velour effect, with an eponge look to the raised weave.

New colors are always interesting news, for even if one is in the habit of wearing dark colors there are always some such colors that are specially fashionable each season. In the dark tones it is the brown which must be given precedence—a color that is always a favorite with American [illegible] Seal brown is the smartest shade [illegible]

Next come the bottle greens, or Russian [illegible] Next come [illegible] The [illegible] pinks [illegible] the [illegible] of them all, on [illegible] but Parisian, which is [illegible]

DOUGLAS M'DONALD AND FRED SOWARD WON THE CUPS

Strong Competition in Field Day Sports for P.C.I. Students

The annual P.C.I. field day of sports was held yesterday afternoon on Nicholls Oval. Never before had such a young troop of athletes competed in these events and when on a couple of times the old records were made ancient history, the boys received no small amount of encouragement.

The senior cup was won by Douglas McDonald, and the junior by Fred Soward. In the jumps McDonald did not have a look in, but when it came to the various runs there was nothing to it but "Mac." In the juniors Soward was more or less prominent in all the events, and when he ran the half mile in 2.49 2-5, lowering the old record, which was 2.59, he received great applause.

Peever set up a new record for hoisting the 12 lb. shot. The old mark was 30 ft. 10 in.; the new record 31 ft. 7 in. Patterson, one of the competitors for the junior cup, hung up a new record for the 440 yard dash. The old record was 1.05 and the new one is 1.01.

The other entries who came second or third in the various events were the recipients of badges. Miss Gladys Huycke sent up a barrel of St. Lawrence apples, which were greatly enjoyed by all those present.

The results of the events for the cup were:

PSYCHOLOGY IN BASEBALL

For Instance, the Pitcher and the Catcher's Drum Glove.

Once upon a time there was a pitcher in a certain league who was regarded as a star. And the reason for his success was this:

He always warmed up with a certain catcher. It was this catcher's duty to receive the ball in such a manner that a loud report sounded across the field every time the ball struck the mitt. The pitcher, hearing these loud reports, would smile and feel contented and confident. He knew then that he had speed. Any time the ball striking the glove did not produce a noise like a crack of a Springfield rifle the pitcher was ineffective.

This may sound like a fable, but it is far from such. There are two veteran catchers who well remember this pitcher. One of the old timers used to catch him in practice and recalls the effect of the loud reports.

This incident is not a dead and buried part of the past. Parallel cases can be found today, and the custom is growing. And the demand for the loud noise in warming up has caused the coming of the "Fourth of July" glove.

A recruit was warming up the other day. He became wild and looked worried. The catcher tried to steady him and failed.

"What's the matter?" asked the catcher.

"They don't crack," replied the pitcher.

"Wait till I haul out the 'Fourth of July' glove."

The catcher brought out another glove. It has a thick leather covering. The minute the new glove came into use the warming up exercise produced a noise like artillery practice. The pitcher got his control, smiled in satisfaction and showed much speed and plenty of curves.

And why shouldn't this be? Our popular magazines and newspapers are filled these days with essays on the psychology of baseball. If there is psychology of baseball surely this comes under that head.—New York Times.

Anybody can attract a crowd. So [illegible] it by getting themselves arrested on a main street in broad day-light.

Captain Pembroke and Mr. Effingham

By JULIUS M'BRIDE.

Captain George Pembroke of the royal engineers, when there were British troops stationed in Canada, wrote his fiancee that he was ordered home to England. The lady, Emily Collins, who was a New Yorker, was somewhat surprised at a request made in the letter that she should sail from that city, meet him in London and marry him there. Miss Collins would have considered this an impertinence, but, reading further, saw that the order was imperative that the officer report at once, and, since a steamer sailed from Montreal the evening he received it, he would sail with her.

Now, this was all a tissue of deception. Pembroke, ten years before a young lieutenant, had met Miss Collins, a girl of seventeen, in England; had flirted with her, but the two had drifted apart. After he came to Canada he opened a correspondence with her that led to an engagement. Instead of sailing from Montreal he purposed going across from New York and in the same steamer as his fiancee. Having grown ten years older and raised a full beard, he did not believe she would recognize him. He would endeavor to win her under another name, then confess that he was Pembroke himself.

This was a pretty scheme—that is, if he succeeded in winning the girl away from himself.

When the ship sailed in which Miss Collins was to go to England, Captain Pembroke in mufti, under the name of Guy Effingham, was on board. He was a handsome fellow, of an aristocratic bearing and quite a lady killer. He did not recognize Miss Collins, who had considerably changed, but succeeded in securing some one to point her out to him. An introduction was secured, and the captain and his fiancee were soon sitting next each other on deck in steamer chairs engaged in a desperate flirtation.

The word flirtation is generally used in connection with women, and we do not associate it with persons on the lee side of middle age. But both Pembroke and Miss Collins were flirts.

The night before reaching port while steaming up the channel the captain gave Miss Collins a fictitious account of himself, stating that he was related to a duke; that he had an income of £8,000 a year and was going home to stand for parliament.

Having thus prepared the way, he told her that the moment he saw her on the day they sailed he knew that she was destined to have a marked effect upon his subsequent life and he had since realized that he was madly in love with her. Then he offered her his heart and hand. She hid her face on his bosom and whispered "Yes."

Pembroke was shocked. It was not that he had won the lady from himself, but that she should show so little sense of honor in thus deserting one man for another. He expected that she would say something about complications with another lover, but she maintained silence on the subject, and he could see no evidence of the slightest qualm of conscience at her dishonorable conduct.

Pembroke, of course, knew where he could find Miss Collins in London, but he asked for her address and when he received it put it carefully in his pocketbook. When they separated it was understood that he should call the evening of his arrival. The final parting took place on the upper deck behind a great wind funnel, where there was no one to see. So exuberant was the caress he received that he went away as delighted with his success as Guy Effingham as he was enraged at the treatment of George Pembroke.

"You'll not disappoint me tomorrow evening," she said, "will you?"

"Certainly not. Why do you doubt me?"

"You men are so uncertain. I have known you only ten days. It seems that my happiness is too intense to be real. I must be dreaming."

"I assure you mine surpasses it."

"Well, then, goodby. I shall expect you early."

Miss Collins was to go to London with her people, while Pembroke went alone. On the way it seemed to him that he had been caught in a whirlwind that had turned him not only completely round, but upside down. What should he do? Accept the slight put upon him as Pembroke and give way to the ecstasy experienced by Effingham, or, as Pembroke, hurl back the love she had lavished on Effingham? He was not quite sure whether he was a jilted or an accepted lover.

When he went to see her in London he had not made up his mind what course he would pursue. When she advanced to receive him his heart fluttered. Throwing her arms about him, she looked up into his face with a glad smile and said:

"Oh, George, dearest George, how happy I am to be with you again!"

"George?"

"Yes, George."

"You know"—

"Your personating another to win me again was just too lovely for anything."

"But—but how did you know?"

"Stupid! I recognized you long before you saw me at all."

"Well, well, what a donkey I have been! Do you know I've been half crazy as myself and in the seventh heaven as the other fellow."

"And just think, I have been loved by two different men at the same time. It was delicious."

SHOULD REQUIRE CERTIFICATES

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—The illness of Princess Augustine Victoria of Hohenzollern, who married Manuel, the former King of Portugal, has revived among German medical men the conviction that some form of a medical certificate should be required legally throughout all social classes before a wedding ceremony is performed. It is pointed out that all opposition to this would vanish as soon as it became a nominal part of the preliminaries to a marriage, but like those attending the making of a will.

It is pointed out by other scientists and economists that any further formalities in arranging a marriage will restrict the number of marriages and encourage irregular unions.

Changes in Fourteenth.

KINGSTON, Oct. 4.—A general shake-up is due among the officers of the 14th Regiment. Lt.-Col. A. B. Cunningham will retire and remove from the city. Major W. H. MacNee is retiring from the position of quartermaster, the duties to be taken over by Capt. Peters. Major A. Sinclair, a members of the old guard, will also retire. He has been paymaster for many years.

Burned To Death.

ASQUITH, Sask., Oct. 4.—The home of Howard Needwell, half a mile south of here, was destroyed by fire Thursday night, and Mrs. C. A. Pickett, mother of Mrs. Needwell, was burned to death. Mr. Pickett was severely injured in attempting to save her.

A Violin Prodigy.

The "Wonder Child," Kerekjarto, gave a musical recital in the London Opera House on a recent afternoon. Little Kerekjarto's violin playing once more left the very definite impression that he is no prodigy—in the accepted sense of the term—but rather a singularly mature youthful artist. The sureness of his execution and intonation is astonishing, while he phrases with an intuition and knowledge little short of wonderful. Naturally his tone sounded a little small amid such spacious surroundings, but it was beautifully pure and liquid.

Thor's Hammer Still Used.

The fishermen of Whitby (Eng.) would never dream of venturing out of port without a little hammer-shaped bone, from the head of a sheep, known as "Thor's hammer," as this little object is a very special charm against drowning. The mole's foot is also a "sure" cure for toothache or cramp—according to locality. Amputated limbs are in some cases preserved so that the cripple may not be deficient in this respect in the next world.

At Scarborough an old peasant has come to be regarded as almost a wizard, for the country folks from round about come to him for relief from rheumatism. His "cure" consists of a copper bangle and ring, and on either end of the bangle two small-bore brass cartridge cases are wedged. These charms are sold to the patient.

In Suffolk a girl always keeps her first tooth; then when she marries and has a child the tooth is suspended about the infant's neck during teething, as it is said to bring instant relief.

These superstitions mostly exist in the counties which are washed by the North Sea. Doubtless they are survivals of the days of the bold Viking marauders.—Ireland's Own.

If white kid gloves are rubbed gently with bread crumbs after each wearing, they will keep clean much longer.

WILY KING EDWARD I.

Fooled the Rebellious Welsh With the Prince of Wales.

After a lifelong struggle with the Welsh, Edward I. of England sought to ascertain the cause of their constant rebellion and was informed that they would never be content until they had a prince of their own.

The wily old monarch asked them if a prince born in Wales who could not speak a word of English would be satisfactory, and they received the offer with great enthusiasm, presuming that the king meant one of their own flesh and blood.

His queen, about to give birth to a child, was hurried to the famous Caernarvon castle, where 600 years ago Edward II., the first prince of Wales, was born. Thereupon King Edward, carrying the newly born babe on the ramparts of the castle, announced to the multitude: "Here is your prince, born in your own country, who knows no word of English and who, I promise you, shall be reared by a Welsh foster mother and shall learn your language. Accept you him as your prince?"

In all the six centuries intervening the eldest son of the king of England has been invested and known as the Prince of Wales. In the year 1911 the present Prince of Wales and the future king of England was invested on the same spot as his predecessor 600 years ago.—T. Owen Charles in National Magazine.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by the Official Scribe

(By the Official Scribe.)

A GOOD TURN-OUT.

Representatives from the Moulders, Patternmakers, Carpet Weavers, Printers, Theatrical Workers, Bricklayers and Masons, Tailors, Barbers, Bartenders, Electrical Workers 261, Musicians, Electrical Workers 522, Machinists were present this week when President David Moore declared the meeting open.

CREDENTIALS PRESENTED.

On behalf of the Council the President welcomed the following delegates:

From the I.B.E.W., No. 261, Representatives Scriven, Morrison, Lyburn, Davis and Keys.

From the I.B.E.W. No. 522, Representatives Mann, Hewson, Guerin, Smith and Beatty.

From the International Alliance of Stage Employes, No. 542, Representative J. Brady.

From the American Federation of Musicians, No. 191, Representative Nicholls.

A NEW LOCAL BUSINESS PROPOSITION.

A communication from the Union Label Stores Company, Limited, announced that the initiatory venture of the company would take place this week and a store opened on Yonge street, Toronto, where nothing but Union Label goods would be exploited. The promoters felt that organized labor demanded a business of this kind, knowing that nothing of the sweat shop product would be tolerated within its precincts. They could supply their needs with untroubled minds. Negotiations were on the way to open similar stores in London and St. Thomas, so the Council representing Peterborough's union workers instructed their secretary to write and ask an organizer to visit this rapidly developing union city and explain fully the proposition so that this burg may not be left behind.

GIRLS ARE ORGANIZING.

The formation of a local composed entirely of members of the gentler sex was reported. The delegates expressed themselves as willing to offer every encouragement to these plucky venturers into the stronghold of unionism and extended the glad hand, by granting a small favor that the lady helpers demanded. Now that the fair element is about to add their quota of assistance to their organized brothers, Peterborough bids fair to become a 100 per cent union town.

A TEMPORARY DISAPPOINTMENT

The Council met expecting an entertaining and instructive description of the President's visit to Montreal during the Trades and Labor Convention week. Such was not the case however, as the strenuousness of the week had left its mark on the delegate's constitution, so what David Moore saw, heard, and did will be given at the next meeting. Local representatives please take notice.

UNCLAIMED PRIZES.

There is a beautiful rug still in possession of the Council as it awaits the owner's claim. It was drawn for and the winning number is 407. The Co-operative Stores also wish to donate the prizes given by them, and would feel gratified if their early removal was made by the parties interested.

THE OPERA HOUSE DISPUTE.

A telegram announcing the arrival of Oscar Sheech 4th Vice-President of the Theatrical Employes was welcomed, as this event may probably lead to a settlement.

YOUNG ITALIAN MAY HAVE BEEN DROWNED

IS SAID TO HAVE ACTED QUEERLY

The mysterious disappearance of a young Italian is disturbing residents of Dublin street. It is feared that he may may been drowned.

Last Sunday morning a young Italian appeared in the yard of Mrs. Clark's residence at the foot of Dublin street and going to the river bank, stepped into a punt. He is described as of heavy build, dark, curley hair, fairly well dressed and about twenty years of age.

When accosted, he asked that he be permitted to wash his hands and face.

Mrs. Clark returned to the house but a few minutes later, noticed the man still in the punt. After a short time he departed.

He returned the following morning to the punt. He came again on Tuesday and told the children he was very hungry. He was given a lunch and he remained near the punt.

He was seen again on Wednesday morning about ten o'clock. That afternoon the boat was missing and after a search it was found the next day near the Quaker Oats Co. dams. The oars were in the water and the punt partly resting on a boom. Half a package of cigarettes was found in the boat.

From the actions of the young stranger, Mrs. Clark was of the opinion that he was weak-minded. He may have fallen out of the punt and met a watery grave.

The police department have been notified.

BLACKLISTER GOES TO JAIL

He Persisted in Declaration That He Told the Truth

Charged with being drunk while on the prohibited list, John Burns, a blacklister, faced Magistrate Dumble at Police Court this morning, and as a result of his inability to tell where he got his refreshments he was given a few days in jail.

He pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk, but maintained that he got his liquor from a stranger at the Grand Trunk station last night.

"How did you meet this stranger?" enquired the chief.

"Why, I walked up to him and asked him what time the train was coming in, and then we started talking," said the witness.

"What about the drink?" asked the chief.

"The man pulled out a bottle and asked me to have some, but I asked him to come around to the back of the station."

"You know most of the baggagemen around the station? Tell us who were there."

"Everybody, of course!"

Witness admitted getting liquor but couldn't remember where he got it.

On hearing that a few days in jail might have some effect on his memory, Burns remarked that he didn't see why they could send him to jail for telling the truth.

"Well, put me in jail for six months, yes, for a year or two if it will do you any good," he said.

"You make your own cotton," remarked his worship.

"There are others, too," was the retort of Burns.

J. M. Allen was fined $2 for breach of the automobile by-law on his plea of guilty. He was charged with not driving his car as near the curb as possible.

NEW SITE FOR BOOK ROOM

Criticized by Rev. C. E. Manning

Rev. C. E. Manning, assistant secretary of the Methodist Missionary Board in Toronto has written a letter to the Globe, in which he criticizes the selection made by the building committee of a site for the new Bookroom building.

The site is on the corner of John and Queen street. This says Mr. Manning, is perhaps the worst position that could be found in Toronto from a business point of view.

As the plans are all out and contracts are coming in for the work, Mr. Manning's public protest has thrown the whole arrangements into confusion. A great many ministers and laymen are in favor of Mr. Manning's contention, and a deputation of these will wait upon the Book Steward and the committee to beg of them to reconsider their selection.

Mr. Manning is a brother of Rev. H. M. Manning, who was a few years ago stationed at Peterborough.

New gas mantles, if immersed in vinegar and hung up to dry, will give a more brilliant light and last longer.

When You Burn Your Cake.

It sometimes happens that even with care the bottom of a cake or bread is burned. Do not try to use a knife, but take a coarse grater and grate the burned surfaces with it, and the burned part will be taken off without breaking or disfiguring the cake.

"BUNTY PULLS THE STRINGS"

On Saturday, Oct. 11th, Peterborough will have as an attraction the dramatic sensation of two continents in the out-of-the-ordinary "Bunty Pulls the Strings."

The play is by Graham Moffat, a Scotch writer and actor, and is now in its second year at the Haymarket Theatre in London, England. New York celebrated its 450th performance a short time ago at the Comedy Theatre, and Chicago revelled in a "Bunty" season for six months.

The title arises from the fact that "Bunty" solves all domestic entanglements that occur during the course of the comedy, in other words, she "Pulls the Strings." Bunty is the daughter of a Scotch village grocer. Bunty's father, Tammas Biggar, is being induced to marry one Susie Simpson, who, years before, gave Tammas some money to invest for her, but he used it to pay off his son's debts instead. At the same time there appears Eelen Dunlop to whom Tammas was engaged to be married. Bunty, who has a love affair of her own, now steps in and straightens out the complications.

The entire action takes place in two days, one of which is a doleful Scotch Sabbath. A special Saturday matinee will be given also.

THEATRICAL

Surrounded by an abundance of pretty girls who were elegantly costumed and could sing and dance and principals who were prominent throughout the entire three acts the Pink Lady danced and sang herself into the favor of a large audience at the Grand Opera House last night. Her exquisite vocal and violin renditions of Beautiful Lady demanded repeated encores, and altogether Miss Olga DeBaugh proved a big favorite.

Among the other musical numbers that caught on with the big audience were, "Im going to be married in June," "The Girl by the Saskatchewan," "Donny Did, Donny Didn't," "The Kiss Waltz," and "I Like It." The costumes and stage dressings were very beautiful.

CHICAGO PRISONER MAKES AN APPALLING CONFESSION

Ex-Convict Not Only Admits Murder for Which He is Arrested, but Also Tells Without Emotion of the Slaughter of Two of His Four Wives, Six Other Women and Five Men.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—A man variously known as "Henry Spencer," "Skulpala," and "Joseph Burke," an ex-convict, who was arrested Saturday night, made a confession last evening to the police that he had killed Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat, a dancing teacher, whose dead body was found near Wayne, a suburb, for whose murder her husband has been held in jail for ten days. He also confessed he had committed from 12 to 14 other murders. Among his victims were two policemen. Many of the murders were committed within the last year.

The confession, if true, clears up many of the mysteries that have baffled the police department. This astonishing man could not remember the exact number of the tragedies. The list he recalled is as follows:

Mrs. Rexroat, Patrolman Pennell, Patrolman Devine, Fannie Thompson, a woman whose body was found near the county hospital, a broker whose body was found in Jackson Park, a woman found in the drainage canal, two girls in Delavan, Wis., a woman found back of the stock yards, one woman at Fort Montgomery, N.Y., one man in alley way in Van Buren street, near Morgan; one man and one woman five years ago in a rooming-house.

Spencer is a mild-appearing man, 32 years of age, nearly 16 of which he has passed in prison. He is smooth shaven, of medium height, wears glasses and carefully dressed. He had $260 in his possession when caught and states that he has gained about $7,000 from murders and robberies during the last year, without counting diamonds of much value, which, he says, he has given to women of his acquaintance or sold to chance acquaintances. He has been a frequenter of the most popular cafes in Chicago and was known as a wine buyer.

"I found some of my most profitable victims in the best places," he says, without a sign of emotion.

Spencer does not drink or smoke tobacco, but says that every few days he would smoke opium. At the time of his confession he had not had any opium for two days and added that when he did smoke the effect lasted only a couple of hours, and that none of his crimes were committed excepting when he was clear-headed.

He showed not the slightest excitement when being questioned. When asked how he killed his victims he replied:

"If I could get them coming upstairs I found a hammer handy. If I was alongside them I used a gun and sometimes if the girl was not strong I would tie her up and choke her so as to have the least trouble. I cannot say how many persons I have killed. I am telling you men all I remember just now, but there may have been others."

Among his other crimes Spencer admitted being the burglar who tied two women and a man to their bed over a Milwaukee candy store recently and setting fire to the house after shooting one of them. The firemen just succeeded in rescuing the prisoners. He also told of numerous recent robberies, including those in four Thompson restaurants and at the Astor restaurant.

"I have been married four times and killed two of my wives," he said.

The police, while in doubt as to the full truth of Spencer's story, are confident they have found a wholesale murderer, and that he will be proved to have killed at least several of those whose deaths he described in a long confession last night.

Spencer's confession was so startling that it probably would have received no credence had not the bloody suitcase and the revolver confirmed at least part of his statement.

"I intended to kill Mrs. A. J. Scafield, the proprietor of the rooming-house where I have been living," he said. "If I had not been arrested at just this time, I would have killed her."

JUDGE GORHAM

Milton Jurist Passes Away After Long Illness

TORONTO, Oct. 6.—In the death of Judge Thomas Ambrose Milne Gorham, at his residence "Fels-garth," at Milton Saturday, Halton County loses possibly its most popular and influential citizen. Since last Christmas Judge Gorham had been unable to perform his judicial duties, and he passed away quietly Saturday evening. His case was diagnosed as cancer of the stomach.

Born 59 years ago in the village of Orwell, near St. Thomas, Ont., the late judge at an early age entered the law office of Morse, Maclennan & Downey of this city. A few years later after graduating he went to Winnipeg, where he was in the employ of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and later formed the law partnership of Gorham & Ware at Port Arthur, where for a number of years a successful practice was maintained. He was at one time mayor of Port Arthur. He was appointed crown attorney for Thunder Bay district and about 12 years ago was elevated to the bench as judge of Halton County with headquarters at Milton, which position he held until his death.

Always a Liberal in politics, he was on several occasions offered the Liberal nomination for the House of Commons in Thunder Bay district, but always declined the honor. In religion he was a Presbyterian and was superintendent of the Sunday school at Milton.

He is survived by his widow and a little daughter. His mother is yet alive, and a sister in Chicago and a brother at Swift Current compose the other members of the family.

TO CORNER RADIUM.

Three Million Dollar Company Is Organizing To Secure Monopoly.

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—Telegrams from London tell of a plan to form a large corporation for the monopoly of the existing and future supply of radium throughout the world.

The company is to be called the "European Radium, Limited," and the capital is to be $3,750,000, of which one-third will be offered for public subscription, at par, simultaneously in London, Vienna and other capitals. One of the Austrian promoters of the project is Baron Geza Radivanski, director of the Hungarian National Bank.

Apparently the future Emperor of Austria, Archduke Franz Ferdinand, has a hand in the deal, inasmuch as his business manager, Ferdinand Rainer, will be the company's general representative for the dual monarchy.

Prof. Ebeler of Heidelberg and Prof. Sommer of Vienna will be members of the scientific Advisory Board.

The company's business will include the acquiring of mines and deposits capable of producing radioactive substances, as well as getting control of patents and processes connected with the production of radium. The outspoken purpose of the promoters is to obtain and maintain a world-wide monopoly in respect to radium. Negotiations with the Austrian Minister of Public Works are said to be still pending.

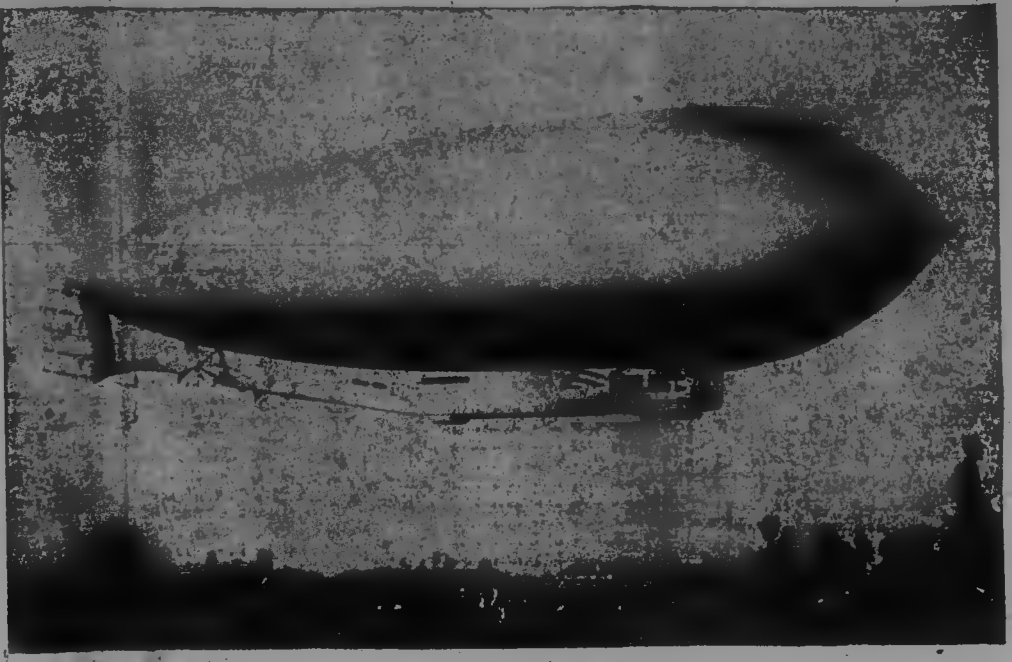
THE NEW ITALIAN DIRIGIBLE



Captain Murray Sueter, director of the Air Department of the British Navy, and Engineer-Lieutenant Aldwell have been attending on behalf of the British Admiralty a series of trial flights made near the new "Forlanini" airship. The vessel has a gas capacity of 400,000 cubic feet, and combines many of the advantages of the rigid and non-rigid types. The flights were of three hours' duration each, and they are stated to have been very successful. The envelope is of the fish shaped pattern. A strong steel girder runs its whole length and, with the cabins and engine room, which are grafted on to it, forms the keel of the vessel. The car, which is completely enclosed and has windows, is divided into fourteen compartments. Looked at from a distance, the cabins appear to be part of the gasbag.

ALDERMAN GETS JAIL AND FINE FOR BIGAMY

An American Divorce Valueless as a Defence By Him

VANCOUVER, Oct. 6.—Charged with bigamously marrying Jessie Bailey, a young clerk in his employe, ex-Ald. Sidney Miller was Saturday sentenced by Judge McInnes to undergo one hour's imprisonment and pay a fine of $100.

Miller, who was alderman for Ward Eight for three years, and who has been for some time postmaster at Adele, went through the form of marriage with Miss Bailey in July of this year, following an agreement with his wife that they were to live apart. He obtained a divorce in Seattle, but the American divorce was valueless as a defence.

BRIGANDS SURROUNDED

Chinese Government Troops Prepared To Rescue Missionaries.

PEKIN, Oct. 6.—The missionaries at Fanching, in the Province of Hu-Peh, in reply to the inquiry sent to them by the American charge d'Affaires here telegraphed Saturday that the amount of the ransom demanded by the Chinese brigands at Tsaoyang for the release of the American and Norwegian missionaries in captivity is unknown. They say they can give no fresh information because Rev. C. Stokstad and Rev. Mr. Johnson who went towards Tsaoyang to communicate with the brigands have not returned.

A despatch from Hankow says that the brigands at Tsaoyang number 2,000, and the Government troops surrounding them total 3,000 men. Gen. Li Yuen Heng, vice-president of the Chinese Republic, believes the force of soldiers will be sufficient, as the brigands are undisciplined and poorly organized. The troops took with them a number of machine guns.

FORTY THOUSAND

Torontonians Prepare Big Petition for Gibson's Life

TORONTO, Oct. 6.—With the day set for his eexcution but four days distant, a renewed and vigorous effort is being made to have the death sentence imposed upon Charles Gibson for the murder of Joseph Rosenthal commuted to life imprisonment.

"There never was such spontaneous effort displayed in the history of Toronto," said Mr. T. Herbert Lennox, K.C., last night, a few minutes before he left for Ottawa to make a final plea on behalf of the condemned man. "It is almost incredible to think that it would be possible to obtain almost forty thousand names in such short space of time."

Last night his Worship Mayor Hocken sent the following message to the Minister of Justice at Ottawa: "The people of Toronto are deeply concerned over the fate of Charles Gibson. They are practically unanimous in the desire that the death sentence be commuted to life imprisonment, and on their behalf I respectfully urge the petition which leaves here for Ottawa to-night."

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 6.—Four employes of the G. T. R. were arrested Friday afternoon on a charge of stealing from freight cars in the local yards. In the police court yesterday morning all pleaded guilty and were remanded until Wednesday for sentence.

STILL AT RECIPR CITY.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Revives Time Honored Topic.

ST. JEAN, Que., Oct. 6.—Canada's continued need for reciprocity with other countries, particularly with the United States, was the keynote of the hour's speech delivered here on Saturday afternoon by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Liberal leader got an enthusiastic welcome and his speech was frequently punctuated by applause.

After having replied to the address of welcome delivered to him on behalf of the city of St. Jean by Mayor Papineau, Sir Wilfrid lost no time in plunging into his main address.

He first sketched over the political history of St. Jean and then made the first important declaration in his speech by a brief reference to the Chateauguay fight. The result, he said, would not be a justification of the navy policy so much as of the policy of reciprocity taken up by the Liberal Government.

Continuing, Sir Wilfrid said "When the Liberal party was in power up to two years ago we added new and glorous pages to Canada's history. The eyes of the entire world were on Canada, for we never doubted the wealth of the country, of the farmers, of the workingmen by our administration. Has the Conservative Government benefited the country? What has it done since it came into office? What about the tariff, Canada's greatest problem? Did we not try to get better facilities for Canadian trade? Did we not try to open foreign markets, particularly the vast markets of the United States?

"We wanted foreign markets then and we want them now. By its previous modification of the tariff the Liberal party contributed more to the prosperity of the country than any other Government measure has since done. How much more prosperity would not a still greater modification of the tariff bring?

Sir Wilfrid referred to the navy question.

"The Government," he said, "may say what they like about their $35,000,000 to save the Empire, but for me I still maintain that Canada with her growing importance as a nation needs a national navy."

WANT PRAYERS FOR WOMEN

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Because the clergy do not include women in their prayers, a party of suffragettes yesterday interrupted the morning services at Westminster Abbey by chanting a prayer for the women now in prison.

The party rose as the Litany was being recited and ignored a request to desist from singing. At the conclusion the women left the abbey quietly. Addressing a crowd outside, one of them said: "This is nothing to what will happen unless women are included in the clergy's prayers."

Woman Expires Chopping Wood.

TORONTO, Oct. 6.—While chopping wood in her back yard at 185 Richmond street, yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Elizabeth Judd suddenly collapsed. She was conveyed in an unconscious condition to St. Michael's Hospital in the police ambulance, where she expired a few minutes after her arrival. The pulmotor was applied but without effect.

The cause is given as heart failure, and an inquest is unlikely.

Two Aviators Killed.

RHEIMS, France, Oct. 6.—By the capsizing of a biplane near here yesterday a military pilot named Hurtard was instantly killed. A passenger, Sapper Moret, was seriously injured.

A sapper of engineers, Laverlochere, was killed at Chaumont by a fall from a monoplane.

FIRST SNAG IN THE BILL

One U. S. Tariff Clause is Ruinous if Literally Taken

Differential Duties Giving a Reduction of Five Per Cent. on Goods Carried by American Ships Causes Worry at Washington — Trouble Ahead With Commerce Treaty Countries.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Officials of the Treasury Department are at sea to know what Congress actually meant by the provision of the new tariff law allowing five per cent. reduction of duties on goods imported in American ships, with the condition that the differential should not be construed to abrogate or impair any existing treaty between the United States and a foreign nation.

Literally interpreted it is declared the provision would give a five per cent. decrease to goods in American bottoms and automatically grant the same privilege to the ships of the many nations whose treaties with the United States guarantee no discrimination between their vessels and those of this country. This construction, which would be a horizontal reduction of five per cent. in the tariff for importation from most of the great countries of the world, involves probably ten millions in revenue for the Government, creating a deficit instead of a surplus in the Treasury, as has been estimated by the tariff framers. The question undoubtedly will be referred to President Wilson and Attorney-General McReynolds and ultimately will reach the United States Supreme Court.

The State and Treasury Departments are in consultation over the effect of the provision, the first snag struck in the new law. Avoiding a literal construction, some officials contend that Congress meant that the reduction should be allowed only in cases where the United States did not have a treaty that would interfere.

Whatever the interpretation of the provision for nations with these guarantees of equality, it is pointed out that other serious questions arise as to twenty-three nations whose treaties with this country do not guarantee against discrimination.

BLACKBURN IS DEAD

Tom Riley Who Shot Bartender Charged With Murder

London Bartender Who Refused Railroader and Was Shot In Revenge Succumbs To His Injuries—London Detectives Cleverly Run Down Their Man—Crime Was a Premeditated One.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 6.—George Blackburn is dead, and Tom Riley, for whom the police started a search soon after the shooting in the Hotel Cecil Friday night, is in jail, charged with murder. It may be possible to have commitment in time to have the case tried at the Fall Assizes, which commence this week. The death of Blackburn and the arrest of Riley were sequels of the shooting affray of Friday in the hotel bar when Riley was refused liquor and shot the bartender. The suspect was captured before daybreak on Saturday, and the victim succumbed to the bullet wounds at Victoria Hospital shortly before seven o'clock Saturday evening.

It is known that a number of people saw Riley after the shooting, and to prevent his being informed of their actions, the detectives "laid low," although knowing that he had taken refuge in the railway yards, no trains were allowed to go out without being searched by police officers. Riley is a Kansas man, and knowing that John Hendricks, who operates a taxi service, is also a Kansas railwayman, the detectives anticipated a call from Riley, and early in the evening they advised Mr. Hendricks. Eventually some of Riley's friends did send in a call for a motor car to get Riley at three o'clock and take him to the main line of the Michigan Central Railway. Detective Harry Down accompanied the chauffeur to the meeting place at the Egerton street crossing of the Grand Trunk. Detective Sergeant Thomas Nickle advanced northward on foot, and as the car approached, Riley was seen in waiting. Down had left the car in time to avoid being seen and he pinioned the man's arms before he knew he was there, while at the same moment Nickle stepped out and presented a revolver to Riley's surprised face.

The murder of Blackburn was not a hasty affair as at first reported. Riley, after being put out, went nearly a mile to his room for his revolver and told several persons he was going to kill the bartender.

Sudden Death Reported.

GALT, Oct. 6.—A despatch from Elmira conveyed news of the sudden death of Richard Little, a molder, long-time resident, who worked in various local shops. He left Galt for Elmira two weeks ago. Death occurred in Williams Co.'s molding shop. A widow and one child survive.

IS MILITARISM BARBARISM?

Someone has had the temerity to question the infallibility of the Toronto Star's views on military matters. A long and sensible letter is published in the editorial columns of that journal interspersed with criticisms and explanations.

It was quite an original way of printing a letter from a correspondent, and it was perhaps the best method of breaking the full force of the argument. It was a mean trick, and was as ill-mannered as if one were to interrupt another in the course of a speech for fear of its effect upon the audience.

The letter ought to have been printed separately and dealt with as a concrete piece of reasoning. We do not regard the Toronto Star as any authority upon military or naval questions, and possibly it knows its own limitations. But it has usually dealt fairly enough with opponents.

As for its past criticisms of Hon. Sam Hughes, which the writer of the letter objects to, these we have always taken with a grain of party salt, for it would never do for a Liberal journal to give credit to a Tory minister.

But the Star goes on to emphasize its objection, not only to the present Minister of Militia, but to the militia itself and to all things military, even down to a pop-gun, viz. the boy scouts.

The days of war are over and the millenium has set it—that seems to be the Star's vision of the world to-day. Don't teach boys to fight and they won't want to fight, is the moral of the editor's reasoning.

Our own experience of boys, and of men, is that most of them are naturally barbarians, and it is only discipline of some kind that has kept them from periodically slaying and eating each other. War used to be an occupation and a means of livlihood. It has now become an art, and the finer art it becomes the less practical it will be, and the less chance there is of men wanting to bring it into operation.

The history of the Indian is a history of horrible and perpetual bloodshedding between the various tribes; the same may be said of the African. But when the military man came in and made the Indian toe the line and fight fair, war lost all its sport and wild intoxication. The soul of militarism is discipline, and while militarism can become an evil and a menace when it gets the upper-hand, it is nevertheless an indispensible ingredient of civilization, and indeed there seems to be no civilization without it.

The Star says militarism is a relict of barbarism. The fighting spirit may be a relict of barbarism, and it is a relict which will not down, and is liable to break out at any moment in the most docile races. Militarism is the curb to that spirit. It very often satisfies that spirit without the shedding of blood. Many a sham-fight has saved a real fight. It is safe to say that there would have been no South African war if the Boers had been a well-trained military people, for they would have counted the odds and would have known that although guerrilla tactics might dog concert and slaughter the Britisher, the military machine would crush them in the end.

Canada may never want to fight, and may never have to fight. The Star may be a disciple of Pastor Russell and believe that swords shall soon be turned into ploughshares, and Canada be peacefully engaged throughout the millenium raising "miracle wheat," and building barns to put it in, but there was a man in the parable who did this and he was called a "fool."

"Be ye also ready," is a military as well as a religious command.

THE BOOK ROOM SITE

Most people will agree with Rev. C. E. Manning's contention that the new Methodist Book-room ought to have a more central position than the one selected by the committee on Queen and John Streets, in Toronto.

The Bookroom is the largest publishing house in Canada, and it represents a church which has been foremost in pioneer religious work, and has to-day more places of worship than any other denomination in the Dominion.

No doubt some other convenient site will be secured and that John Wesley will have as worthy a monument to his memory in Toronto as the Wesleyans have raised in the heart of London.

ABOLITION

There seems to be some dissension in the Liberal ranks as to the advisability of retaining, or at least booming the abolish-the-bar policy at bye-elections. Thus far the cry has not brought much grist to the party mill, and a great many Liberals, including some of the newspapers, are of the opinion that the abolish-the-bar policy ought itself to be abolished.

But there are other more conscientious or diplomatic Liberal journals who will stand by the old guns and abolish anything rather than give in to the ignorant "seventy-five per cent."

QUALITY NOT QUANTITY

The emigration authorities are at last waking up to the importance of choosing our emigrants and of doing it in a way that will entail less trouble to the officials and less disappointment and often disaster to those intending to become Canadian citizens.

Hitherto our methods have been too lax, owing to a desire to get a big population at any cost. Quality and not quantity ought to be the passport to Canadian citizenship. If this high standard were insisted upon we would find a better type of European or American coming into Canada. So far from emigration being regarded as a calamity or a last resort, which it has been, men and women of Britain would esteem it a privilege to be permitted to come over and live the larger and freer life of our Provinces.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Globe is always trying to prove that there is no "emergency." At last it has come round to the side of the Montreal Star. In an editorial the other day it said: "Canada is emerging into Nationhood." So it does believe in an emergence, see, after all.

"If Messrs. Cooper and Hawkes wish to leave the imprint of their Oxfords on the sands of time they should adopt the methods of the famous evangelist "Billy" Sunday. If they would reach the heart of the people they should at their future meeting employ a giant and a dwarf as ushers, and enlist the services of a good comic singer." — Saturday night.

"Mrs Pankhurst is now undergoing a rest cure in France. We understand that she prefers this to arrest cure in England."— Punch.

MR. FISHER AND CHATEAUGUAY

Hon. Sidney Fisher, ex-Minister of Agriculture in the Laurier Government, has been nominated by the Liberals of Chateauguay county to contest the vacancy for the House of Commons. The Conservatives nominated last week Mr. James Morris, who was defeated by the late Mr. Brown in 1911. The election will take place a week from Saturday. It should tell something about the trend of political feeling in Quebec. The constituency has always been Liberal. The majority last time was a close thing, only 40, owing doubtless to the fact that the following of Mr. Bourassa was leagued with the Conservatives. Prior to that the Liberal majorities had nearly always been very large. The figures since Confederation have been as follows, the Hon. Luther Holton being the member from 1867 to 1891, and J. P. Brown from 1891 until his death recently. The Liberal majorities have been as follows:

Year	Majority
1867	427
1872	238
1874	392
1878	179
1882	61
1887	353
1891	98
1896	700
1900	420
1904	464
1908	305
1911	40

It will be seen that for 20 years, the Liberal majority has been in the hundreds, excepting last time. The constituency is not a populous one. There are less than 4,000 voters. A majority of 400 in such a constituency is equivalent to a majority of 2,000 in a constituency like Ottawa. Not much chance exists of upsetting that sort of balance, but the polling in the constituency should at least give a good line regarding the effect of Mr. Bourassa's influence. Last time it was with the Conservatives. It will be against them on Saturday week.

The complexion of the constituency is a peculiar one. About two-thirds of the people—10,000 out of 15,000—are French-Canadian. Nevertheless by an old convention, the understanding and practice in both political parties is that an Englishman shall be nominated for the Dominion House, and a French-Canadian for the Quebec Legislature. It can be understood, however, that as the French-Canadian population is two-thirds of the whole, the influences prevailing in French-speaking Canada are likely to decide election results, and up to 1911 the general feeling in Quebec in support of the Laurier Government had swelled the Liberal majorities in Chateauguay. Then as already said, the Bourassa rebellion came in and nearly upset for the moment the Liberal dominance.

The French Liberal press in Quebec have set out in the most approved partisan buccaneer fashion to excite racial feeling in Chateauguay against the Conservative party. Le Canada, the chief Liberal organ in Montreal, is picturing the Borden Government as the malignant and persistent enemy of French-Canadians. That this sort of campaign may result in a restoration of the former scale of Liberal majorities in Chateauguay is quite possible. If it doesn't, the meaning will be that Quebec is largely back into the straight Conservative ranks. The personalities of the Candidates will not count for much either way. Mr. Morris is a popular man. M. Fisher is a weighty and able candidate whose prominence in the party offsets the fact that to the constituency he is an outsider. But the factors which will decide matters in Chateauguay will be wider than the respective merits of the party nominees.

SOMETHING LIKE AN ORATOR

Dr. J. A. MacDonald on the Platform

In a sketch of Dr. J. A. Macdonald, the editor of the Toronto Globe, we are told that Dr. Macdonald is the most popular speaker on the American continent to-day before representative and serious gatherings of importance. "Sometimes he paces to and fro on the platform like a lion caged. Again he doubles up like a jacknife, or crouches like a leopard about to spring. Then he thrusts both hands deep into his pockets and throws back his head. Now he is viciously stabbing the air with his forefinger, driving in his point, or those long arms swing like pendulums. Again he frenziedly rumples his hair or clutches it by handfuls. There is no predicting what his next gesture will be. He slaps his thigh like a man telling a story to a group of his cronies. I have seen him stand for more than a minute on his left leg, kicking the calf of it with his right toe!" —British Weekly.

"BATS" IN THE UPPER STOREY

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. 6— The purchase by school boards of skeletons of birds, beasts and fish was strongly critizized by Chairman Dwyer, of the finance committee, as needless expenditure to impose upon people the majority of whom are obliged to work. Mr. Dwyer considered the stipulation regarding the purchase of the skeleton of a bat ridiculous and went so far as to remark that the gentlemen of the department had bats in the upper story. Mr. Dwyer is a responsible citizen.

LOST NECKLACE LUCKY FINDER

The story of how the precious pearl neckklace, worth over half a million dollars, which was mysteriously stolen in the post between Paris and London, found last week, sounds like a fairy tale. It was lying on the pavement in St. Paul's road, Highbury, London, Eng., wrapped up carelessly in white tissue paper. A man on his way to his work poked the parcel with his stick, and, examining it more closely, discovered fifty-eight of the missing pearls. The original necklace consisted of sixty-one graduated pearls, and three were loose in the box in which the necklace was sent through the post. The number of pearls belonging to the necklace actually returned was fifty seven and with them was one of the loose pearls, making fifty-eight altogether. Two were purchased in the negotiations which led up to the arrest and appearance at Bow street of four prisoners alleged to be connected with the theft of the necklace. At Lloyd's the news of the recovery of the pearls was received with cheering by the underwriters. Lloyd's offered $50,000 for information leading to a conviction or recovery of the stolen property. On the basis of recovery $40,000 would go to the finder.

"I wish to state to you the facts and nothing but the facts. I bless the day a friend brought me a 50 cent bottle of RHEUMA. I used one-half of it and it did me more good than all the other medicines I ever tried. I had been afflicted with Rheumatism all over my body for more than 25 years. I could not walk, and was a broken-down man. During that time I spent a small fortune, trying to get rid of the horrible disease, but without help. However, RHEUMA reached my case and I thank God I can again use my feet and do my work.

"Before taking your medicine I was staying with a daughter on her farm, and despite her loving efforts to tempt my appetite I could not eat. After I had taken RHEUMA two days my appetite returned. Yours for prosperity."—Prof. R. H. Kolling, 7 S. Ninth St., Richmond, Ind., Oct. 10, 1912.

ARD FOR HONESTY

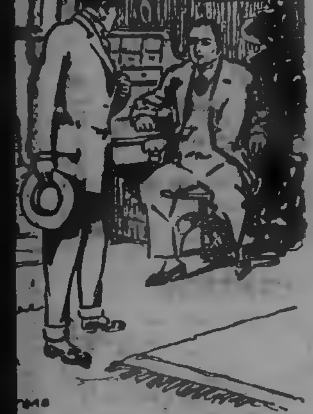
g Politician Who Refused ribe Is Given a Coveted Nomination.

By H. M. EGBERT.

as to be a close election in Porurg—on that everyone was d. Higgins had represented the in the legislature for fifteen but Higgins had got out of the and gone to New York to settle and the opposing party hoped atch the victory. Their candiwas Pleat, a man of reputed iny and much wealth, the owner huge eighteen-story Pleat buildwhich could not have been match r size within five hundred miles Louis. And Pleat had been the successful mayor the city had known. He had cleaned up Porurg; he had wiped out the slum icts; he had forced through the ance for resurveying and regradhe city streets in spite of an anistic city government. Higgins' seemed likely to nominate Ben o succeed him, and Pleat hoped atch the victory out of his hands. d it seemed probable that he d, for Benton would stand little e against the forceful ex-mayor. here was no man of known abilithin the party ranks to succeed ing, and Benton was a compro candidate. Benton would probably ominated the following week, and t's adherents counted the victory on.

is was the situation as it outlintself to Roger Hewett. Hewett a surveyor by occupation, but unhe passing of Pleat's ordinance had only paid his office rent by gaging the little home which he his girl wife had purchased with small capital when they were ied, a year before. The house mortgaged to the Indemnity com, and Pleat had a controlling fin in this, as in most other indus and commercial enterprises in ersburg.

e convention which was expected ominate Benton had been in ses some days and would not com its labors until the following . Although he knew the folly of onizing Pleat further, Hewett been assuming a leading part in liberations. Pleat had, indeed, conveyed his sense of displeas-



Can't Buy Me That Way, Mr. Pleat."

He had used more subtle meas also. That morning the manag of three banks had refused Hew an increase upon his mortgage. ough the value of the property ranted this. He must wait till election, they told him. And t's company could and probably foreclose within a week.

ary," said Hewett to his young "the situation seems to be this: crawl to Pleat and get out of poli he'll probably let us stay on in ittle home and perhaps throw me work later. If he gets into the sture he can undoubtedly turn screw in either direction. If I t crawl—well, we'll have to look another home."

"I want you to do what is right, dear," his wife answered, and put her arms lovingly about his neck. "Just do what is right, Roger, and—never mind the home."

That had happened yesterday. Now Hewett sat in his barely furnished office fronting on the city square, studying some blue draught sheets that lay on the desk. But he was thinking harder than he was studying.

Nobody but Hewett knew that the great Pleat building encroached a foot and a half upon the city sidewalk. Nobody else cared. Nobody else would ever have dreamed of resurveying that section of the financial district of Portersburg. Yet this error meant that Pleat would have to shear off a foot and a half of his great building down a vertical line of eighteen stories.

He would merely have to remain silent. If his report went in it might or might not pass unnoticed. He knew that the chief surveyor, a creature of Pleat's, would at least withhold the discovery for a few weeks, until Pleat had carried the municipal and state tickets to victory. Then the ordinance would either be repealed or never acted on, and Hewett's report would be so much waste paper.

He had hardly reached his office the next morning before the telephone rang. Hewett took down the receiver. Pleat was at the other end.

"O, Mr. Hewett," he said, "would you be so kind as to step over to my office at once?" The tones were suave and bland—too suave for one of Pleat's overbearing disposition, the surveyor thought. Hewett stood considering.

"I'll be over in five minutes," he answered, after a moment's pause. "You can see me at once?"

"At once and alone," Pleat answered.

He was as good as his word, despite his manifold interests, for Hewett was agreeably conscious of being ushered past a dozen or more men of all kinds, financial magnates, political leaders, business men, into Pleat's fine office with its mahogany fittings and oriental rugs. Pleat rose and extended his hand.

"Sit down, Mr. Hewett," he said "The Indemnity company has, I understand, advanced you $4,000 on mortgage upon your home at 79 K street?"

"Yes, Mr. Pleat," the surveyor replied.

"And you have applied for an increase of $1,000. The matter was only brought to my attention yesterday. I have expressed the wish that this be granted, making the amount $5,000, with interest at 4 per cent, instead of 4½. But, Mr. Hewett, pardon my question, but how do you propose to pay this sum? The Indemnity company does not like to foreclose. Have you any work in view after your present task is completed?"

"No, sir," said Hewett, looking full at the smiling visage of the financier.

"Too bad!" sighed Pleat. "Of course, your unfortunate affiliation with the opposing party would preclude me, if I should win the election, from considering your interests. If you were offered the nomination as state surveyor, now—you wouldn't change your coat? No, of course not. But, Mr. Hewett, I understand that Mr. Blake is resigning from the water commission, a strictly non-partisan body. Suppose you were appointed to succeed him at once by Governor Briggs?"

Hewett's heart leaped. The salary was $5,000 a year!

"That would involve no sacrifice of principle on my part?" he asked, moistening his dry lips.

"None whatever," answered Pleat. "You would simply lay down your present office forthwith and step into your new one during the course of a day or two. Of course your successor would take over all your duties."

Hewett knew what was coming.

"For instance, you would probably be willing to recall your report of yesterday upon the survey of White street, which will not be acted on officially until the next meeting of the survey board?"

Hewett rose up.

"You can't buy me that way or any way, Mr. Pleat," he answered, taking his hat, and he saw Pleat's face grow purple. For a moment the financier hesitated; then he came forward with the agility of a boy. He was trembling, too.

"For $20,000," he whispered, and began plucking at his sleeve. "Come here! It's in my desk! Don't be a fool and cut your own throat, young man. Who's backing you in this? My God, it will cost me a quarter of a million if that report goes through. Your last chance!—and I'll make it $30,000, $40,000, any price within reason. Look here! It's all in bills and gold. Come and let me show you!"

Somehow Hewett escaped from the room. His last view was of the old man standing before his desk and tossing great bundles of bills hither and thither like an infuriated child.

Men came to see Hewett that afternoon and the next day and the next, and, in guarded language, unfolded various propositions to the effect that he should make peace with Pleat. Hewett showed them to the door. On the third day the Indemnity company served him with a foreclosure notice. Then he told Mary everything.

"You have done right, dear," she said. "You couldn't have done otherwise. And I'm proud of you. I couldn't live here happily if you had sold your soul to Pleat. We'll make another home somewhere—but one can never make honor of dishonor."

They packed their things and engaged a couple of rooms in a poorer part of the city.

It was the last day of the session and the nomination would be made that afternoon. As Hewett mounted the platform he became aware that there was an indefinable unrest in the air. The delegates were watching him and whispering together, something was brewing, someone had mooted something—everyone in the hall knew it except Hewett.

He did not know how bitterly he spoke, nor the impassioned nature of his plea for purer politics, a cleaner civic spirit. He thought that he was urging Benton's election on these grounds, but in reality he was pleading for his lost home and the homes of all who had to choose between dishonor and the happiness of those they loved.

He did not wait for the nomination, but, his duty done, left the hall. Outside the representatives of three papers were waiting for him. "Mr. Hewett!" one of the men began. He shook him off and left him. He tramped two miles through the rain, went up to his rooms, and sat down dismally upon the unpacked furniture.

Men were tramping up the stairs. The door was thrown open. Mary stood there; with her were a half-dozen men. He knew their faces; he had seen them at the convention. His brain was whirling. Who were they? The well-known names escaped him.

"Mr. Hewett," said somebody, "the convention has tendered you the nomination for the legislature."

"He accepts," he heard his wife cry triumphantly. She came toward him and kissed him in the presence of all.

"My wife has answered for me—God bless her—gentlemen," he said.

Wants Divorce From Priest.

An extraordinary case has just been heard by Mr. Justice Bucknill in the Divorce Division. It was a suit for nullity of marriage brought by a young girl against her husband, a Roman Catholic priest. Previous to going into the matter the judge, owing to the recent decision as to hearing cases in camera, intimated that all persons who were not directly interested in the proceedings should leave the court. Most of those present accordingly went outside. The petitioner was Annie Rosetta Fortemps, otherwise Goodwill, and the respondent was Louis Fortemps.

Mr. Barnard said that the petitioner when a young girl of 16 years of age was at a school at Slough, where she became acquainted with the respondent, a Roman Catholic priest. He made love to the girl, and she had to complain to the people at the school with reference to it. After the petitioner left the school on November 27, 1909, she and the respondent went through a ceremony of marriage at the Lambeth Registry Office. The petitioner was then 19, but the marriage, it was alleged, was never consummated. At Windsor the respondent passed off the lady as his ward. The judge granted a decree of nullity, with costs.

OWNS BROAD ACRES.

New Duke of Sutherland Inherits An Immense Fortune.

A goodly inheritance is that which comes to the Marquess of Stafford, fifth Duke of Sutherland, who, at twenty-five years of age, succeeds his father, the fourth Duke, who died recently.

Close upon a million and a half acres of land, and an income of nearly $750,000 a year, is the total of the riches and the estate which the young Duke inherits. In addition he becomes owner of five country mansions in Scotland and three in England. With one exception, of the Czar of Russia, he owns more land than any other person in Europe.

The secret of this immense wealth lies in the fact that the Gowers have always married money. Originally they were a simple Yorkshire family of good lineage. The first baronet, however, Sir Thomas Gower, married the heiress of the Stafford Levesons, and acquired Lillieshall with its coal fields and the great estate of Trentham.

The fourth baronet married Lady Jane Granville, one of the co-heiresses of the Earl of Bath, and his son was created Lord Gower and married into the ducal house of Rutland. The second Lord Gower was raised to an earldom and married three times, on each occasion to a lady better fortuned than her predecessor, while the second earl in the next generation did even better for himself, for he wedded the heiress of Scrop, first Duke of Bridgewater, and the great Bridgwater estates in Lancashire afterwards fell to his grandson.

While, however, the Gowers have thus linked wealth and matrimony, they have always shown keen business instinct, and the late Duke was no exception. Eschewing society, he lived quietly in retirement, developing his already immense estates. He was an enthusiastic Imperialist, taking a great interest in Canada, and every year visited this country, purchasing thousands of acres of land in Alberta and British Columbia.

His marriage to the Duchess of Sutherland, who owns in her own right nearly 150,000 acres, was a veritable romance, while at the same time it added one more to the long list of wealthy marriages contracted by the Gowers.

The late Duke was thirty-three years of age, and one of the most notable matrimonial catches in society, when, in 1884, he went on a visit to the Earl and Countess of Rosslyn. The day after his arrival he went to tea in the school room. There he saw the sixteen-year-old Lady Millicent St. Clair Erskine, a young girl as witty and intelligent as she was pretty.

"Happy the wooing that's not long a-dooing," proving true in this case, for on her seventeenth birthday, the girl became Marchioness of Stafford, and ultimately Duchess of Sutherland when her husband succeeded to the title in 1892. King Edward and Queen Alexandra were at the wedding, the Duke of Fife being best man.

"The Amazing Duchess" is the title which has been applied to the Duchess of Sutherland, who is undoubtedly one of the most remarkable celebrities of the day, not even excepting her half-sister, the Countess of Warwick. Like the latter, the Duchess has distinct Socialistic tendencies.

"Years ago," she said, in one of her characteristic speeches, during the course of which she alluded to the necessity for certain social reforms and her longing to live in a cottage, "when I came inexperienced and enthusiastic amongst you, you called me 'Meddlesome Milly.' As far as a miserable Duchess could be an agitator, I strove to be one. The day is coming," she continued, "when no one will be grateful for the crumbs that have fallen from the rich man's table, and it will be a good day. We absolutely must advance, and we are advancing."

The new Duke, who last year married Lady Eileen Butler, the eldest daughter of the seventh Earl of Lanesborough, is a lieutenant in the 2nd Dragoon Guards, and a very keen sportsman as well as soldier.

"Jail the Next Time" Says Magistrate to Women

These are troublesome days on Elm street. Several women residents, it would appear have agreed to disagree and hostilities have broken out repeatedly.

This morning, Magistrate Dumble had to listen to another outburst. The principals accused each other of perpetrating misdeeds of a most wrongful character.

One party struck the other with a stone, and also a murderous looking piece of tin which was exhibited in Court.

One of the opposite sex told in descriptive language how the women were always fighting.

"It's jail the next time," quoth His Worship in imposing a fine of $5 on the defendant.

PERSONAL

FELLOWSHIP TEA

Some 100 men attended the Fellowship Tea in St. John's schoolhouse yesterday afternoon. Canon Davidson occupied the chair. Short speeches were made by some of the members present, and also a very interesting report submitted by Messrs. Moore and Turner, on the Laymen's Convention.

The evening service in the church was of special interest to the men.

AWARD OF $8 IN WAGES' CASE

Judgment was given at police court this morning by Magistrate Dumble in favor of the complainant Gerald Dunford, in the Dunford vs. Pulkinghorn wages case. Dunford claimed $16 due him from Dr. Pulkinghorn, who put in a counter-claim of some $7.50 Magistrate Dumble on the evidence presented, reduced the counter-claim to $2 and awarded $8 to Dunford.

TWO CLASSES AT SEPARATE SCHOOL IN EAST CITY

About Forty Pupils Are in Attendance

The new Separate School in East City opened this morning with about 40 pupils in attendance. This school will for the present term include first class and part second. These classes will for the present be under the guidance of Muiss Plunket. The Review interviewed His Lordship Bishop O'Brien this morning and found this step was taken, not because of over-crowding at St. Peter's, but because there was no accommodation for the many small children in East City, many of whom find it hard to attend St. Peter's in the winter months.

His Lordship also remarked that should circumstances call for more classes, they would be immediately formed.

STRENGTH OF HUMAN BONE

More Powerful In Some Ways Than the Stanchest Oak.

Human bones are really tremendously strong and possessed of marvelous resisting power. Indeed, the bones of the fairest, most delicate looking woman are stronger than the strongest oak.

Of course a bone is hollow, and this is one of the chief reasons it resists such extreme weights. For instance a small bone which is no more than a square millimeter in diameter will hold in suspension without breaking some thirty-five pounds, while a stick of best oak of similar width will not hold more than twenty pounds. Indeed, the average bone of the average man is stronger by one half than that of solid oak.

The principle on which our bones are constructed, being made hollow and consequently stronger than if they were solid and heavier, is the same mechanics have followed the world over. Constructive engineers employ tubes instead of solid cylinders.

In the case of animals thousands of years ago one reason of their bulky frame is attributed by scientists as due to the fact their bones were solid and added to their weight.—Chicago Tribune.

An electric process for keeping the hulls of ships free from barnacles has been invented. Boats fitted with the apparatus it is claimed, will never be hampered in speed by barnacles, and the life of the ship's hull will be longer.

ALL SAINTS' CHURCH REV. R. B. GROBB'S SERMON

Impressions and Appreciation by a Taster of Sermons

All Saints' is a growing church in more ways than one. It has a growing parson and a growing people, and also a growing steeple. The steeple as yet is only a dream, but it is a dream which is built upon a very substantial base, and when the dream is realized it ought to endure "while the earth remaineth."

All Saints' Church gives one the impression of stunted strength until you know that it has not finished growing. The same may be said of its rector, although physically he is of fine architectural proportions.

MILITARY PREACHERS.

Rev. R. B. Grobb, like many of the greatest preachers is of military build, Robertson, of Brighton; Newman, (whom Mr. Grobb resembles somewhat) and many others were of the military type. Robertson in fact, sometimes, regretted that he did not go in for soldiering as he first intended. But Mr. Grobb does not only compare well with these giants, physically, he has height and breadth mentally and spiritually. He has not yet attained his full stature, but he is growing like his church and that is a healthy condition.

All Saints' has been holding its harvest festival this last week, and as I had attended the other three Anglican churches on their festival occasions I thought I would take them all in. Last Wednesday was the "special" day when a special preacher conducted the service. But there was no need to go out of Peterborough for a preacher, for Mr. Grobb is as good as any that I have yet heard from the outside, and perhaps a little better.

"THOU FOOL."

Last night he preached from the text, "Thou Fool," as applied to the man who was about to pull down his barns and build greater, because he had much goods laid up for many years.

Mr. Grobb began by saying that this was one of the severest words used in Scripture. The word was used by St. Paul where he says "Some will ask how are the dead raised?—thou fool!" As if he had said: "Have you no eyes, can you not see? Do you stand there like a statue and cannot look around on nature, the sowing and reaping? What have you been doing? Have you been all your life with your head in a cash register? Have you had no time to look at the stars? 'One star differeth from another star in glory.' That was the kind of man St. Paul described as a "fool," and that was the kind of man whom Jesus called a fool in this parable.

He was not a bad man, a vicious or immoral man, he was rich, but he had got his money by fair dealing. He was a man with a career, who had great ambitions and had succeeded. He was a man with a career, who had obituary notice in the newspapers and a fine funeral.

Some one had suggested, said the preacher, that there will be three questions asked at the Judgment Day? "How much did you make? How did you make it? How did you spend it?" Money was not an evil in itself. Money was power, condensed, bottled-up power. "'I don't care how you made your money, but was God there when you made it?'"

THE SOUL AND THE BARN

"How did this man in the parable expend this power? "Let us read the thing again," said Mr. Grobb, impatiently. He is an impatient preacher. He wrestles with his theme and makes his hearers wrestle, too. "This man addressed his soul and said: 'Soul, thou hast much goods stored up for many years. I will pull down my barns and build greater,' as if he could confine his soul in a barn! The man had no soul, it was like opening the eye of a dead man and expecting to find the light of life there."

INTENSE IMPATIENCE

Some of the preacher's sentences were full of deep thought, and they were uttered with and intense earnestness, and, as I have said, impatience. He dealt with human responsibility, and the importance of the eternal in life. He emphasized the soul. Very pregnant was the passage where he said that the eternal was something deep down in the being which was ignited when it was brought in contact with that book," lifting up the small bible and striking it with his hand.

Mr. Grobb concluded by telling the story of Dan Crawford, who had been for twenty-two years lost in Africa, who on being asked what was the chief thing that he noticed after being so long away from civilization, said that he missed more than anything "the smile" which used to adorn the faces of business men twenty years ago. The smile meant the soul." "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his smile?"

PREACHERS WANTED

Mr. Grobb preached a good sermon. He is not perhaps fully appreciated as a preacher. But that is because, like his church, he is not full grown, but he is growing, for he is young and full of promise. The future of the Anglican Church in Canada, as in England, is in the hands of its preachers. It has a beautiful service, which appeals to many good people, if along with this it had forceful personalities in the pulpit, its appeals would be wider and more effective.

ACCEPTED HIS STORY

Alex. Young Allowed to Proceed on His Long Journey

Alex Young, an Englishman late of Vancouver and at present on his way home to the old country, appeared in Police Court this morning on the charge of trespassing on the C.P.R. property. He pleaded guilty and explained to the Chief that he was on his way home. He was allowed to proceed.

According to his story, he left Vancouver en-route to Montreal and had drafted nearly all his money on to Montreal along with his trunk.

While at Calgary he lost most of the money he carried and also his ticket. He then bought a ticket to Fort William, and from there he worked his way by boat to Port McNicoll and then he beat his way here.

The check and baggage papers were inspected and found to be all right by the Chief and Magistrate. Young also produced some letters from his mother in the old country who is in poor health, showing that he had also sent money home.

NOT SO FORTUNATE

Jas. Corbett, who was arrested in company with Young and appeared on the same charge, failed to give a satisfactory account of himself, and was remanded fro a week.

Corbett claims Toronto as his home. Young said he met him at Fort William.

REV. FR. O'BRIEN AT SACRED HEART

Asks for Prayers of Parishioners for Himself and His Assistant

Rev. J. J. O'Brien, formally took charge of the Parish of the Sacred Heart yesterday. The new pastor preached a very touching and soul-stirring sermon at both masses. He said that he took part in the various ceremonies during the week of of His Lordship Bishop O'Brien's consecration and never thought for a moment that he would be called upon to succeed him who had been raised to the Bishopric. It was the most eventful day of his life and he said that although it is known that of all the monuments that stand in this diocese in memory of the work of the late Bishop O'Connor, Church of the Sacred Heart is the grandest, he had never thought of that worldly side, but on the contrary he saw only the very large number of souls, for every one of which he must render an account to God.

Father O'Brien went on to say that he was pleased to have as an assistant like Father McCauley, of whom the new Bishop had said, "He has manly qualities and priestly virtue." In closing he asked the parishioners to pray for their new pastor and for his assistant that they might do all things for the honor and glory of God.

Two red hot contests were played in the football competition at the exhibition grounds, Saturday afternoon, when the Cockneys, who had not one a game held the Glaziers to a 1-1 score. The Glaziers are now only one point ahead of the Costers, who defeated the Magpies by the score of 8-1.

Keelmen of Newcastle.

The Newcastle barges claim a place in English song, for they are the inspirers of that ancient ditty "Weel May the Keel Row." According to A. G. Bradley, "it is a very old Newcastle air, and the keel, a local coal barge which has been used from earliest times to convey the coal from wagons to the vessel, the word being, I believe, the old Saxon equivalent for ship or boat. The keelmen of Newcastle were a distinct body of men, and their boats were constructed to measure, like the wagons, for the convenience of the customs and the trade generally."—London Chronicle.

Harry's Opinion.

The teacher was giving a test on the value of foreign money in America. When it was little Harry's turn, she asked:

"Harry, how much is a guinea worth in this country?"

Harry smiled and answered, "A dollar and a half a day."—Lippincott's.

HEAT AND THE BODY

We Are Able to Drink Liquids That Would Scald Our Hands.

The human body can stand far greater heat if it be dry than if it be wet, and, strangely enough, it can stand far hotter liquids inside than out.

For example, the average tea drinker sips tea at a temperature of about 140 degrees F.—sometimes as high as 145 degrees. But he cannot bear his hands in water at 120 degrees or his feet in water higher than 112 degrees. Few people can stand a bath in water at 105 degrees.

In parts of central Australia men live in an average temperature of 115 degrees F. in the shade and 140 degress in the sun, while 151 degrees has been registered. In the Persian gulf the thermometers on ships vary between 122 degrees and 140. A recent explorer in the Himalayas reports that he found at 9 a. m. in December and at more than 10,000 feet altitude a temperature of 131 degrees F.

Drs. Bleyden and Chantrey, two English scientists, desiring to ascertain how high a temperature the human body could stand, shut themselves in an oven, of which the heat was gradually raised and they were able to bear it until the thermometer registered 212 degrees F., the boiling point of water.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Compulsory Massage Licenses.

Steps are to be taken at once by the London County Council to formulate proposals for inclusion in their General Powers Bill next year to license massage establishments and maternity homes. Powers of registration, with the right of inspection, may be included in the bill, which will be designed to stamp out so-called massage, manicure, and electric light treatment houses.

Asked to explain the position, the chairman of the public control committee of the council, said: "There is no doubt that the evil is growing, and the police have no power to enter the houses. It is also almost impossible to obtain warrants for the arrest of those who conduct them, because informants will not come forward.

"We shall submit proposals for inclusion in next year's General Powers Bill. The police are giving us every facility in our inquiries, and I hope we shall obtain power to register such establishments, which will involve the right of inspection by council officers. If they are not satisfied the places will be struck off the register.

"There are many places which conduct a perfectly legitimate business, and these will welcome registration."

FOUR-YEAR-OLD IAN GRANT MET DEATH BY DROWNING

Lad Was in Water Only a Short Time But Efforts Towards Rescusitation Were Without Success

Little Ian Grant, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Grant 595 George street, was drowned Sunday evening about 6 o'clock in the river at the foot of Edinburgh st.

The little fellow was last seen on Water street by his brother, only a short distance from his home, in company with another small boy.

As near as can be found out from the two little boys with him, they were throwing stones into the river and Ian lost his balance and toppled down the bank into the river. The screams of the little fellow and his companions quickly brought Mr. Jos Yelland of Harvey street to the scene and he pulled the little fellow out. He was carried into Mrs. Patson's home, and Mrs. Patty, a nurse did all in her power to resuscitate him, but without avail.

Dr. MacPherson and Dr. Morgan arrived and with the assistance of Chief Thompson, worked over the body for nearly one hour and a half.

Sad are the circumstances of the little Ian's death as the family came to Canada recently from Scotland and moved here from Toronto about five weeks ago.

The father is employed at Cressman's and with the mother, is heart-broken over their son's death.

Besides his parents a brother and sister are left to mourn his loss. The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery.

ARE HELD BY LINDSAY POLICE AS SUSPECTS

Killingbeck and Landry in the Toils—Several Cases of Robbery

Herb Landry and Lavergne Killingbeck, two local young men, with whom the police are well acquainted, are held at Lindsay on the charge of vagrancy.

They are suspected of having had a hand in the numerous store robberies of the past few days. They were remanded till Friday, October 10th. The Lindsay Warder says:

The police think that Killingbeck after the robbery took a freight out of Lindsay in the early morning and returned to Lindsay before noon on Friday. Whatever money he had in his possession was hidden away on going to his home town. This, according to police information, is his method of doing business. By making the trip to Peterborough would show he was at home when the robbery was committed in Lindsay.

The two men were around the sheds of St. Mary's Church all Friday afternoon, but changed quarters about 5 o'clock in the evening to the corner of Ridout and Huron streets, where they kept on the look-out for the police.

Laundry has been seen in town for over a week, but has not been around the main street. It is thought that the men may have been assisted by some local talent in their stampede through town. Whether they are the men who operated in Orillia and Trenton is not clear to the police, and it is conjectured that several gangs are operating in Ontario under the one head.

LAID AT REST

Rev. R. G. Peever, of George street Methodist church, officiated at the funeral of the late Robert McWhirtie, which was held Sunday afternoon, from the late residence, Harvey street, to the Little Lake cemetery. Many citizens were present to pay their last respects to one who had been held by them in high esteem.

Members of the Masonic Order Order marched to the cemetery and the Masonic service was held at the grave. Representatives of the Oddfellows and the C.O.O.F. also attended the funeral.

The pallbearers were Messrs. R. A. Morrow, H. Rush, R. J. Winch, A. Gibson, W. E. Conway and B. Shortly.

PLAYED FIVE PARTS AT ONCE

Cyril Maude Did Much Doubling in Hamlet

Now that all arrangements for the North American tour of Cyril Maude have been completed, the foremost of English comedians is looking with a marked degree of pleasure on the prospect of renewing acquaintances in this part of the world.

It was no easy matter to gain the consent of Mr. Maude to this tour. For many years he and his London Playhouse have been institutions in the largest capital of the world, and he has often said no inducement on earth would be sufficient to make him away from his native land. Consequently, when George C. Tyler, representing the Liebler Company, recently renewed his offer to bring Mr. Maude to this side of the ocean Mr. Maude responded by naming terms which he thought would be prohibitive.

The English idol said yes, he would come to the States and Canada for exactly 500 pounds a week and a percentage of the receipts, a substantial percentage, mind you. The rapidity with which Mr. Tyler snapped up this suggestion nearly took Mr. Maude's breath away. But he had passed his word, and he would stick to it, though the prospect of leaving his own London was in certain respects disquieting.

While in Denver many years ago Mr. Maude met Daniel Bandmann, and became interested in the work of that famous zealot. As a result of this famous acquaintance, Mr. Maude shortly thereafter his stage debut in Bandmann's company, playing the part of the butler in "East Lynn."

Daniel Bandmann put on many a play about his period of his career, and young Maude found himself cast for one or more parts in each production. When it came the Bandmann time to make revival of "Hamlet," Maude found himself entrusted with no fewer than five parts in the one play—which is believed to be a record for "doubling" up.

Good old Daniel Bandmann's company finally struck the financial rocks, and the players separated to earth's four corners. By this time, the health of Cyril Maude was so greatly improved that he felt perfectly safe in returning to foggy England, where he decided to continue the stage career he had adopted in Colorado. Since that time Cyril Maude's record has been that of a brilliant ascension. And now, at the highest point of his life work, he is coming back to the land where he learned to act.

THEATRICAL

If ever success was written across the face of any play it is in regards to "Peg O'My Heart," which played at the Grand Saturday afternoon and night. It was one of the biggest hits ever staged in this city. Everyone of the actors is a star and lead by the versatile genius Elsa Ryan in the title role, the company is worthy of all praise they are receiving in the various centres.

Mrs. Fanny Addison Pitt, as Mrs. Chichester was exceptionally good and when one considers her record it is indeed amazing. Mrs. Pitt is nearly sixty years of age and has been on the stage since a mere child. Miss Lillian Keller as Ethel Chichester has the qualities of a clever emotional actress. Mr. G. Douglas as Alaric called for many bursts of applause.

CHAS. GIBSON'S MYSTERIOUS COMPANIONS IN THE WEST

Collingwood Man Declares That Men Who Condemned Boy Says Were With Him on Night of Murder Asked Him About the Case.

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—A new sensation developed yesterday in the Gibson case. It will be remembered that frequent mention was made during the course of the trial of two men—"Red" and "Alf."—who were alleged to have been members of the party which accompanied Rosenthal, Dunkelman and Gibson to the Hydro-electric yards, Strachan avenue, on the night of the murder.

Yesterday a prominent man living in Collingwood, who arrived in the city, declared that he met men answering the description of these two in a lumber camp in British Columbia, and that they had made inquiries concerning Gibson and the trial. It was not until he returned to Toronto and became interested in the appeal of Gibson that he recalled "Red" and "Alf." He said they were known by the same names in the west.

Rev. John McNeill of Cooke's Church and Rabbi Jacobs of Holy Blossom Synagogue, carrying with them the signatures of fifty-five thousand citizens of Toronto, left for Ottawa last night, and will appear before the Cabinet this morning on behalf of Gibson to urge the commutation of the death sentence imposed upon him to life imprisonment. Sir Henry Pellatt was unable to accompany them.

Fully fifteen thousand additional names to the petition were obtained yesterday, and at six o'clock last night the committee having charge of the work reported that all the petitions, fully signed, had been turned in and prepared for transmission to the authorities at Ottawa. While the committee learned nothing of the success of Mr. T. Herbert Lennox, K.C., who appeared before the Cabinet yesterday, they feel satisfied that they will be productive of encouraging results.

Decision To-day.

OTTAWA, Oct. 7.—Whether or not Charles Gibson of Toronto will go to the gallows on Thursday morning next will be finally decided by the Cabinet Council to-day. A determined eleventh-hour effort to save the life of the condemned man was made yesterday by his counsel, Herbert Lennox, K.C., M.P.P., of Toronto, assisted by Rev. D. Lang, Toronto, Claude Macdonell, M.P., and Dr Preston, M.P.P. For two hours yesterday morning they pleaded with Premier Borden and his colleagues, Hon. Messrs. White, Crothers, Hazen and Kemp, to give the prisoner the benefit of the doubt and exercise executive clemency. Their arguments, based on the evidence in the case, were backed up by a petition signed by many thousands of citizens of Toronto, Collingwood, Newmarket and other places, by an appeal from Mayor Hocken of Toronto, by a letter from Moses Rosenthal, son of the murdered man, and by urgent representations from Toronto militiamen, clergymen and Jewish associations, all praying for a reconsideration by the Cabinet of last week's decision to let the law take its course.

The members of the Government listened carefully to the representations made on Gibson's behalf and received the monster petition. They gave no intimation that their former decision would be reversed, but promised to again reconsider the case to-day.

To-day there is a forlorn hope that the Cabinet may decide to give Gibson a chance for life by granting a new trial.

Mr. Benson is the first actor to receive this degree. Sir Henry Irving, Joseph Jefferson and Otis Skinner held the honorary degree of master of arts, conferred by various universities, but the LL.D. has hitherto been withheld from the theatrical profession. Mr. Benson's Canadian tour opened last night with a production of "Much Ado About Nothing."

Comic Opera Means Trouble.

LEIPSIC, Oct. 7.—Signora Toselli, formerly Crown Princess Louise of Saxony, will, it is announced here, probably become involved in trouble with the Saxon Government, in connection with the comic opera of which she has written the libretta, and whose approaching production is announced in Rome.

The Government declares that if the work contains any attacks on the Saxon royal family, it will cut down the princess' annuity.

Owing to the great number of people who wish to make appointments for the eving, The Tait Optical Co. have decided to keep open Wednesday evenings as well as Saturday. 18

That Five Per Cent. Discount.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 7.—Various interpretations of the five per cent. rebate provided by the tariff law for imports in American bottoms, are being taken up by President Wilson and the experts of the State and Treasury Departments.

The President told callers yesterday that the intent of the framers of the provision merely was to give a five per cent. discount to imports coming in American ships from countries with which the United States had no special treaty arrangements.

Borden Entertains Samuel.

OTTAWA, Oct. 7.—Rt. Hon. Herbert Samuel, the British Postmaster-General, arrived in Ottawa yesterday morning and he had a conference with Hon. L. P. Pelletier, Canadian Postmaster-General, yesterday afternoon in regard to a number of questions, the most important being the subject of cheaper cable rates. This afternoon Mr. Samuel will address the Canadian Club, and to-night Premier Borden will tender him a dinner, which will be attended by all the Cabinet Ministers.

When the stove becomes soiled with soot, try putting a piece of zinc on the coals. The vapor produced will clean out the soot.

Salt thrown into the oven immediately after something has been burned will make the objectionable odor less noticeable.

Duchess Is To Return.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—It is officially stated from Clarence House that the Duchess of Connaught will accompany the duke to Canada when His Royal Highness returns on Oct. 17. The Princess Patricia also will travel with the duke.

The duchess has made remarkable progress during the past few weeks, and it is confidently hoped that in the near future all effects of her recent serious illness will have disappeared.

Deportation for Noble Lord.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 7.—Peveril Kerr, an Englishman, who registered at a prominent hotel here Friday as Lord Innes-Kerr, is held at the Angel Island immigration station to-day awaiting deportation to Australia, whence he came on the steamer Willochra.

When arrested Kerr had but ten cents in his pockets. His troubles began here when a check for $50 he had given the hotel was declared worthless.

Canadian Press Despatch.

DETROIT, Oct. 7 — At the annual meeting of the Grand Trunk Railway system held here yesterday, E. J. Chamberlain was re-elected President.

FREE EMIGRATION FOR WIDOWS

By October twenty widows with one child each are required to sail for New South Wales to take up domestic work, the money for the journey being advanced by a practical Imperialist who desires to remain anonymous.

The step is regarded as an experiment in assisting a new type of emigrant. Applicants for free passages must not be more than thirty-five years of age, must produce their husbands' death certificates, and must of course, be healthy and of exemplary character.

The result of this offer will be that a brighter future will present itself to many widows who have hitherto struggled against adversity, and it is specially intended to help those who have thereby become brave and more self-reliant. The successful applicants will be required to give a guarantee to take up domestic work, probably in the Bush, where it is easier to find accommodation for a child.

To get the full nutriment from a potato it should be cooked in the skin, as valuable food salts lie just inside the covering.

BETTER SERVICE IN TELEGRAMS

Now that a better service has been given whereby the Toronto morning papers arrive here at an early hour, it is hoped that the service will be permanent and not taken away again as has been the case in the past.

Another move might be made in the direction of a better service for the sending and receiving of telegrams. In the evening, the service is not one that should be given to a city the size of Peterboro. Only for a couple of hours is it possible to send a telegram, and telegrams to be delivered in the city must wait till the following morning. Courtesies have been extended by the operators at the stations, but this practice is not supposed to be.

What is wanted is an all-night service or at least a service till midnight.

HIGHWAYMAN IS CAPTURED

Artillerymen and Civilians Engage in Thrilling Chase.

Two Men Hold Up Paymaster of the American Velvet Co. and Take $16,000—Booty Is Recovered and Pursuits of Miscreants Which Follows Is Participated In by Hundreds of Armed Men.

STONINGTON, Conn., Oct. 7.—Skirmishing through the woods in the northern part of this town last night United States coast artillerymen captured a man who is believed to be one of the two masked highwaymen who early in the day with drawn revolvers held up Carl A. Koelb, paymaster of the American Velvet Co., and took from him a satchel containing $16,000 in coin and bills.

The booty was quickly recovered from a hole under a wall into which the bag had been tossed. Then the pursuit of the two bandits began, first by a posse of townsmen who took the trail of the men, and then by 200 soldiers, who were in the neighborhood for field exercises. The artillerymen went at the task in earnest, going out in extended order and finally rushing through a cemetery, in which it was thought the bandits were at bay. The men had escaped, however, and the skirmish line swept onward until it was deep in "Witches' Woods," in a wild section off the town. Occasionally a soldier would get a glimpse of the quarry and the pursuers would sweep onward again. The artillerymen were followed by groups of citizens and farmers—most of the latter armed with guns—while about mid-afternoon 300 male employs of the velvet company were released from work to join in the general scamper across the fields and through the brush.

Darkness set in and the soldiers were making their way back through Charles Davis' woods when a party of them ran into a civilian wearing a soldier's overcoat. He was taken in charge and escorted into town and turned over to Patrolman O'Connell who put him in the lockup. The man declined to answer questions as to his identity. He is about 25 years of age.

The second bandit escaped, and it is believed he is traveling northward. The men apparently planned the hold-up with considerable care. They had not anticipated that soldiers, who have been here for a fortnight's field work, would be close at hand. The place of the hold-up was on a bend in the road, and conditions on either side were good for making the attack.

SHOT WHILE HUNTING.

James Wilson Accidentally Killed by Companion Near North Bay.

NORTH BAY, Oct. 7.—James Wilson, a prominent resident of Warren, was accidentally shot and instantly killed by Joseph Vincent, when the two men were hunting wolves near the main line of the C.P.R., 20 miles west of North Bay.

The men had been hunting together for several days past. Some time preceding the fatal accident the men separated after striking the trail of a pack, each agreeing to take a certain direction. After traveling for some distance Vincent's attention was attracted by a moving object in the long grass of the ravine. Thinking it was a bear, he fired, but to his horror on running to the spot, found he had shot his companion through the head, death being almost instantaneous.

Scalded To Death.

PORT ARTHUR, Oct. 7—Engineer Wm. Ploufus was scalded to death and Fireman Dempsey was badly burned by escaping steam yesterday when the backbone of their engine was broken as it crashed through a culvert at Wild Goose Point, on the C.N.R. The girders of the culvert gave way.

ADVANCE IN LIVE STOCK

Rush of Cattle Into U. S. Brings Inevitable Results

Removal of 27 1-2 Per Cent. Duty Causes an Unprecedented Rush to Buffalo and Detroit and Ontario Consumer Is Confronted With an Increase In the Price of Beef—Choice Grade Brings $8.

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—The inevitable happened at the local live stock yards yesterday. Market values advanced generally 50 cents to 75 cents per hundredweight. It was the first market after the passing of the Wilson tariff, which put live stock and meats on the free list, and as the Buffalo Stock Yards, with higher price levels, are aggressive rivals of Toronto, holders held out for sharp advances and buyers knew they would have to pay or lose the trade. Indeed best Canadian steers were shipped to Buffalo from Ontario points, and brought from $7.50 to $8 yesterday, exactly what was paid here for the same class.

"I'll pay what I gave last week."

"Then you'll not get them."

This is a typical dialogue that indicates the character of the market throughout the morning. Up until noon the number of sales were limited. Commission men claimed they had their orders from the country and could not sell under the advance given above. Some choice heavy export steers were offered, weighing 1,400 pounds each, and brought from $7.50 to $8 per hundredweight. When the same class appeared on the market last they sold at $7.25 top price, and that was just a few days ago. Medium weight handy choice steers, popular for the household, were also higher in about the same proportion, selling at from $7.25 to $7.75. Choice heifers brought $6.50 to $6.75, with common to medium at $4.75 to $6.25.

These figures may puzzle the consumer, who is not a cattle-dealer. One of these bullocks yield when dressed from 54 to 58 pounds out of 100 pounds live weight. This means that on the basis of an advance of 75 cents live weight the consumer will have to pay about double that amount, or 1 1-2 cents, per pound. Add this to what he pays now and it is a serious matter.

Canadian Cattle Flood Detroit.

DETROIT, Oct. 7.—Removal of duty on cattle under the new tariff resulted in a rush of shipments of live stock from Canada into Detroit Saturday and yesterday. Twenty-seven carloads were received Saturday and twenty yesterday. The former duty was 27 1-2 per cent.

MISSIONARIES UNHURT.

Better News Is Received From Chinese Bandit Camp.

PEKIN, China, Oct. 7.—A message dated Oct. 3 was received yesterday at Siang Yangfu, in the Province of Hupeh, from Rev. Christian Stokstad, and Rev. Mr. Johnson, the two American missionaries, trying to negotiate with the Chinese bandits for the release of the American and Norwegian missionaries held in captivity by the bandits at Tsaoyang. It says that three white women and two children are at the bandits' headquarters and have not been harmed, while the men are believed to be living.

The message appears to discredit the report that the little son of Rev. Mr. Fauske and Mrs. Fauske has been killed.

Rev. C. Stokstad and Rev. Mr. Johnson express the hope that the force of 1,800 troops round Tsaoyong will be able to hold the bandits until reinforcements arrive. The bandits number about 1,000, of whom half are mounted.

OTTAWA, Oct. 7.—Premier Borden stated to-day that, although there had been no formal decision by the Cabinet, he does not expect Parliament to meet before January.

QUAKES IN PANAMA.

Hills Levelled and Houses Destroyed by Earth Fissures.

PANAMA, Oct. 7.—The series of earthquakes continues in the interior of the republic. Advices received yesterday morning from Tonosi, a town in the province of Los Sontos, say that two hills have been levelled and many houses destroyed by big fissures in the earth. A church tower at Penonome and some houses have been razed, and similar damage has been done in the town of Agua Dulce. A feeling of apprehension prevails on the isthmus. The seismograph shows a continuation of slight shocks, which, it is thought, may be of serious import.

The Miraflores and Pedro Miquel locks will be tested on Oct. 11, when the first dredge is scheduled to pass through them.

NOME ALASKA, MAY BE WIPED OUT BY FIRE NOW RAGING

Flames Follow in Path of Storm---No Lives Are Lost

NOME, Alaska, Oct. 7.—Nome has been almost destroyed by a storm. The south side of Front street is gone. The Sandspit is gone. Two miles of territory next to the sea was devastated. No lives were lost.

The storm that Sunday night began beating in from Behring Sea was the worst ever known here. Men and women worked all night in the icy water to save their household effects. The electric light plant was wrecked and telephone service cut off. The loss is estimated at a million and a half dollars.

There will be much suffering and outside help will be required. Winter is at hand and it will be impossible to get in supplies needed.

The steamships Victoria and Corwin, which were lying in the roadsted, ran to the open sea and escaped damage. All the small boats on the beach were destroyed. Five hundred houses have been demolished, and more are falling.

Nome, the famous gold camp on Behring Sea, the most northerly city in the world, was built on a sandy sea beach. In front of the town there is an anchorage for ships, but steamers do not make a landing. Cargoes and passengers are landed at an aerial tramway station in deep water. The principal part of the town, which a dozen years ago had a population of 20,000, is on the east side of Snake River, with a finger extending to the west along a narrow sandspit. This sandspit was rich in gold dust and the earlier settlers built their cabins there.

The summer population of Nome is about 4,000, and in winter 2,000 remain, the others coming out on steamships that leave late in October. One steamship is yet to leave Seattle for Nome.

It will be possible to send revenue cutters to Nome to deliver supplies and take away needy persons who wish to leave.

Canadian Press Despatch.

NOME, ALASKA, Oct. 7. — This place which was devastated by storm driving in from the Behring Sea, Saturday and Sunday, is now threatened with final destruction by fire. Flames have attacked the Pacific Cold Storage plant which contains a winter's supply of meat. The wreckage of buildings caused by the dashing seas is now all afire.

URGE NAVY CONCLAVE.

Australia Refuses to Believe Story of Its Abandonment.

SYDNEY, Oct. 7.—The correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says the announcement that the Imperial Government had decided not to call a naval conference has caused astonishment mingled with some resentment, especially as it synchronizes with the celebration in honor of the arrival of the Australian warships. Mr. Millen, the Minister of Defence, said last night that supposing the intelligence to be officially confirmed it would require considerable justification, and be received with deep regret. It is declared that the agreement of 1909 has not been carried out by the Mother Country, and that Australia ought to know what are the intentions of the Imperial Government, what it thinks of the needs of defence in the Pacific generally, and what it will do to get those needs. An Inter-Dominion conference is suggested if the Imperial Government persists in its refusal to call a conference, but it is hoped that the necessity for this may not arise on account of the harm it might do to the cause of Imperial unity. The political instability at present existing here is not regarded as a justification for the Home Government's attitude in opposing a conference which was approved and strongly urged by the Fisher Government. The hope is expressed on all sides that the Imperial Government will reconsider its decision.

MAY BE OPIUM DREAM.

Henry Spencer's Confession a Falsehood Detective Thinks.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—Of the nineteen murders Henry Spencer, slayer of Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat, swore he committed, the police last night after investigating his alleged crimes in various cities were able to fix upon him only one murder, or possibly two.

Captain Halpin, chief of the detective bureau, announced his conviction that Spencer, in giving his long, circumstantial confession of crime, was a consummate falsifier.

Four of the murders he says he committed were perpetrated while Spencer was in the Illinois State Penitentiary at Joliet. Of twelve of the alleged murders the police in this city and other cities have no record. In one case described by Spencer police records show that a body was recovered, but that the detectives have as yet established no connection between Spencer and the crime.

"Except for possibly two murders Spencer's weird story of killing people by hammering in their skulls and sinking their bodies in lakes seems pure fabrication," said Captain Halpin last night. "His imagination, stimulated by drugs, poured out one of the most fantastic tales of murder that has ever come from a man whose mind is given to dreams of crime."

THE OUTLOOK AT CHATEAUGUAY

What are the prospects in Chateaugay? The Review asked Mr. J. H. Burnham this morning. "I am sure I don't know," said Mr. Burnham. "The riding has always been Liberal and will be hard to turn. The French regard Laurier and Bourrassa as their idols and both these gentlemen are opposed to Mr. Borden. More than two-thirds of the electorate is French. The French are against any idea of Empire and will likely follow Laurier and Bourrassas in this respect. The reciprocity affair has fallen too flat to discuss. We get more now such as it is, for nothing, than was affixed to Laurier under the reciprocity pact, so there you are. I will be surprised, however, if we win Chateauguay."

WINNIPEG TO HELP.

Offer of Five Hundred Men to Assist Ulster Volunteers.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The offer of assistance from Winnipeg Orangemen to Ulster, which was prominently advertised here, was referred to by Sir Edward Carson in his final speech before leaving Ireland for London.

"The Government," he said, "will soon find that a quarrel which looks to them in the distance to be a local one in a comparatively small part of his Majesty's dominions, will very soon grow until it permeates every village and hamlet of the whole United Kingdom and proceeds out into the Empire, from which yesterday, from Winnipeg, we received an offer of 500 men to come across. (Cheers.)

"In your name I send to our fellow-citizens across the sea and in other parts of the United Kingdom this simple message: 'We are preparing and are prepared to do our part. We call upon you to do yours. We are prepared, and we were always prepared never to betray you. We call upon you to see that we are not betrayed'."

CHIEF VINDICATED.

F. W. Randall of Guelph Exonerated of Charges Against Him.

GUELPH, Oct. 7.—For the second time in one year Chief F. W. Randall of the Guelph police force has been cleared of the charges preferred against him. The police commissioners, at an adjourned meeting held yesterday, came to the conclusion that the charges preferrd by Sergt. Thos. Kickley had completely failed, and they decided to ask Sergt. Kickley to resign his position on the force, to take effect on the 1st of November. While nothing official from the commissioners has been given out for publication, it is understood that Mayor Carter was a dissenter. Sergeant Kickley had been a faithful member of the force for the past twenty-seven years.

Language All Important.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Premier Gouin's advice to French-Canadians to see that their children are taught English produces a long editorial in last night's Standard. "The advice has been thought so good elsewhere," says The Standard, "that Premier Gouin is only repeating a thrice told tale. Language is thought by empire to be more important than battleships or armies."

Bail Was Refused.

NANAIMO, B.C., Oct. 7.—Little interest was evidenced in Nanaimo yesterday morning in the opening of the trials before Judge Howey, arising out of the recent strike disturbances in Nanaimo district. Before court adjourned for the day application for bail was made by Mr. Leighton on behalf of George Pettigrew, organizer of the mine workers. It was refused.

For Peace Centenary.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—A London cable to The Tribune says:

An important step is to be taken this week by the British committee for the celebration of the hundredth anniversary of peace among the English-speaking peoples. The committee is to make an appeal to the public to-day for $300,000.

"STRONG MAN" PRESIDENT OF THE CHINESE REPUBLIC

Yuan is Elected—General Yuen Heng is Vice-President.

Canadian Press Despatch.

PEKIN, CHINA., Oct. 7. — General Li Yuen Heng was to-day elected by the Chinese Parliament, Vice-President for five years.

PEKIN, China, Oct. 7.—One of the most important events in the history of China—the election of a President of the new republic, took place here yesterday. The members of both Houses of Parliament were called together to cast their votes for a chief executive, to hold office for a term of five years, and the greatest interest in what was to China a novel proceeding was manifested in all parts of the empire.

When the united Houses of Parliament came together yesterday morning, the register recorded that 75 representatives of the people were present to take part in the historic proceedings.

YUAN SHIA KAI.

The first ballot took a considerable time, owing to the fact that the deputies and Senators were not familiar with the proceedings. When the voting was concluded, it was found that Provisional President Yuan Shi Kai had been given 471 votes, and Tsai Yuan Heng, 152, while twenty other candidates, including Dr. Wu Ting-Fang, former Chinese Minister at Washington, and Dr. Sun Yat Sen the leader of the Republican movement, had each received a few votes.

Robbed By "Wire Tappers."

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The American says: D. S. Curry, a wealthy retired business man of Winnipeg, Man., and a former city official of that place, has been fleeced out of $64,000 by "wire tappers" in this city. It was reported to the police Sunday. Mr. Curry, who is 65 years old, has identified the pictures of some of the old Gondorf gang as the men who fleeced him.

Mr. Curry met the sharpers in West Baden, Ind.

Rights Not Violated.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 7.—None of Harry K. Thaw's treaty rights as an American citizen were violated when Canadian immigration authorities forcibly deported him a few weeks ago.

That was the ruling yesterday of Solicitor Joseph W. Folk of the State Department, who says that the Department would not be warranted in making any representation to the British Government, as requested by Thaw.

Fire Does Heavy Damage.

PERTH, Oct. 7.—At four o'clock yesterday morning fire destroyed the large stable belonging to the Imperial Hotel. The flames spread rapidly and completely destroyed the barn and contents, including a valuable horse belonging to Mr. W. W. Echlin. The loss is estimated at between eight and ten thousand dollars, partly covered by insurance.

THE CITY STREETS

(From the Cleveland Motorist)

They took a little gravel,
And they took a little tar,
And various ingredients,
Imported from afar,
They hammered it and rolled it,
And when they went away,
They said they had a pavement
That would last for many a day.
But they came with picks and smote it,
To lay a water main:
And in time they called the workmen
To put it back again.
To run a railway cable they took it up once more:
And later put it back again,
Just where it was before.
They took it up for conduits
To run the telephone:
And then they put it back again,
As hard as any stone.
They took it up for wires,
To feed the 'lectric light,
And then they put it back again,
Which was no more than right,
Oh, the pavement full of furrows;
There are patches everywhere;
You'd like to ride upon it,
But it's seldom that you dare.
It's a very handsome pavement,
A credit to the town;
They're always digging of it up
Or putting of it down.

The Daily Review.

TUESDAY, OCT. 7, 1913.

THE RT. HON. HERBERT SAMUEL

A capacity audience availed itself of an opportunity to hear the Rt. Hon. Herbert Samuel at the Canadian Club lunch in Toronto on Saturday. We do not know whether or not the Canadian League was present in force, but there were several representatives of Little Liberalism, and to any or all of these it must have been a surprising occasion.

Here was a prominent member of the Imperial Government speaking frankly and wisely on Imperial relations, a subject on which Imperial Ministers are all so notoriously ignorant. Here, too, was a representative in the flesh of that "Downing Street," which, as everybody knows, rests not night or day from plotting to rob Canadians of their autonomy! And he talked right on like a man talking to "grown-ups" with perfect freedom and ease, as one that has no conspiracy to conceal, nothing of which he is ashamed.

It was not until he had finished that the old worn platitudes came up again. It was Sir George Ross (for some reason called upon to propose the vote of thanks), who produced again, the "golden chains" with links stamped "autonomy" that hold the Empire together, and all that sort of thing. The gold found in Sir George's chains, as well as that found in those "golden threads of sentiment," which satisfy the more frugal mind of Dr. Michael Clark, is in strong favor with Little Liberals as being both showy and inexpensive. Contributions of it have not so far been found to endanger our autonomy.

Mr. Samuel said that the Empire's supreme interest was in the peace of the world. The Imperial authorities, he said, looked upon the increase in armaments as a necessary evil—necessary, but evil, evil but necessary—forced upon us by the action of other powers, and our own vital concern in supremacy of the seas.

On the question that had become one of acute party politics in Canada, he would say nothing, but he believed that the Dominions were agreed that the growing burden should not be left for one pair of shoulders alone. Beside him sat the man who had used accidental power to kill Canada's first measure of effective aid, the sometime Imperialist, who had quailed, or professed to quail, before the "friction" manufactured by Hon. Emmerson in the House and Dr. J. A. Macdonald in the press.

A GOOD JOKE

The following paragraph is taken from the Globe:

> "This is the sort of thing that the readers of Conservative papers which take "canned" editorial opinion from Ottawa have served up to them: "Oil paintings of the King and Queen have been received by the State Department at Ottawa, the gift of his Majesty to the Dominion. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is busily consulting constitutional authorities with a view of determining the effect of this gift upon our autonomy." These constant sneers at Liberal loyalty are dangerous as well as dishonest."

It struck us as being extremely funny; not so much the Ottawa joke, which is a good one in itself, but the serious way in which the Globe takes it is excruciatingly funny, and reminds one of the curate in "The Private Secretary," who put his head out of the trunk and said to his tormentors: "Now, really, my dear friends, if this goes on much longer I am afraid I shall have to be very vexed with you!"

IS PROTESTANTISM AN EVIL?

We cannot be accused of bigotry or inflaming the public mind unduly if we devote a little space in reply to an editorial in the Catholic Register of Oct. 2nd. The Register says:—

"In a speech delivered in June last, Lord Rosebery, himself the acme of polish and the glass of fashion, lamented the decay of manners and of reverence among the English-speaking people of the world to-day. It is a fact, of course, which all acknowledge, that there is scarcely any reverence for age or authority at the present time. Children not out of their teens stand on equal terms with their parents, and are ready to give back impudence if not treated like their elders. An old gentleman who had received scant courtesy from some youths, the other day, put it perhaps a little too strongly when he exclaimed: "They say it is, 'a young man's world' to-day, but I think it is rather a world of young puppies and cads." At any rate the young people are becoming sadly oblivious to the rights of their superiors or elders, and many of them in their selfish race for enjoyment and "a good time" are ready to trample down the old and infirm in their way. Whence has come this loss of reverence for the venerable and the aged and for those in authority? It is directly traceable, we personally believe, to the results of the "Reformation." At this period a large portion of the English-speaking people of the world cast off all authority in religion and embraced the principle of Private Judgment. Jack then became just as good as his master, and had as much right to set out to form a new sect and a new code of morality, the which he incontinently proceeded to do!"

To describe all the evils of latter-day life in the world to Protestantism is to our minds both an unjustifiable and an uncharitable view to take of the matter.

In the middle ages when there were sometimes terrible slumps in morality in avowedly Catholic countries the state of things could not be ascribed to Protestantism for it did not then exist. People are no worse now than then and it is not too much to say that such articles as the above will tend to sharpen divisions in the community rather than to heal them. We decline to believe that Protestants are a depraved people or that their religion is an evil.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Montreal Star pleads for clean bank bills. It is often a wonder with visitors to America and Canada how we endure the dirty dollar. If a piece of paper in the filthy condition of some of our paper money were put into our hands for any ordinary translation, we would reject it in disgust. Yet if there are any Canadians who have dirty dollars they are disgusted with we will give from 75 cents upwards for them and chance the microbes.

The suffragettes have broken out in a fresh place; they stopped the litany service in Westminster Abbey and demanded that women be included in the prayers. The cry will now be "prayers for women." That is a request which every sincere Christian will gladly respond to. Even Mr. Asquith will see the urgent necessity for some supplications on their behalf.

The Right Hon. Herbert Samuel who addressed the Canadian Club the other day, and who is so prominent and influential a member of the British Government, is of Jewish origin. England is sometimes regarded as exclusive and lacking in the cosmopolitan spirit. But she has bred some excellent Jews, Disraeli was one of them Samuel is another.

Mr. Borden has sent congratulations to Australia upon the completion of a new battleship. Premier Cook has replied: "Cordial thanks for kind congratulations. Heartily reciprocate their brotherly spirit. We are celebrating to-day the completion of an Australian unit of the Empire's peace-compelling navy, gladly sharing the obligations for the defence of the whole King's dominions. In this spirit we greet our Canadian brothers. May the cement of Empire set even more firmly as our navies grow."

A Modern "Cromwell."

Somebody has discovered on the electoral roll of the city of Melbourne, a gentleman named Oliver Cromwell, who by occupation is described as a "theatre packer." The duty of the "packer" is to squeeze as many people as possible into the pit and gallery. There have been complaints in Melbourne lately about his ungentle methods and his unchivalrous handling of women. Must take after his namesake.

NEW EMIGRATION REGULATION

Persons entering Canada by train are no longer to be subject to the vexations and confusing interrogation of Dominion Immigration Inspectors. A new system is being inaugurated by the Department at Ottawa which promises to meet with general favor. As the trains near the border, inspectors will pass through the coaches supplying with a blank information form every passenger who is entering the Dominion. The papers are to be filled out by the passengers and signed after which they will be collected and examined. Should the information given be incomplete or the answers unsatisfactory, the passenger may be personally interrogated by the inspector and obliged to undergo a personal examination at the International boundary.

PERMANENT RECORD.

The Immigration authorities will in this way secure a permanent record of every person entering Canada by train, with full information over the signature of the person in question. The Government will thus be furnished with reasonably accurate statistics as to the immigration from the United States, tourist traffic, etc.

The questions to be answered have to do with name, age, occupation, citizenship, last permanent residence, destination, length of stay in Canada, previous residence in the Dominion, family, if any, physical and mental health. The questions are ingeniously devised with a view to cross examination and detection of any flaws which may exist in the passenger's story.

BRIEFER FORMS.

On the reverse side of the sheet are briefer form to be signed by Canadians who have been only temporarily absent from Canada and by commercial travellers, officials and business men who have no intention of taking up their domicile in Canada.

Canadian citizens returning to the Dominion are only to be obliged to sign a form declaring their citizenship, date of leaving Canada and last address in Canada.

A tourist must declare his birthplace, citizenship, occupation and proposed length of visit. Particulars must be given where the family is accompanying.

NEED NOT BE DISTURBED.

Passengers in sleeping coaches passing the border at night need not be disturbed. Before retiring they may fill out the information blank, sign it and turn it over to the sleeping car conductor. The latter is required to sign each form to the effect that the passenger described above occupied a berth and appears to be physically and mentally fit.

The forms set forth that the Immigration Act provides a penalty of arrest and a fine not exceeding $500 for misrepresentation or for giving false information.

The Least He Might Do.

Little Faith was possessed of a most friendly disposition, but had not yet reached the age where she could understand the silence that may wrap itself around a wordless intimacy. In fact, she demanded speech, frequent and loving.

One night her brother was studying most assiduously his arithmetic lesson, and after calling to him several times without receiving an answer, she appealed to her father.

"George is busy," said father.

"I know," replied Faith, "but he might at least have said, 'Shut up.'"—Woman's Home Companion.

CRIME IN NEW ZEALAND.

Because of Certain Deterrents There Isn't a Great Deal of It.

"We have hardly any crime in New Zealand," says an editor and lawyer who has lived many years in that country and who is now in the course of a trip around the world. "I attribute it to the strength of our laws and the law-abiding spirit of the people, for the most part. Then there is another deterrent. It is the surety with which crime is punished.

"If a man has committed a murder in New Zealand he does not lie in jail for a year or two, as I am informed sometimes happens in other countries. We make an effort to bury him within two weeks after sentence has been imposed. With us a man may do pretty much as he likes so long as he does not interfere with the rights or interests of anybody else. The moment he does he comes in contact with the law.

"I cannot think of a single case of murder in our country in the last 20 years in which the murderer has not been caught and hanged. We inflict the severest penalties in every case. The rank of a man or his wealth are never in his favor in a court of law. It can procure him nothing, except a high-priced lawyer, perhaps. The excuse of insanity and the testimony of a corps of well-paid medical experts do not avail much. There is no appeal from the verdict of a court in a murder case, unless the judge himself thinks the verdict of the jury is against the evidence. Otherwise the conviction must stand.

"The judge may direct that the question as to whether the verdict was proper or improper be settled by the judges of the Court of Appeal. Unless this is done the man who has been convicted is hanged within two or three weeks. There have been instances when a prisoner has been given grace by the governor, but they are rare.

"In New Zealand we also proceed upon the assumption that a prison term is given for the purpose of acting as a deterrent to future crimes on the part of an individual or of other individuals. It is our theory that crime should be punished and we do this and severely. The class of sickly sentimentalists who believe in turning jails into luxurious hotels, where the prisoner may enjoy running water in his cell, a private bath three-course meals and all the luxuries at the expense of the state that he might not be able to have if he were at large, is not strong with us. That is another reason why we have so little crime.

"If a man is convicted he is punished and that is an end to the matter."

TEN YEARS AFTER

Discovered His Wife Was Refined in Spite of Her Ignorance.

By HAROLD CARTER.

Everybody on board the ship thought that Lord Alwyn and Signora Pasquale would be engaged before the vessel sighted Sandy Hook. Their acquaintance began at the captain's table on the first day; on the second, since the intermediate passengers were all seasick, Lord Alwyn took the chair next to the opera singer; thereafter they appeared to be inseparable.

"A good match it will be, too," the gossips said, as they plied their knitting needles. "He's the head of one of the oldest families in England, and they say his income's a quarter of a million dollars. Isn't it strange he hasn't been snapped up yet! Why, he must be thirty-five."

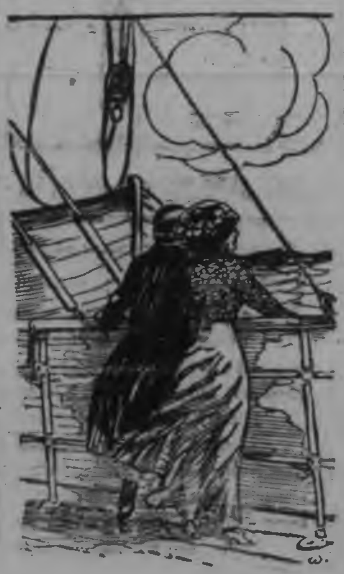
"And she's eight and twenty if she's a day. They say all London was crazy over her last season. Such a talented young woman, and perfectly 'irreproachable!' You can't say as much about all those singers. Why, the Duchess of Eastbourne took her under her wing and introduced her everywhere. I was reading an account of her life; it reads like a romance. Her father was just an ordinary American, and she saved up and went to Italy, and there she was adopted by a rich count, or something of the sort, who made her his ward and left her his fortune on condition that she would change her name."

"What was her name?"

"O, Smith or Jones or Robinson—something very ordinary. I wonder when he's going to propose."

But neither of the lovers dreamed that they were the subject of universal gossip aboard. Absorbed in one another, they leaned over the ship's rail and watched the long streak of foam glistening in the moonlight in the wake of the "Albania."

They had not much to say on that evening, for the realization of his love for the beautiful singer had come to the Englishman quite suddenly, and when it was too late to withdraw. He felt that he must tell her now, because it would be easier for her and for himself too; things had gone too far for that merely friendly farewell and hand-clasp which means so much and hides so much more.



Watched the Long Streak of Foam.

"Alice," he began—they had called each other by their given names almost since the beginning of their acquaintance, so intimately did they feel the sense of spiritual union between them—"Alice, I've behaved like a cur toward you."

"Why?" she asked, looking at him with a glance of infinite tenderness which he did not see; as he raised his eyes she veiled hers with her heavy lids. "Why?" she asked again, feigning that she did not understand.

"Because," he answered slowly, "when a man tells a woman what I have told you, it means something more than words. And yet—well, Alice, dear, I couldn't tell you of what should have kept my tongue in leash."

"You'd better tell me, dear," she answered, slipping her arm through his. "Come, let us walk slowly up and down the deck, and you shall tell me everything and I will listen and not say one word until you have ended."

"You know I love you?" he began, as they walked slowly under the stars. "Yes, there was never any pretense between us. And our love should naturally end in marriage. Well—I am already married!"

Again she glanced at him in that compassionate way, but though he waited for her to shrink back from him she showed by no gesture that she felt the blow; she did not even withdraw her arm, but they continued pacing the deck together.

"Let me tell you briefly the story of my life," he said. "When I was ten years younger I quarreled with my father. My elder brother was alive then; I had no hope or thought of succeeding to the title. I was sent to Colorado to a ranch. I was twenty-three, impressionable, hopeless for the future, and very lonely. Old Aaron Hopper, the ranchman who had undertaken my education in return for fifteen hundred dollars, had a daughter, a mere slip of a girl, good, sweet, pretty, and charming, but hopelessly illiterate. She was entirely ignorant of civilized ways; ate peas with a knife, as she had always seen her father do, and sang sentimental ballads to his accompaniment on his concertina.

"Eva had refused me for a long time. In spite of her ignorance, she had an unusual refinement of mind and soul. She knew that I could never introduce her to my folks at home, if ever I went back. It was not that I would have been ashamed of her, but it would have been impossible for her.

"The day before our marriage I received a letter from England. My father and brother were dead; both had been killed instantly in a train wreck. I was heir to the title and the family estates and fortune. In my elation I told Eva.

"I shall never forget the scene that occurred. How she refused to marry me, how her old father discovered the cause and threatened her, pleaded with her, implored her. He was not avaricious, he would never have left his ranch; but he felt that his girl was good enough for any man. In the end we overcame her opposition. We were married the next morning, and Eva cried all through the ceremony.

"There was to be no honeymoon. It was haying time, and after the marriage I went off to work as usual, leaving Eva to keep house in the little cottage old Aaron had built at the head of the valley. That night, when I came home, Aaron stood at the door, waving a letter, frantic with rage and humiliation. Eva had run away. She would never come back, she said, would never acknowledge the marriage; I was to be free. She had timed her movements so as to catch the night train east. It was just the foolish act of an ignorant girl. She may have had a hundred dollars saved. I don't know what became of her. Detectives failed to find her. Old Aaron died cursing her and asking my forgiveness for having ruined my life."

"You did not want a divorce?" asked the woman softly.

"No. How could I? I knew that the brave little spirit that had given itself into my keeping was mine always; that I was morally responsible for her; if ever she appeared I should have taken her home and asked no questions. I kept the detectives at work for years. And lately I have felt that I must do something more earnest to find Eva. So I am going out to Colorado, to the old ranch, if it is still there, and I shall try to discover whether she has not come back. Perhaps—I have hoped it—the early memories will draw her home again."

He ceased and the woman withdrew her hand and placed it on Lord Alwyn's shoulder.

"Stop, dear!" she said. "Now look at me. I want to ask you a question. Do you love her as much as you love me?"

Lord Alwyn laughed rather bitterly.

"I don't love her at all," he said. "And how much I love you you know. But, my dear, because I do not love her I feel my duty the more strongly. So I am going to try to find her—and so—"

"Good-bye," she whispered, and raised her lips to his. For a moment they clung to each other with all the strength and passion of two who know that thence forward their lives must be sundered forever. Then she was gone and he was alone in the starlight and with his sorrow.

Lord Alwyn spent three days in New York. He called on his detective agency, but they had learned nothing. Then he took the train for Colorado.

It had changed hardly at all during ten years, that wild, mountainous country. When he stepped out at the depot he found the same little station and the same station master, though the man did not recognize in him the boy whom he had speeded heartily on his way home a decade previously. Lord Alwyn hired a rig and drove the ten miles to old Aaron's ranch. The road was still deserted, still bordered by barren plains whereon no crops grew. It was not until he reached the ranch that he came upon signs of cultivation. Then his heart leaped. The little house still stood in its location, and smoke was issuing from the chimney.

But it could not be she! No doubt the place was leased. That accounted for the cultivated fields—for the girl would never have come back to manage the farm alone. Alwyn drew rein at the door, hitched his horse to the old post, and knocked. A woman opened it. It was Eva, dressed as a rancher's daughter, a rake over her shoulder, her hands dusty with hay, but Eva matured—No, it was not Eva. It was Alice Pasquale!

Lord Alwyn staggered against the door and his hands, groping feebly, found hers and held them.

"Do you know me now, dearest?" she whispered. "Have you found her again, this Eva, this ignorant girl?"

"Alice!" he said, chokingly, "it is you? You are Eva?"

She placed her arms round his neck and drew his head down to her breast.

"You couldn't have known, dearest," she whispered. "It was cruel of me to try you so long. How could you have recognized the ignorant farmer's girl in Alice Pasquale, the singer, the Italian nobleman's adopted daughter? But I have waited for you so long, my dear!"

(Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman.)

Scared Them Off.

They had put up "Please do not handle" and "Please keep hands off" signs without number in that department, but people had gone handling just the same. At last the department got a new manager, and he took down all the polite old-fashioned warnings and tacked onto every precious garment a "Beware" sign printed in red ink with ever so many exclamation points. After that everybody stood at a respectful distance and kept hands in their muffs.

The First Letter of Her Name

By ALBERT KENYON

One evenin' when I watered the horses and milked the cows and done all the other chores we farmers have to do I went into the house and got my supper. By the time I'd washed the dishes I was dead tired and, settin' down in front of the fire, got to thinkin' what a lot o' work I had to do that was usually done by women. I could stand it all till it came to washin' dishes, and that I always hated.

There came a rap at the door and Cynthia Jones came in to ask me if I wouldn't lend her mother a quart of milk. The Joneses have the next farm to mine. There's one boy and five girls. I've often wondered what Farmer Jones'll do with all his girls. There's only one livin' at the farm, and that'll go to the boy. I went to the springhouse and got Cynthia the milk, and as I handed it to her she said:

"You're very comfortable here, Mr. Crabb, ain't you?"

"Well, yes," I answered. "I'm comfortable enough."

"Don't you ever git lonesome livin' all alone?"

"No. I don't git lonesome at all. You see, by the time I git the dishes washed it's perty nigh bedtime."

"Do you like dishwashin'? Most men don't."

"I hate it."

"Why don't you git a woman to do it for you?"

"I don't know anybody that would like to hire out for that purpose."

"You might marry some one. She could do all the woman's work—the sweepin', the cookin', the milkin' and all."

"I don't know any one that would marry me."

"You don't mean it! Why, there's lots o' nice girls would be glad of the position. I know a girl that would marry you and make you a good wife."

"Who's that?"

"Why, Mr. Crabb, you wouldn't have me tell you. She wouldn't thank me for doin' so. If she did it would be immodest of her."

"Is it Susan Park?"

"No."

"It ain't Melis Billings, is it?"

"No; I don't refer to Melis. But I won't give you any more guesses."

"Seems to me that's kind o' mean."

"I'll tell you what I'll do. Come in to our house Sunday night and I'll give you the first letter of her first name."

I made the call on Sunday evening and found all the family except Cynthia gone to church. There was a fire burnin' on the hearth, and the brass andirons shone beautiful. Cynthia had some apples and cider on the table waitin', and altogether everything looked mighty fine. Somehow I could never make my livin' room look like that, and I told her so. She said men couldn't do such things; only women could.

Cynthia made me feel so good that I forgot all about askin' her the letter she was goin' to tell me, and I went away without it. I met her on the road the next day, and I said:

"What was the letter you was goin' to tell me? I clean forgot it."

"You'll have to come for it next Sunday," she said as she hurried on.

I went the next Sunday night, and the first thing I did was to ask for that letter before I forgot it. Cynthia said she'd tell me just before I went home, only I was to remind her of it.

The family was mostly at home this time, and Cynthia took me into a little 6 by 9 room off the dinin' room. There was only one easy chair in it. Cynthia set herself down in that and left me a chair with a wooden seat. Toward 10 o'clock I got so tired I couldn't stand it any longer. I got up and walked about to rest myself, and Cynthia moved aside, and, seein' she didn't intend to be mean about it, I set down beside her.

Would you believe it? I went away without thinkin' to remind her of the first letter of the girl's name who would like to marry me. I met her in a few days in the store and asked her for it, but she said I'd have to try it again and if I didn't remember this time she wouldn't tell me at all.

I went round the third time to get that letter and found not only the family at home, but a lot o' friends there. So Cynthia had to take me to a closet where they kept old books and magazines, and we set on the pile with our legs stickin' out into the hall. The closet was narrower than the easy chair we'd set in the second night I was there, and there wa'n't no room for my arm; so I had to put it around her. We set there that a-way from 7 till 10 o'clock.

"By cracky," I said jest as I was a-goin' away, "if I didn't pretty nigh forgit ag'in to ask for that letter!"

Cynthia larfed and said that the first letter I had missed by not askin' for it at my first call and the second I'd missed on my second call. So I was only entitled to the third letter, which was "n." I didn't like that way o' puttin' me off and went back and set down ag'in to persuade her to tell me the whole thing. She wouldn't, but we had our heads perty nigh together and a lock of her hair brushed my cheek. I kissed her. Then I said I didn't care a rap for all the letters of the other girl's name. I wanted her to come in and do the woman's work on my farm for me.

And, laws, how we did kick up our heels at the weddin'!

Only One of a Kind.

"Why do you think he is such a remarkable man?"

"He's the only one I ever knew who had nerve enough to make the responses in the marriage service loud enough so that any one could hear him."—Chicago Post.

"I AM SATISFIED I COULD NOT LIVE

If It Were Not For "Fruit-a-tives", The Wonderful Fruit Medicine

FENAGHVALE, ONT., JAN. 29th, 1910

"For thirty five years (and I am now a man over seventy) I have been a terrible sufferer from Constipation. No matter what remedy or physicians I employed, the result was always the same—impossible to get a cure. About 2 years ago, I read the testimonial of Hon. John Costigan regarding "Fruit-a-tives" and I decided to give them a trial. I have used "Fruit-a-tives" ever since. They are the first and only medicine that suited my case. If it were not for "Fruit-a-tives", I am satisfied I could not live" JAMES PROUDFOOT.

Mr. Proudfoot is one of the prominent farmers of Prescott County and has been Treasurer of Caledonia Township for years. "Fruit-a-tives" is sold at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50—trial size, 25c. by dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

AN ARTISTIC SUIT.

Sartorial Inspiration From the Orient.

OF CRAPE TUSSORE IN BROCADED DESIGN

This novelty tailored suit designed for the autumn is made by a famous dressmaking establishment of Paris. The fabric is crape tussore in a brocaded pattern. The suit is trimmed with printed silk in Post-Impressionist effect and with plaited chiffon. The coat is a modified cutaway affair, showing vest and skirt of an oriental type and a tunic of brown chiffon. The inspiration is derived from modern art and oriental form.

Ruskin as a Patient.

Matlock, so dear to John Ruskin brought him within sight of death in 1871. It was a wretched, wet summer; he went out in a miserable morning to paint, took a chill, and aggravated the internal inflammation that followed to a dangerous degree by refusing to take the doctor's medicines. The sequel is delightful. Irritated at the doctor's remonstrance he demanded what was the worst thing he could take. Beef, they told him, and beef he insisted upon having at once. It was late at night and Matlock was scoured for some time before beef could be found. Then, says Mrs. Arthur Severn, he "enjoyed his late supper thoroughly, and, though we all waited anxiously till the morning for the result, it had done him no harm. And when he was told pepper was bad for him he dredged it freely over his food in defiance."

A mirror which reflects true colors is said to have been invented.

REMAINS OF VINCENT ECK TO BE INTERRED HERE

The mystery as to the identification of the man who was killed in the auto accident near Lakefield, has at last been cleared away.

Messrs. Leonard J. Singleton, of Cobalt and Richmond Robinson, of St. Catharines, are in the city arranging for the interment of the remains, which will arrive in the city this evening from Kingston. They had been sent to the medical college.

The father of Vincent Eck, in London, England, cabled Mr. Robinson yesterday requesting him to claim the body and arrange for the interment.

On arrival of the train, the remains will be removed to Belleghem's undertaking establishment and interment will take place in St. Peter's Cemetery, to-morrow morning.

OUR TORONTO LETTER

By an Occasional Contributor

AT THE CANADIAN CLUB.

I attended the Canadian Club luncheon on Saturday. The Rt. Hon. Herbert Samuel is a most polished and incisive speaker. Endeavoring to lay aside prejudice, I nevertheless must say that he made Sir George Ross (whom I used to think the most brilliant platform speaker in Canada) sound like a bladder full of dried peas. The poor man had to say something. I was almost sorry for him.

CANDID CRITICISM.

A week or so ago I went to Newmarket to see the launching of the Canadian League. It was the frostiest meeting I was ever in. Mr. Cooper is a wretched speaker, dry, hard and labored. He left everybody (himself included) with their hearts in their boots.

Mr. Hawkes, who is something of a humorist and possesses several of the characteristics of an excellent speaker, warmed things up a little, but at least half of his jokes missed fire. The Review hit the mark splendidly when it said that the failure and flatness was due to the non-party attitude. Neither side was prepared to cheer for such philosophical detatchment.

BROWNING LECTURER.

I am attending a course of lectures (eight of them) on Browning by Edward Howard Griggs. The first was last Thursday, entitled "The Positive Message," Rabbi Ben Ezra. The lectures to follow are respectively, "Abt Vogler," "Andrea Del Sarto," "Cleon," "Paracelsus," "Ring and the Book," "Capponsacchi," "Tompilia." You will see that with a man like Howard Grigg, who has developed lecturing to a consumate art there is a treat in store.

PROBLEMS OF FRUIT GROWER

During a sitting of the Select Standing Committee of the House of Commons on Agriculture and Colonization a few months ago it came out in evidence that many apple growers were last year unable to secure more than from 75c. to $1.00 per barrel on the tree and in some districts hundreds of barrels of good fruit were allowed to fall to the ground and rot because no profitable market could be found for it. It came out also that in the western provinces consumers, were required to pay from $5.00 to $5.50 per barrel for good fruit. Mr J. A. Ruddick, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, in giving evidence on this question pointed out that about $1.75 per barrel was received in the Lake Ontario and Lake Erie Districts by the members of co-operative associations while independent growers received about $1.00 per barrel. The Commissioner in referring to the discrepancy between the first and final prices of apples estimated that the unavoidable expenses amounted to about $2.23 per barrel made up as follows:—barrel, 45c; packing, 17c, management expenses or commission to a local buyer, 19c; freight to Winnipeg, 80c; broker's commission, 12c; and retailer's profit 50c per barrel.

The question of marketing was but one of many dealt with by the special committee who had as witnesses besides the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, Messrs. Daniel Johnson, Forest, Ont., S. B. Chute, Berwick, N.S., W. S. Foggo, Vernon, B.C., and James Hardwell, Ottawa.

As evidence of the value of the grower of co-operation Mr. Johnson instanced the case of a woman who was offered by a local buyer, $125 for her crop for which she received through a co-operative association $1,035.

Mr. Chute who represented 1,500 farmers, as manager of the United Fruit Companies of Nova Scotia, explained that through his organization 5,000 tons of fertilizer had been bought from the manufacturers for the members who had benefitted to the extent of about $15,000 on purchases of fertilizers, spraying machines and materials, farm implements, seeds and other requirements.

Equally interesting evidence was given by the other witnesses all of which appears in a pamphlet of 116 pages that has been printed for public distribution by the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

ARIZONA

The motion pictures of that great play, "Arizona," shown at the Grand last night was witnessed by a fairly large audience. The film was in six parts, and was remarkably clear and distinct, and they were the best motion pictures ever presented in this city.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Mrs. G. B. Deforest of Newport, R. I., has erected a memorial stone to her deceased pet bulldog.

Miss Ina Shepherd of Birmingham, Ala., is credited with being the first woman to have charge of a clearing house.

Mrs. Harriet Johnston-Wood, a practicing lawyer of New York, is waging a determined campaign to be appointed to the bench in the children's court in that city.

The first woman commissioner of any city which has adopted the commission form of government is Miss Julia B. Johnson, who is city commissioner of Sacramento, Cal.

Miss Dora Keen of Philadelphia, the mountain climber, is a slight little woman of much personal charm, about the last one would pick in a crowd as the conqueror of Mt. Blackburn, one of the highest peaks in Alaska.

Mrs. Laura V. G. Mackie and Mrs. Samuel Holman have been registered school voters of Attleboro, Mass., for a period of thirty-one years. They were the first women to register there and have since been voting at every election.

City Life Not Always Degenerating.

Life in a great city does not necessarily lead to physical degeneration. There died a London fish hawker about four years ago who could trace his family back 200 years, and had never heard of any addition of country blood. He died within a few weeks of his golden wedding, and left 21 children, 71 grandchildren, and 20 great-grandchildren. None of the children married out of the London district in which they lived, except a soldier son who emigrated. The old man plied his trade until within two days of his death, and "could pull his barrow twenty miles; he had sinews like a young 'un, and not a corn on his feet."

New Fields in Which to Earn Money.

Spurred by the high cost of living the self supporting woman is developing fresh versatility in the way of opening new fields in which to earn money.

One business woman leases a seven room apartment, retains four rooms for herself and her mother and rents the three remaining rooms at $15 a month each. With such an arrangement almost the entire rent of the apartment is paid by the roomers. This woman has run a self supporting establishment on this plan for two years and recommends the idea as the most satisfactory way of maintaining a comfortable home.

"I don't believe in starting such a venture," she says, "unless a woman has the necessary furniture and is naturally fond of housekeeping. To go in debt for the furniture means a struggle to catch up which takes away much of the pleasure of the arrangement.

"With even a few hundred dollars ahead to meet one's rent in case rooms are not taken, I see no reason why my plan should not appeal to many business women who are now living in tiny rooms in boarding houses. There is nothing co-operative in our arrangement and the three women who room with us are free to leave at any time. I take all the financial risk.

"We have a laundress twice a week, and one day a woman comes to clean. Our rent is practically nothing. We get our own breakfasts and go to a boarding house in the neighborhood for our dinners. With the present cost of food we have found it more satisfactory to follow this plan."

Train and Track.

Hobart, Australia, has municipal street car lines.

There are 256 railway stations within a six mile radius of St. Paul's cathedral, London.

If plans for standardizing the gauge of the railways of Australia as recommended by the chief engineers of the different lines be carried out it will mean an expenditure of $180,000,000.

The average freight train load in the United States is, or was in 1910, 380 tons. In England the average is only about eighty-five or ninety tons, except on the Northeastern railway. This railway by introducing American methods has, a railway journal asserts, increased its average train load to nearly 134 tons.

Short Stories.

It is estimated that there are at least 2,000,000 gasoline or oil engines at work on the farms of the United States.

Though school slates have been thought to be out of date, more than 4,400,000 of them were manufactured in the United States last year.

A new printing, gumming and perforating machine in the bureau of engraving and printing at Washington turns out a mile of finished postage stamps every five minutes.

AUSTRALIA COMPLETES NAVAL UNIT

OTTAWA, Oct, 6— Cordial greetings have just passed between Premier Borden and the First Minister of the Australian Commonwealth Hon, Joseph Cook, on the completion of the Battleship Australia and the cruiser Sydney.

The Canadian Premier cabled as follows: "The Government, on behalf of the people of Canada, tender their congratulations on the occasion of the official reception of the battleship Australia and the cruiser Sydney. Be assured that Canada stands shoulder to shoulder with Australia and the over-seas dominions in the firm resolve to safeguard our common heritage."

Premier Cook's reply contained the same strong note of Imperial unity. "Cordial thanks," it ran "for kind congratulations. Heartily reciprocate their brotherly spirit. We are celebrating to-day the completion of an Australian unit of the Empire's peace-compelling navy, gladly sharing the obligations for the defence of the whole King's dominions In this spirit we greet our Canadian brothers, May the cement of Empire set even more firmly as our navies grow."

WHY THE POLES WON'T COME DOWN

Viewing the beginning of the paving work on George street, citizens are asking questions, and making comment. They have seen, during the last six weeks the street dug up and trenches made, filled in, and within a few days the same area dug up again and re-filled in.

They have seen what seems to them a whole lot of useless work, in that it would appear that by a little concurrence and co-operation much work and contingent expense might be saved. Possibly this is all a misconception, and if the facts were known, the reason would be seen.

The trouble seems to be that no information is afforded. If the City Engineer's department would take the public into its confidence, so far as to tell what is being done, the object in doing it, it would be well. The people whose money is being expended have not only a desire but a right to know. But these arms of the service, the Engineer's department, the streets and bridges force are busy, and take it for granted that when they are carrying out orders, and diligent, they are doing all that is required. There are the newspapers, why not make use of them.

Take for instance the matter of the old wooden trolly guy wire poles. The new steel Hydro street light poles have been erected. It is understood that these poles will also be used to carry the supporting wires for the street car service cable. The poles are all ready The street is being excavated, why not remove the old wooden poles, now. Why leave them, as seems to be the intention, to be pulled out after the pavement is laid, leaving a lot of holes to fill up? To the average citizen here seems to be a chance for a little decent co-operation But no.

In view of the to be expropriation proceedings it is only reasonable to expect that the relations between the Light and Power Co. and the the City service will not be too cordial. Somebody feels hurt, not unnaturally. What the Light and Power Co. could do is one thing, what they will do is another. And it puts forward the following state of affairs, and it carries a not unfair explanation.

These trolly wire poles do a double duty. Not only do they carry the power cable of the street railway but also the distribution system of the lighting service to the stores and business places.

It has been determined for the local, or Hydro, system that light will be served to stores from a back lane line, that is all from the rear. That line is not built, as yet, Until it is erected and connections made the service must be from the front. From the front means from the trolley poles. So the wooden poles must remain despite the paving going on around. When the whole thing is cleaned up there will be a spot every so far as a blemish on the line and surface of the nice new curb. These spots will remind us of the past when wood was king and steel had not come in, and people a couple of years hence will ask why things were done in such a way and if it could not have been prevented.

Either we have started paving too soon, or our lighting system too late, Which is it?

SIR GEORGE ROSS' REMARKS ON THE NAVY AND THE RECIPROCITY PACT

We Will Get All We Want From United States Without Entangling Relations He Says—Canada Should do It's Duty Generously and Quickly

The City of Toronto was honored on Saturday by a visit of Hon. H. L. Samuel, Postmaster-General of Great Britain, and the distinguished guest spoke before a representative gathering at a banquet given by N. W. Rowell K.C.

In moving a vote of thanks to the speaker, Sir George Ross is reported by the Toronto World as follows;

Sir George Ross, in moving a vote of thanks to Mr. Samuel, paid him the compliment that while they had on the present occasion welcomed him for his imperial connection, they would in future be prepared to welcome him for himself. He had expressed how fully he appreciated the principle of self-government, and had recognized the necessity of reliance on themselves as the basis of imperial prosperity. There had been a time when Canadians had aspirations which failed to be realized owing to the magnificent influence of Downing street. This had passed away, thanks to the labors of Durham, Lord John Russell, Wellington, who settled this matter for us, Tory though he was, in the House of Lords, and Elgin. The sentiments which made Britons free were the sentiments of the blood and aspirations of Canadians, and had Mr. Samuel repeated the ten commandments, he could have received no more ready an assent than to his views on imperial greatness and local autonomy.

ENTANGLING RELATIONS.

Tariff reform had only one fundamental objection that need be considered. Sir George had taken strong ground against the reciprocity treaty four years ago, he said, and he did not want them to imperil any imperial ties, and so he desired to avoid any entangling relations with other nations. The very weight of the United States tariff, he felt, would cure itself, and the time would come when they would give us all we wanted without any entangling relations."

"We are getting that to-day," asserted Sir George, amid applause. He thought they should avoid any legislation that would place us in the position of having to consult each other about their actions. This brought him to a personal matter, the attitude he had adopted on the navy question.

"I agree that so far as Canada is concerned Canada is not doing her share," was his declaration. It met with great and prolonged applause. Canada should, he felt, at the earliest possible moment perform her full duty in providing for the defence of the empire. This was not a political view. It did not belong to the Conservative or the Liberal party. The only difference between them was as to how the duty should be done. One party would centre the control in the imperial hands, while the other believed in a policy of decentralization

NAVY A COMMON DEFENCE.

He hoped the duty of Canada would be recognized. "Let us do it generously and let us do it quickly," was his view. The navy was as much a defence of Canada as of the empire. Any attack on the North Sea was as serious to us as an attack in the St Lawrence. Any attack on the Mediterranean affected us as much as if it were on the Atlantic seaboard. The overthrow of Britain was the overthrow of Canada. Her ruin was the ruin of our independence. Any attack on the navy was not on their but our navy, the old British navy that had been afloat since the days of Cromwell, and powerful ever since. Emerson had said that the pulse of England beat like a trip-hammer. They could feel its throb in Canada. If the seat of government was ever transferred from London to the Dominion it would be found surrounded by people just as loyal as in Britain. He moved a vote of hearty thanks to Mr. Samuel for his noble speech, Gladstonian in breadth, the speech of a statesman, as they understand statesmanship in Canada.

W. K. McNaught, M.L.A., in seconding the motion, was, he said, if not persuaded to be a Liberal, certainly charmed with the speech. They would carry away a lively recollection of his personality, and Mr. Samuel could carry a message from both parties that no matter how much they fought among themselves, and they differed on many questions, they were united as one in love for the old flag and the empire.

NEW SUFFRAGETTE

Militant suffragists were sadly in need of an active worker and fighter when Lady Sybil Smith offered herself for the post. She is a daughter of Lord and Lady Antrim, and the wife of Mr. V. H. Smith, a partner of the big banking firm of Morgan, Grenfell & Co. Since fighting for "the vote" made a wreck of Lady Constance Lytton, sister of Lord Lytton, there was no titled woman to fight the police. It would be hard to find a greater enthusiast than Lady Constance's successor, who is very Irish, and daring enough for anything. It now transpires that she has hatched half the cleverest of the militant suffragists' plots and that she is always ready to do that which she devises.

But the poor old Earl of Antrim, one of the old school, with the Irishman's horror of seeing any of his womenfolk in the public eye, has been frantic and declares that there ought to be a law by which a man can divorce a wife who is a suffragist. When Lady Sybil was recently arrested in the House of Commons with Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, she was more active in her resistance than any other prisoner and with her jewelled rings gave the policeman a mark that will be there for some time. She says that she is prepared to die for "the cause," and would rather give up her family than it.

Criticizing Queen Alexandra.

The fact that Queen Alexandra has sent a wedding present to Manuel of Portugal, inscribed, "To my dear Manuel, King of Portugal, from his affectionate aunt, Alexandra," and that the King and Queen sent a present very similarly inscribed, caused much comment, and a good many people are still contending that Manuel should not be openly styled King in a country that recognizes the Portuguese Republic, and precedents are cited.

When Louis Philippe became an exile in England after the revolution of 1848, he and his wife lived quietly at Claremont as the Count and Countess De Neuilly. One of the newspapers goes so far as to say: "Perhaps Sir Edward Grey will oblige with a hint."

TRACK LAYING ON THE G.T.R. RAILWAY

Track laying on the main line of the G. T. P. Ry. is proceeding towards Prince George at a rapid rate, Steel is now at mile 1,200 from Winnipeg. A short check was experienced at mile 1190 where the railway for the second time crosses the Fraser River. Track laying was held up for a short time while the steel bridge across the Fraser River was completed. This obstacle has now been successfully passed and the track laying machines are steadily pushing their way forward. The Fraser River is crossed for the third time about forty miles west of the second crossing, but bridge here will not be allowed to delay track laying, temporary trestle be erected to get the steel across the river. The steel bridge will be put in place shortly after, and towards the end of November the track should reach Prince George.

Raith, a station on the G.T.P. Ry., 57 miles West of Fort William, has been made a divisional point for operating convenience, and engines and crews on the G.T.P.Ry. will, from now on, be changed there.

One hundred and five miles of branch line in the Province of Saskatchewan have just been opened for traffic by the G.T.P.Ry. with the inauguration of mixed train service on a part of the Biggar-Calgary Branch. This line has been completed to Loverna, on the boundary line between Saskatchewan and Alberta, 105 miles from Biggar. Mixed train will leave Biggar on Tuesday and Friday 8.00 a.m., arriving at Loverna 6.30 p.m. on same day. East bound train will leave Loverna 6.00 a.m on Wednesday and Saturday, arriivng at Biggar 6.30 p.m same day. The territory through which this line runs is a very rich one, and heavy shipments of wheat are looked for in the next few weeks. Promising towns have shown large growth at Dodsland, Coleville, Dewar Lake and Loverna

Track laying on the Regina-Moose Jaw and North Westerly branch of the G.T.P.Ry. has just been completed to mile 91, a short distance beyond Mawer, Sask., fifty miles west of Moose Jaw, and within a few miles of the Saskatchewan River. Permission has been granted by the Board of Railway Commissioners for operation of this line, and as this is one of the greatest grain producing lines in the west, a very heavy traffic will move this season.

On the Tofield-Calgary Branch of the G.T.P.Ry., ballasting has been completed into Calgary, and first-passenger service can be established as soon as Terminals at Calgary are completed. Owing to the solid construction of this line, the service between Calgary, Tofield and Edmonton will be particularly good.

Have you tried cheese balls rolled in egg, and bread crumbs and fried in boiling fat? They are delicious when served with lettuce hearts and Virginia ham.

On the Bridge

A Night Long and Happily Remembered

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Molly Dearborn's father signaled the trolley car at the corner of the village street and helped Kitty Baker up the high step to one of the front seats.

"Thank you, Mr. Dearborn; good night," cried Kitty, waving her hand as he swung off the moving car.

"Good night," he called back, adding to the conductor as the rear of the car passed him, "Please let that young lady off at Belmont street."

The conductor shouted back some answer, and the almost empty car whizzed away into the darkness of the surrounding country.

"Grandmother will scold," she thought, turning up the collar of her coat and lifting her face to the strong breeze that swept through the open car. "She will tell me that Bakers and Witherams always rode in their own carriages and that no lady returned home unescorted from any merrymaking. But we are quite poor now, and our days of splendor are past. As long as I work side by side in the same office as Molly I must use the same vehicle that she does."

Kitty smiled a little as she thought of the errand that had taken her to Molly's that August evening. Molly was to be married, and Kitty had gone out to Homedale to see all the dainty details of the trousseau and to discuss the simple plans. She was to be bridesmaid when Molly was married in the village church.

The conductor thrust a calloused, blackened palm under her pretty nose, and Kitty fumbled for a nickel and paid it. The bell jangled several times; then there was nothing save the flash of the car toward the city between walls of green trees on either side of the track.

Thinking of weddings reminded Kitty of one that might have been hers if her pride had not caused her to break troth with Len Thornleigh when the Baked fortune went to smash at her father's death. It had been Len's first year at college, and he had chafed bitterly because he must wait three years before he could leave and support her. He wanted to break off and go into his father's business without completing his college career; but the great magnate had demurred and held Len to a promise made years before.

Kitty had not seen Len since she had sent him that cruel letter that made him see light at last. Nothing but cruelty would have opened his eyes. She closed her eyes now, and a strangled sob rose to her lips as she thought of the last three years of waiting.

They stopped at a little hooded station and changed conductors. Kitty Baker never knew it. She sat there drowsily, her face very tender, thinking of Len Thornleigh.

The bell ringing up fares roused her a little, and she groped for another five cent piece. There was nothing left in her purse save a silver quarter. She held it in her gloved fingers, waiting for the conductor.

When he came she did not look up. He leaned across the intervening space and held out his hand.

Kitty stared down at the hand. It was very different from the hand of the other conductor. This was a clean, brown, muscular looking hand, with well kept nails and a plain gold ring on the little finger.

It was a familiar hand. A sudden horror smote Kitty Baker, and she thrust forward the silver quarter. Somehow it spun away out of her fingers and went into the darkness.

"Oh!" she cried sharply. "I haven't another penny with me!" Then she looked into his face and saw that if the hand was the hand of Len Thornleigh the face certainly belonged to the son of the great financier. His eyes met hers uncertainly, steadied and became bits of gray agate.

It could not be Len, for he did not recognize her. It was a wonderful resemblance.

"That was all the money I had," apologized Kitty. "What shall I do?"

"You can pay me another time," he said gravely and touched his hat. He rang up her fare and went away to the back of the car.

Kitty sat paralyzed with surprise. It was Len Thornleigh's voice she had heard too.

Her good sense told her that this was absurd—to imagine that this trolley conductor could be Len Thornleigh! Why, Len drove around in his own high power motorcars, and she had read only the day before that his father was building a great country house at Marblehead.

The car whistled shrilly as it went down the steep incline that approached a narrow bridge over the little river. As they rumbled over the bridge the car slackened speed and came to a sudden standstill at the same instant that the lights went out.

The conductor went forward and sat down with the motorman. They talked together in low tones. Kitty looked back through the car and saw one man sitting alone on the rear seat. He appeared to be asleep, although he stirred as she looked at him.

It was very quiet there waiting for the power to return to the trolley cables. Kitty yawned sleepily and wondered if grandmother would scold very much when she returned home.

She closed her eyes, and the wind blew little tendrils of her brown hair over her white forehead.

A hot breath on her neck roused her instantly.

"Might as well be sociable," said a thick voice behind her, and she turned to find that the solitary passenger had walked along the running board and taken a seat back of her. "Don't care how long we stay, do you?" He laughed recklessly, and Kitty sat there frozen with horror.

If the conductor or the motorman would only turn around!

"S'pose I might as well sit beside you," mumbled the man as he essayed to climb over the seat.

"Please don't!" cried Kitty, unaware of the sharp terror in her voice.

A dark form swung into view from the front platform, and the motorman thrust his head through the open front window.

The conductor pushed the loafer back into the seat and hustled him into the rear of the car. "Stay there," he ordered sternly, "or I'll put you off—understand?"

The loafer grumbled himself into uneasy slumber, and the conductor came up and stood at the end of Kitty's seat. Kitty could see his form outlined against the open end.

"I am sorry he frightened you," he said courteously. "I should not have left the car only I thought he was asleep."

"It is no matter," trembled Kitty. "Must we wait long?"

"I cannot say. There is something wrong at the power house. The service has been poor all day."

He sat down on the end of her seat and removed his cap, letting the wind ruffle his hair. He did not address her again.

Kitty knew that he was sitting there to protect her, and she felt a grateful stir of warmth at his thoughtfulness. It was what one would expect from a man that looked so much like Len Thornleigh!

Suddenly he put up his hand and rumpled his hair in such a familiar manner that Kitty Baker overstepped the bounds of conventionality and exclaimed:

"Len!"

Like a flash he turned toward her and sat staring. In that instant the light flared up and revealed her face. Again they were in darkness, but he was sliding along the seat toward her. "Kitty! Is it really you?" he asked hoarsely.

"Why, Len, Len, it is you after all!" she half sobbed.

Somehow her hands were in his and he was holding them tightly, shaking them up and down.

"What are you doing here?" he asked brusquely, as one unaccustomed to seeing his womankind riding unprotected in public vehicles at midnight.

Kitty told him frankly, finding a delicious sense of relief in talking to him again.

"And you?" she asked at last.

"Working—earning my living," he said grimly.

"Then you are poor. Something has happened. Oh, Len, I am so glad!" Kitty's voice was betraying.

"Now that I am a wage earner you can tell me if you love me," he said gently.

"Oh, Len, of course I do!" sobbed Kitty on his shoulder, and the motorman discreetly turned his back upon them.

"And you will marry me?" he asked after an interval.

"Yes," she whispered, "if you can take grandmother too."

"Of course. I wish there were more of you to take, uncles and cousins and aunts," he chuckled gayly, then suddenly: "But how about my father's money? You hate the stuff."

"Yes, in a way, only I felt I could not hold you to your promise when I was so poor, and—and—I thought you were working for your living now." Kitty drew away from his arms.

"I am. When you drew that line against my money I went to father and told him if I went through college I would earn every penny myself. I couldn't let the girl I loved go out to work every day and be such a drone myself. He let me do it, and I've done all sorts of things, Kitty. This trolley work is fine and cool and healthy in the summer time!" He laughed a big, healthy laugh.

"Your—father—was disappointed?"

"Not in the least. Guess what his last words were when I took this job, Kitty?" There was laughter in his voice.

"Tell me."

"'Go out and grub for your living. It won't hurt you. And if you can find that little girl of yours—Dan Baker's daughter—just kidnap her and tell her there is a big, lonesome house waiting for her here.'" Len's voice was very tender when he concluded.

"And grandmother, too?" asked Kitty weakly.

"Room for a dozen like her. You know all our women folks have died," said Len in a hushed voice.

"Len, I believe you need us," whispered Kitty, and this time she did not resist when his arms went around her.

The lights flared up again as the power returned to stay now, and Len went back to his post while the car went on toward the city, leaving the bridge behind—that mystical bridge that had brought these two parted lovers so strangely together again.

The motorman glanced back into the car. He saw Kitty's happy, blushing face dreaming there on the front seat. He saw Thornleigh's beaming countenance on the back platform and sent him an understanding signal of congratulation and good fellowship.

"Thornleigh found his girl," he thought to himself, and he stared toward the approaching city, thinking of the girl waiting there for him.

Use For Old Mat.

If you have a rubber doormat you are not using for its specific purpose or if you can get another mat for the door and put the rubber mat in the kitchen you will not regret the change. Placed in front of the sink, before which the cook must stand so much, it will afford great relief to the feet. Notwithstanding so much has been said and written about women sitting to do what work they can, the majority will stand, and if anything so easy to provide as a rubber mat will add to their comfort it should be furnished.

A FIGHTING RACE.

Why Britain Left the Interior of Somaliland.

Somaliland, the scene of this severe reverse, is an arid waste divided up between Great Britain, Italy, France, and Abyssinia. The present Somali peoples are possessed of no general type and their physical characteristics vary considerably, showing signs of interbreeding with Arabs, Abyssinians and negroes. They are a race of magnificent physique, tall, active, and robust. Negro blood is shown in their frequently black complexions and wooly hair. The Somali are a fighting race. All go armed with spear, shield, and short sword, as well as a gun, when it is obtainable. During the rains incessant intertribal lootings of cattle take place. Among certain tribes those who have killed a man have the right to wear an ostrich feather in their hair. Somaliland was one of the last tracts of Africa to be explored by Europeans. The occupation of Aden by the British in 1809 proved the starting point in the opening up of the country, Aden being the chief port with which the Somali of the opposite coast traded. The British Somaliland Protectorate extends along the Gulf of Aden for about 400 miles, and stretches inland to a breadth varying from 80 to 200 miles. About 50,000 people are settled in the coast towns; the rest are nomads, who are almost constantly giving trouble. The British connection with the Somali coast dates from the early years of the last century, but British authority was not definitely established, and in 1854 Richard Burton's expedition was attacked at Berbera. In 1874 the ambition of Ismail Pasha, Khedive of Egypt, led him to occupy the posts of Tajura, Berbera and Bulbar, as well as Harrar in the hinterland. Ten years later, in consequence of the revolt of the Mahdi in the Egyptian Soudan the Khedivial garrisons were withdrawn. Thereupon Great Britain, partly to secure the route to the East via the Suez Canal, occupied Zaila, Berbera and Bulhar, officials being sent from Aden to govern the posts. Treaties guaranteeing British protection were concluded with various Somali tribes, and the boundaries of the protectorate were defined by agreements with France, Italy, and Abyssinia. In 1899 Mohammed bin Abdullah, popularly known as the Mad Mullah, first came upon the scene. He had made several pilgrimages to Mecca, where he had attached himself to a sect which enjoined strict observance of the tenets of Islam, and placed an interdict on the use of the leaves of the kat plant, much sought after by the coast Arabs and Somali for their stimulating and intoxicating properties. At first the Mullah's influence was exerted for good, and he kept the tribes over whom he had control at peace. Accredited with the possession of supernatural powers, he gathered around him a strong following. In the next few years Britain suffered several disastrous reverses and during the first months of 1910 the advanced posts were withdrawn and the British administration confined to the coast towns. In support of this decision it was urged that it was no good pursuing people whom it was impossible to catch, that the isolated posts in the interior had not been able to protect the friendly tribes, and that the semi-desert nature of the country did not justify any attempt at economic development. Before the withdrawal arrangements were made for arming and organizing the tribes in the Protectorate in their own defence

AVIATION TAKES NERVE.

And When That Is Lost the Aeronaut Should Fly No More.

He who flies constantly must look to one personal risk, which may vary according to the characteristics of the individual. This is the danger a man may incur by becoming a little careless while in the air. There is the possibility, in fact, that familiarity may breed not actual contempt, but a temporary relaxation of vigilance and piloting an aeroplane needs such watchfulness, such minute precision that any "staleness" on the part of the man at the wheel or lever represents a peril that is very real.

The pilot who flies a great deal should remind himself constantly that there is no room for error in the handling of aircraft.

A loss of confidence not difficult to understand is suffered by an air man sometimes after he has been the victim of a serious fall, and in similar circumstances a jockey, or, say, a racing motorist, may be robbed of nerve. When a pilot does lose judgment as the outcome of a bad mishap his wisest course is to cease to fly. With a broken nerve he is a menace to himself and to others as well.—Claude Grahame White in National Review.

She Wasn't Affected.

Mrs. Brown from Boston has a colored cook—from Georgia. The other day Mrs. Brown went into the kitchen, and Liza put in a request:

"Mis' Brown," she said, "won't you please, ma'am, git me a calendar?"

"Why, Liza, there's a calendar hanging by the door. You don't want another calendar."

"Yas'm, I does. But I mean a calendar what you presses things through. Dat's de kind ob calendar I wants."

Mrs. Brown had a glimmer.

"Oh, Liza, you mean a colander!" she exclaimed.

"Well, it's de same thing," said Liza patiently. "You uses de broad 'a,' but I doesn't. I just says plain calendar."—New York Globe.

LOCAL BOYS WERE WINNERS

At R. M. C. Sports Held on Saturday

Peterboro continues to send out athletes who are well known in the sporting world. Among the competitors in the R. M. C. sports at Kingston on Saturday, Harold Hill distinguished himself by running second to Kittermaster of R. M. C. in the 220 event.

The Kingston Whig says:

Some of the events were open to Queen's men, and a number contested. Hill the freshman, from Peterboro, came second to Kittermaster in the 220 yards race by less than a foot.

Relay race, (prizes presented by Col. H. M. Campbell, R.F.A., and Lieut. V. G. Gurny, 3rd Regiment) First class, Cadets, Kittermaster, Gibson, Fessenden and Matthews.

Sporting Quips.

King George's yacht has won a race. There were no American entries.—St. Louis Republic.

Luckily for some, there is only one lower end to each baseball percentage column.—Chicago News.

A pitcher may fool some of the batsmen all of the time, and all of the batsmen some of the time, but now and then they get together and knock him out of the box.—Pittsburgh Post.

Policewomen.

Baltimore has had policewomen for some time, but, unlike Chicago, the Maryland metropolis does not know how to advertise itself properly.—New York World.

Boston, too, is to have policewomen, so that no young man may speak to a young woman unless they have been introduced and both their families came over in the all commodious Mayflower.—Detroit Journal.

Summer Literature.

When old Sol waxes fiery hot
And to the beach we look
A little work that helps us out
Is father's cute pass book.

If we've no dad to aid us when
We look for lakeside nook
The next best thing to get us there
Is a pen and big check book.

But even that quite useless is
Unless by hook or crook
We own that little masterpiece—
A leather bound bank book.

And still without these little aids
You can on pleasure look
If you are but the owner of A well filled pocketbook.
—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Hardly Likely.

"Didn't Oliver Goldsmith once live here?" asked the tourist.

"I don't remember the name," said the janitor. "Who was the gent?"

"He was a poet."

"Then it's hardly likely that he ever lived here, sir. We always demand the rent in advance."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Line 'Em Out.

Look back three thousand years ago
We find, if we inquire,
They played good ball in Jericho
And better ball in Tyre.

Then Nineveh set quite a pace,
Some class had Babylon,
But when they closed the pennant race
The Hittites always won.

Mere signals, steals or inside plays
Just make the sluggers grin;
Today, as in those ancient days,
The hitites always win.
—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Taken on Trust.

"Are these good cantaloupes?"

"Yes'm."

"Are you sure?"

"Reasonably so, mum. Of course they ain't guaranteed by no trust company."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Fascination of Trouble.

All strive to shun the various cares
When ordinary life contains,
Yet when a man finds his affairs
Are free from worry's wakeful pains
And he contentedly might jog
Through paths that trouble cannot mar—
He goes and gets himself a dog
Or else he runs a motorcar.
—Washington Star.

Listing It.

"How did you list the money that fortune teller got from you?"

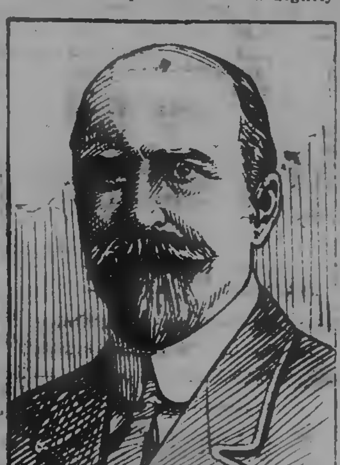
"I put it under the head of prophet and lost."—Baltimore American.

BOSSES A HUGE SHOW

DR. ORR OF TORONTO IS A MAN WITH AN IDEA.

As Years Go on His Zeal For the Canadian National Seems to Increase Instead of Slacken—Even In Illness He Keeps in Touch With the Job at All Times — Has No Love For Personal Publicity.

Dr. J. O. Orr, physician by profession, but Exhibition manager by choice, is always a prominent figure in the activities of Toronto when the Canadian National Exhibition is on. His success as an exhibition manager dates back to the first day he deserted the medicine chest for the big attractions that make a fair a combination of hippodrome and university. His power lies in his ability to do things and keep people satisfied. Good nature overbalances his dogmatic temperament, and when it comes to the choice between a clannish adherence to a decision and the gaining of a point by compromise the doctor can make the compromise with a dignity and grace that makes the other fellow feel that he has asked for too much.



DR. J. O. ORR.

The Canadian National Exhibition owes more to Dr. Orr for its success than any other individual, although it has been exceptionally fortunate in having on the board of directors a group of public-spirited business men who have valued the development of the big fair more than the time they have taken from their own business. His enthusiasm has not waned as the years of his management increase and his zeal in the interests of the Exhibition increases.

It has been said that the man will have to get up very early in the morning who wishes to pull the wool over the eyes of the manager of Toronto's Exhibition, but there is one instance in the details of managing the big fair when the doctor's sympathy was successfully exploited for the benefit of an imposter. It was about three years ago when the blowing up of a battleship by a torpedo off the lake shore at the south end of the Exhibition grounds made a terrible noise and hurled huge pieces of timber in all directions. One Exhibition visitor more cunning than honest, conceived the idea to represent himself to the doctor as having suffered serious injury to the spine from one of the falling timbers of the destroyed battleship. He played his part so well that the doctor settled the claim out of court for a few hundred dollars rather than take a chance of having to pay more. A few days after he learned from one of his friends of the Canadian Northern Railway that the same individual had recently collected a few hundred from that railway for the same injury to the very same spine. A hurried search was made of the city for the base deceiver, but he had evidently anticipated the man hunt, and left for parts unknown.

Such instances as this one are very rare in the life of Dr. Orr, but many stories could be told to indicate the care with which he safeguards the city's interests and piles up the revenues from the Exhibition. Concessionaires could testify to the increasing toll they are compelled to pay for the privileges they enjoy during the two weeks the crowds assemble at the Exhibition Grounds. The showmen on the Midway could also unfold a heart-reaching story of the dimes that are being transferred from their strong boxes to the treasury of the Exhibition.

Blowing Coal Through Pipes.

Hammersmith Borough Council, London, Eng., which has a municipal electricity undertaking and has to arrange for the storage and delivery of large quantities of coal, reports in favor of a scheme to bring the coal from the wharf to the electricity works by blowing it through a pipe. To enable the coal to pass through the pipe water would also have to be blown through and the report declares that the mixture of coal and water could be forced through at a velocity of about seven feet per second, about five miles an hour.

Upon delivery at the electricity works the coal would be allowed to settle down in the tanks, when the surplus water would be drawn off and returned to the river. The cost of the scheme is estimated at $50,000.

Duke Must Eat His Hat.

A story is going the round of the clubs that the Duke of Westminster was so convinced of the ability of the English polo team to bring back the cup to England that he told his friends he would "eat his hat" if they failed to accomplish their task. Now of course, everybody is waiting for his grace to fulfill his promise, and there is some talk of asking him to a dinner at which he will be invited to perform this [illegible] gastronomic feat.

Queen Victoria In Movies.

The life of the late Queen Victoria in moving pictures is now in preparation by one of the leading firms in the cinematograph business. After five months of preliminary work in studying historical authorities, producers are now ready to photograph scenes from the 64 years reign of Queen Victoria at a cost of $25,000.

Three actresses will appear as the Queen at different stages of her life. The incidents depicted will include the first council of her Ministers a few hours after her accession, her coronation, her reception of the explorer, David Livingstone, and the marriage of the Prince of Wales, afterward King Edward VII. Then come pictures representing her audiences with the Duke of Wellington, Lord Melbourne, Gladstone, Disraeli and John Bright. Other scenes show her opening Parliament and quietly driving in the Highlands and elsewhere.

A Tiny Printer.

Believed to be the smallest compositor in the world, Mr. Lewis Spooner is engaged at printing works at Tiptree, Essex, Eng. He is thirty-nine years old, stands three feet nine inches, and weighs 53 pounds. He stands on a stool to reach the typecase.

For the Earache.

"I am afraid I have greatly interfered with my own practice," said a celebrated aurist, "by giving the following advice to many of my friends: At the first symptoms of earache let the patient lie on the bed with the painful ear uppermost. Fold a thick towel and tuck it around the neck; then with a teaspoon fill the ear with warm water. Continue doing this for fifteen or twenty minutes. The water will fill the ear orifice and flow over on the towel. Afterward, turn over the head, let the water run out and plug the ear with warm glycerin and cotton. This may be done every hour until relief is obtained. It is an almost invariable cure and has saved many cases of acute inflammation. The water should be quite warm, but not too hot."

Are You Still Insurable?

The main secret of success is seeing and seizing the opportunities that are continually offering themselves to every man. Many men are not wide-awake enough to detect and utilize chances to improve their condition, and this explains the great number of those who have made failures of their lives. A man who cannot perceive the thing which he should do is to be pitied, but blame only is deserved by one who deliberately ignores opportunity. In this latter class must be included those who know they should insure their lives for the benefit of their families, but do not do so. Thousands while they were in good health, and could easily secure policies, have deferred this sacred duty until disease has laid its clutch on them and the very last opportunity for becoming an insurant is lost. In 1912, 50,000 applications in the United States for life insurance were rejected because of bodily ailments. Five thousand persons missed getting insurance because of hereditary taint. These could never have been insured at all, but the 45,000 others who were in ill health might have passed a medical examination if they had applied for it in time. Of these 10,000 were five years too late, 10,000 three years too late, 10,000 one year too late, 5,000 six months too late and 10,000 only two to three months too late. It is to be hoped that the army of lost opportunity in life insurance will be smaller in 1913 than it was in 1912.

The Sun Life of Canada has plans which should interest all who propose making provision for their family in the event of death, or if living, for old age.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

CITIZEN MAKES STATEMENTS WHICH ALDERMEN RESENT

C.E. Adams Carries Battle to the City Council Chamber

Council Turns Down His Claim for Damages of $500

Mr. C. E. Adams, Maria street East City, and the members of the City Council, had what might be termed a good heart-to-heart talk last night.

Mr. Adams claims that the siding constructed for the Vermont Marble Company has damaged his property and he asks $500 as compensation.

"How many of you would not put in a claim for damages if a siding was put across your front door," asked Mr. Adams of the aldermen. He felt that his claim was reasonable.

Mayor Bradburn explained that the Railway Board had ordered the siding and the engineer had stated that there was no other route for the siding.

"But it might have been kept lower," remarked Ald. Anderson.

Ald. Buller reviewed the situation and stated that no other grade was possible. Everything had been done. The siding had to go in some place.

Mr. Adams said that the Council had given permission for the siding to be built before the people knew anything about it. "I don't suppose one of you came down to see the property."

ONLY WORKING PEOPLE

Mr. Adams was inclined to the view that the Council thought that as they were only working people, it didn't matter.

His Worship resented this very warmly. He said that all interests had been considered.

"I claim the property is damaged more than that," continued Mr. Adams. I come to ask for justice. The city officials come along and ask for an increase in their salaries and you give it to them."

Ald Buller—"The working man or any other man is treated on equal terms. It has always been our aim to give the workingman a fair chance."

The work had been advertised for days and Mr. Adams or any others had the opportunity to examine the blue print.

"These things" said Ald. Buller, are done according to an Act of Parliament and Mr. Adams in talking the way he does is not fair. They can't have factories without sidings."

Ald Langford thought that Mr. Adams might not know of the legal points in connection with the preliminary steps towards the siding and he followed this up by asking the Council the same question as did Mr Adams.

Mayor Bradburn asked Ald. Langford why he did not vote. (The report of the Legal Committee included the recommendation that no action be taken and it was adopted) Ald. Langford did not vote either way.

"Like Ald. Langford, every member voted for it in Council," said Ald. Buller. I'm not in the Legal Committee but you are," he said addressing Ald. Langford.

"I didn't get any notice of the meeting," protested Ald. Langford.

"We all understood," said Ald. Anderson "that the siding was going to be detrimental to property, but we couldn't get it any other way. I don't see how they are going to remedy it."

THE OTHER SIDE

"Now for the other side," remarked Ald. Green, who had so far been silent. "Have we not increased the value of the property by getting the factory. Would Mr. Adams or any other man take the same price for his property as he would have taken twelve months ago. To get factories we have to do this sort of thing."

Ald. Duffus suggested that the matter might be taken up with a view to a remedy of some extent.

"Anything we can do along that line," concluded Ald. Buller I for one will do it. Anything that can be fixed up for Mr. Adams, we will be only too pleased to do it.

RECOMMENDATION WAS PASSED

The recommendation of the Fire, Water and Light Committee that the Eastwood building be allowed to remain as it now stands, was adopted by Council last night.

Ald. Duncan took a parting shot, he stating that he did not approve of it. Ald. Anderson and Ald. Duffus did not vote for the recommendation.

THEY GIVE BONDS

Ald. Langford is not sure that it is the best move to proceed with paving on George street. At Council meeting last night he remarked on the amount of excavations that had been made recently on that street. He thought that perhaps it would have been better to have permitted a proper settlement of the earth so that a proper foundation would be possible.

Mayor Bradburn answered that he had been assured by the City Engineer and also by Mr. Gleeson that there was no doubt about the excavations. This matter had been gone into very thoroughly, and His Worship did not think that the contractors would give the regular five year bond, and also their own bond for a further term of five years if they had any doubts. Next spring the merchants would have a paved street instead of mud.

Ald. Duffus favored all the pavement possible but he thought Ald. Langford's point a good one. There was a certain amount of chance.

"If we have taken a chance they are doing it all over the country," said Ald. Buller in answer to Ald. Duffus. "We have been after the people to make the connections, and if we did not go on with the work, they wouldn't have them made in twenty years. When this work is completed it will be a credit to the city."

BIG ORDERS FOR THE CANADIAN GENERAL

Toronto, Oct. 7.—The Canadian Northern Railway has just placed with the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited, an order for the complete electrification of its tunnel under Mount Royal and of its terminals on Dorchester street, in Montreal. The contract, which amounts to about $500,000, includes seven locomotives, multiple unit cars, generators, switchboards and other auxiliary apparatus.

It might be mentioned in the same connection that the same company were given an order recently by the Canadian Pacific Railway for the electrification of the Castlegar branch in the Kootenay district.

Heavy electric locomotives are to be used in each case and the system will be operated at 2,400 volts direct current, which has been adapted as the standard by the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited, for electric service of that nature.

WOMEN'S ART ASSOCIATION

The annual meeting of the Peterboro branch of the Women's Art Association was held in the Studio on Monday, Oct. 6th at 8 p.m.

The president, Mrs. Aylmer, occupied the chair. The secretary read the minutes of last year's meeting which were approved, and the report of the executive was read and adopted.

This was as follows:

The annual report of the Peterboro Branch of the W.A.A. for 1912 and 1913.

During the eight years that have passed since the organization of our branch of the W.A.A., our aim has been to encourage in the people of Peterboro an interest in art; this object to a certain extent has been accomplished. The attendance at our annual exhibition held last March was larger than heretofore. The exhibition consisted of oils and water colors. The Dutch water colors appealed to everybody, and for them we are indebted to the W.A.A. of Toronto.

The Twilight Musicales, held under the auspices of our Association have become an institution in the city, and the six held during the winter were thoroughly appreciated was evinced by the large attendance.

Miss Mowat again conducted the Art Study class, which had for its subject Van Dyke's "How to judge a picture." A wood carving class with Miss Hatton as instructress, was formed in the autumn and continued until the spring.

Only one lecture was arranged for by the Association. It was given by Mr. W. F. Johnston, on the subject of "Telepathy" and was most interesting.

On August 30th, an "At Home" was held at the residence of Mrs. Arthur Stevenson when Miss Crawford of Virginia gave an interesting address on Norwegian tapestry, that covered the revival of this work, which has been for some time a lost art. The wools needed for the tapestry cannot be procured in the States, but most of them can be obtained in Canada and it seems as though there might be an opening for the industry in this country. Miss Crawford also showed specimens of her beautiful work.

The pictures shown this year at the Industrial Exhibition were of a higher class than formerly, and this is attributed to the co-operation of the W.A.A. with the directors of the Fair.

We regret to say that the prize of $5.00 offered at the Fair by the W.A.A. was again not competed for. Our association again offered medals to our Public School classes, and the work sent in was more creditable than ever before.

An affiliation for one dollar has been paid to the local branch of the National Council of Women, and members have been elected to attend as delegates.

We regret to say that we have lost, by death, one of the oldest members of this branch of the association, Mrs. George Rubidge, who passed away in June.

Flora E. Collins, Recording Secretary. Miss Jean Neill read the treasurer's report, which showed a balance of $34.50.

The report of the Reading Club was read by Mrs. Frederick.

The election of officers then took place, which resulted as follows:

Honorary President of the Women's Art Association of Canada — Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught.

Hon. President of the Branch — Mrs. Dynave.

Hon. Past-President— Miss J. Bertram.

President— Mrs. Vincent Wastwood.

1st. Vice-President— Mrs. Aylmer.
2nd. Vice-President— Mrs. Rush.
3rd. Vice-President— Miss Bennett
Cor. Secretary— Mrs. A. E. Sherwood.
Rec. Secretary— Miss Flora Collins
Treasurer— Miss Jean Neill.
Archwist— Mrs. Palmer.

Honorary Members Representatives— Miss Hatton, Miss Maud Rush, Miss Sherry, Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, Mrs. Fred Roy, Mrs. Duncan Walerk.

It was moved by Mrs. Stevenson, seconded by Mrs. Mowatt, that a vote of thanks be tendered the retiring President, Mrs. Aylmer.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTE SOLAR DISTURBANCES

The small disturbed area, appearing on the sun on Sunday afternoon, developed yesterday to an area of about 300,000,000 square miles, which to-day is reduced to about half that amount. While these figures seem large, yet in solar measurement they are very small.

As frequently during the maximum sun spot period, the disturbed area covers billions of miles.

The moon is now in a splendid position for observation. No disturbances are observed on that orb.

WANTS TO KILL BY-LAW

Ald. Duncan Would Have no Sidings on Water Street

At the next meeting of Council, Ald Duncan will move that the by-law authorizing the construction of a railway siding on Water street, to serve the Peter Hamilton Co. be repealed.

Ald Duncan's argument is that the city should open up the Houdry property and make a good street. Then provision would be made for a bridge across the river. Furthermore if the Hamilton Co. got the siding, Turners should receive the same consideration.

EXPLOSIVES IN POWDER MAGAZINE

North Monaghan Council After City Dads Again

The Council of North Monaghan claims that the city has not lived up to its promise to cease storing explosives in the powder magazine in North Monaghan.

According to a letter from the township clerk, five loads of explosives were stored there on October 3rd.

This was news to Ald. Duncan, chairman of the Property Committee. He said that Mr. Kingan had stated that no dynamite had been placed in the magazine.

Asked about the suggested arrangement to provide a magazine on the Hilliard property, Ald. Duncan replied that the ratepayers in the north end objected.

The matter was left with the Property Committee.

MUSIC HATH CHARMS BUT...

Aldermen Think They Have Been Victims Long Enough

Once again the 57th band will be asked not to hold their rehearsals on the night of a Council meeting. The melody disturbs the aldermen.

Last night both organizations had a strenuous session, and towards the close of the Council meeting, Ald. Duncan said that the band had been requested several times to discontinue their rehearsals. He moved that the City Trust Commissioners be asked to give the band notice to move out.

After several other opinions had been expressed, it was decided to give the band just one more chance to behave.

FIRE IN THE LUNDY BLOCK

Started in Packing Boxes at Rear of Store

STOCK DAMAGED

A fire, yesterday afternoon, which had it's origin in some packing boxes, at the rear of Sukloff's dry goods store in the Lundy Block, caused damage which is estimated to be in the neighborhood of $1,000.

The stock in Sukloff's store, was damaged by water and smoke. The rear of the adjoining poolroom was scorched and part of the frame verandahs in the rear of the block will have to be rebuilt. Household effects in the apartments on the second and third floors were damaged by smoke and garments left on the clothes lines were destroyed.

The packing boxes where the fire started were close to the wall and when the heat cracked the windows on the first floor, the fire entered the Sukloff store and the poolroom. The north part of the verandahs became enveloped in flames and it was fortunate that the firemen were so near at hand and responded as quickly as they did.

Fire Chief Howard says he had warned Mr. Sukloff against placing the packing boxes as was his practice, in the rear of the store. A fire some time ago started, practically in the same spot.

Yesterday afternoon some children were at play in the yard, but it is not known for certain whether they started the blaze.

PASSING OF GRANDPA CLARKE

Grandpa Clarke is dead.

The light that had been growing dimmer day by day, flickered and went out this morning about eight o'clock, and he passed on to the great beyond. He had made good use of the talents given him, he had lived a good life and he feared not the end. One of his last requests was that some one might play his favorite hymns.

The late Edward Clarke was born 88 years ago in Blackheath Hill, County of Kent, England. Over fifty years of his life had been spent in Peterborough, where he won the respect and high esteem of all.

He served his apprenticeship as machinist and in his early life he was employed in the Woolwich Arsenal, when the guns used in the Crimean War were made. When he came to this country, he obtained a position in Toronto about the time the first railway locomotive appeared there, and afterwards he was assistant engineer on the locomotive that brought the then Prince of Wales to Peterborough. In religion, the late Mr. Clarke was an Anglican and he attended St. John's Church.

Nineteen years ago yesterday, his wife passed away. The surviving members of the family are Mrs. Thos. Jobe, Ware street, with whom he had been living; Mrs. Wm Johnston, Rochester, N.Y.; Charles Clarke, Akron Ind., and Mr Frank Clarke, of this city.

The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon from the residence of Mr. Thos. Jobe, 51 Ware street, to the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. Canon Davidson will officiate.

The "Dunces" of Old.

The word dunce now means exactly the reverse of what it meant originally.

Dunce was originally a term applied to a very wise man.

Some 600 years ago there lived a philosopher whose name was Duns. He was the leader of a certain number of thinkers and scholars who were known as schoolmen, and those who followed him were known as Dunsmen, or Dunses. People in those days were not so careful of their spelling as we of a later date, and so they fell into the way of spelling the word with a "c" instead of an "s," so that Dunses soon was spelled Dunces. A dunce, therefore, signified a learned man and was a title much prized. After a certain time these dunces became very unpopular because of their scoffing at the teachings of others, especially those who were progressive in their doctrines. They had a most conceited idea that they were the only really wise men, and it was not very long before the word dunce became a term of reproach and signified a lack of good sense in the person to whom it was applied, and thus the word became reversed in meaning.

Helping the Chancellor.

The difficulty Mr. Lloyd George had in deciding what to tax and what to leave untaxed in this year's budget recalls the story of an earlier Chancellor of the Exchequer who was reduced to despair in similar circumstances.

Finally he decided to consult a friend who had on several occasions helped him to find fresh sources of revenue, and having written to this friend he waited hopefully for his reply.

The friend's suggestion came by return of post.

"Put a tax on umbrellas," he wrote, "and make the bishops order the prayer for rain to be read in all the churches."

A table of weights and measures, typewritten and framed under glass, should be hung in every kitchen.

CHARLES GIBSON'S SENTENCE COMMUTED TO PRISON FOR LIFE

GALLOWS DECREE AGAINST TORONTO YOUTH IS CANCELLED

Will Spend the Remainder of His Days in Prison--Is Greatly Relieved

A NEW TRIAL

His Friends Will Continue Efforts Towards New Trial.

OTTAWA, Oct. 8.—The prayer of the sixty thousand petitioners that the Government would interfere at the eleventh hour to save Charles Gibson from going to the gallows in Toronto on Thursday next has been answered. Last night it was announced that the sentence had been commuted to life imprisonment. It is believed that later on a new trial will be secured, and if the expected new evidence materializes, Gibson may then become a free man. His escape from the gallows comes after practically all hope had been given up, following the definite refusal of the Government last week to recommend executive clemency.

Yesterday morning Gibson's counsel, Mr. Herbert Lennox, K.C., M.P.P. for North York, with the Toronto deputation, again appeared before the Cabinet Council and urged as strongly as possible the plea for a favorable reconsideration of the application for clemency. At yesterday afternoon's sitting of the Cabinet the whole case was again gone into thoroughly.

It was finally decided that the decision of last week should be overruled, and a recommendation was made to the Administrator of the Government, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, that the death sentence be commuted to life imprisonment. This recommendation will, it is expected, be formally signed by Sir Charles to-day.

Mr. Lennox stated last night that efforts will now be directed towards securing a new trial, and he is hopeful that with expected new evidence this will be granted in the near future.

The Toronto deputation here in Gibson's behalf left for home last night well pleased with the result of their efforts. No hope was held out last week by the Government that any petitions or any deputations would be of avail in changing the Government's decision to let the law take its course. The result has proved the efficiency of the final strenuous and spectacular efforts in Gibson's behalf.

Gibson Said Nothing.

TORONTO, Oct. 8.—While official advice that the sentence of Charles Gibson had been commuted did not reach Sheriff Fred Mowat and other local officials last night, Dr. Chambers, governor of the jail, concluded that he would be justified in communicating to the young prisoner the information received from the press.

There was no outward demonstration on the part of the young man when the news was conveyed to him, as he is very unemotional. He made no remark of note. There is no doubt that he was greatly relieved.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gibson, parents of the prisoner, received the first definite word from a reporter that the Cabinet Council had decided to exercise clemency. They were deeply touched by the message. "It is a great relief," exclaimed Mr. Gibson when he was assured that definite news had been received of the commutation of his son's sentence. "Yes," added Mrs. Gibson, "it has been a great trial for use during the last eighteen months." Both were exceedingly thankful. "We can never repay the people of Toronto for what they have done," said the father.

MILLIONAIRE WAS LOST IN THE WOODS

Ottawa Lumberman Wandered Three Days in the Bush

A NARROW ESCAPE

OTTAWA, Oct. 8.—J. B. Fraser, one of Ottawa's millionaires, head of the Fraser-Bryson Lumber Co. and a director of the Bank of Ottawa, who has just arrived here, had the closest call from death that any lumberman has had since the industry was started in the Ottawa Valley. His cousin, Robert Chamberlain, of Detroit, shared the same experience.

The two started out from Fraser's Point, on the Upper Ottawa, to inspect a remote portion of the company's Deep River limit which has not been cut. The day was warm and Mr. Fraser divested himself of his coat and vest, the understanding being that the foreman and gang who were to follow would bring his clothing in the launch.

Mr. Fraser, although an experienced bushman, was not familiar with the country, and missing the place where they were to turn, on the suggestion of his fatigued companion, made, as was thought, a short cut back to camp. The sun went down and the two men were lost in the forest of Pontiac County.

The pocket compass, the essential of the bushman, was in the pocket of Mr. Fraser's vest back in the shanty.

For three days and three nights the two men wandered in the woods without any food except the wild berries they found at different points.

Just when they were about "all in" they were found by one of the search parties sent out from the headquarters of the company.

The few matches which Mr. Fraser fortunately had in his trouser pocket enabled him to kindle a fire each night and this led to the discovery of the lost ones.

CONFERENCE IS UNLIKELY

Consent in Ulster Problem Improbable, Says Samuel

OTTAWA, Oct. 8.—In a speech before the members of the Canadian Club yesterday, Rt. Hon. Herbert Samuel, British Postmaster-General dealt extensively among other topics with the Home Rule situation.

Mr. Samuel said that the first thing to know about the Ulster problem was that it was not an Ulster problem; it was a problem relating to one-half of Ulster. Ulster sent thirty-five members to Westminster, of whom 18 were in favor of home rule. The problem in effect lay in the northeast of Ulster, where there was a large, prosperous, homogeneous population violently opposed to home rule, and sending seventeen members to the Imperial Parliament. There would be no problem of the kind if all Ireland were Protestant. It was the religious difficulty essentially which has made the political difficulty. The Irish Parliament was absolutely debarred by law from touching the religious rights of any individual, or conferring any favors or imposing any disabilities on anyone on the ground of religion.

The Unionist leaders in Great Britain had declared that they would not oppose home rule if a general election resulted in a majority in its favor; but Sir Edward Carson and his colleagues said that they would never consent to home rule, whatever the result of a general election. The Imperial Government would eagerly welcome a settlement by consent. Mr. Asquith had often said so, and Mr. Redmond had signified his agreement, but the Ulster Unionists would only consent to a settlement which involved the abandonment of the Government policy. Unhappily, the prospects of a settlement by consent did not, as things were now, seem favorable. Yet for thirty years Ireland, apart from the Ulster Unionists, had unwaveringly declared for home rule, and apart from the Irish members there was a majority in the Imeprial Parliament of sixty for home rule.

TO HELP ULSTER

Saskatoon Orangemen Will Send Men or Money.

SASKATOON, Oct. 8.—Instructions to the Dominion secret service agents notwithstanding, Orangemen in Saskatchewan are prepared to send either money or men to Ireland to assist Sir Edward Carson and his followers to fight home rule. This is the attitude of the Saskatoon Orange Lodge towards the endeavors of all who think Sir Edward Carson's stand is a bluff.

C. W. Armstrong, the worshipful master of the Duke of Cumberland Lodge in an interview here yesterday stated that Orangemen in the Dominion owed it to Ireland to do all in their power to resist the home rule bill in the present form. He concluded a lengthy statement by stating that many Orangemen would leave their homes in Canada and fight for Ulster should civil war result.

AVIATOR KILLS ONE AND INJURES FOUR OTHERS

Lincoln Beachy Tried a Somersault With Disastrous Result

BATH, N.Y., Oct. 8.—One dead, another perhaps fataly injured, and three other persons suffering minor injuries is the result of an accident which occurred about three o'clock yesterday afternoon near the head of Lake Keuka, while Lincoln Beachey, the daring and renowned aviator, was about to attempt to execute a somersault with his aeroplane. Miss Ruth Hildreth, daughter of W. E. Hildreth of New York, was killed outright, and her sister, Dorothy, is critically injured. Lieutenants Richardson and Bellinger of the United States navy aviation corps, and Mr. Beachey himself suffered cuts, bruises and sprains. A large crowd of spectators had gathered in anticipation of the exhibition, and in order to gain a special point of perspective the Misses Hildreth, with Lieutenants Bellinger and Richardson, climbed to the top of a small building used as a headquarters of the naval aviators. There they were seated as Beachey flew back and forth across the field. As Beachey recognized the party he dipped his machine in salute, and his recognition was returned. Beachey flew to the end of the field, turned and came back. When directly over hte heads of the party on top of the building Beachey's machine was seen to dip dangerously, and immediately some part of the aeroplane came so close to the party on the roof as to sweep all to the ground, a distance of some eight or ten feet. The aeroplane careened wildly, and then plunged downward a distance of from 25 to 30 feet. So precipitate was the landing that Beachey was unseated and the machine was wrecked.

TO FIGHT FOR SEAT.

Albert Sevigny and D. A. La Fortune Engage In Political Duel.

ST. CHRYSOSTOME, Que., Oct. 8.—Another bye-election may result from the present contest in Chateauguay County. Yesterday afternoon in the parish of St. Antoine, D. A. La Fortune (Lib.), M.P. for Montcalm, in the course of an address flung down a challenge to Albert Sevigny (Con.), M.P. for Dorchester, to resign his seat and contest Montcalm on general party principles. Mr. Sevigny accepted the challenge unconditionally and deposited $100 as a pledge of his good faith, while Mr. La Fortune pledged a similar sum.

Mr. La Fortune did not offer to enter Dorchester, but invited the member for that constituency to contest his county. After Mr. Sevigny had accepted the terms, a memorandum of agreement was drawn up and read in the presence of the candidates and the audience.

MURDER IS HINTED AT

A Women's Disappearance Has Aroused Suspicion

HAMILTON, Oct. 8.—Has Hamilton another murder on its hands? It is feared that such is the case, and the provincial police have been asked to clear up the supposed mystery.

Mrs. Samuel Miller, 50 years of age, who up to six weeks ago lived by herself about one mile from Burnside crossings in the vicinity of Ancaster, has enigmatically disappeared, and the neighborhood believes that she has come to an untimely end.

Mrs. Miller, up to five years ago, lived with her husband at the farm house. Mr. Miller then disappeared, and the wife with her young son, has been living alone ever since.

About six weeks ago, one Monday evening, a farmer by the name of John Hyslop, was passing the old house and noticed the woman standing on the front porch talking with two men who looked very much like tramps. The farmer nodded and passed on. Although this was six weeks ago, no living persons, apparently, has seen or heard of her since.

The neighbors, it was said, regarded the place with terror, possibly induced by the fact that over twenty years ago James Stillwater, 80 years of age, was found there in bed with his throat cut. The place remained vacant for a long time before the Millers took it.

The district was considered a very lonesome one, and for this reason the woman, who seldom came to the city, was looked upon as a mysterious person. Mrs. Miller was a woman of striking appearance and said to be highly educated.

From real estate and business deals recently put through, the woman was known to have several thousands of dollars in her possession, and it is alleged that she has been killed for her money.

MEATS TO INCREASE IN PRICE

The general opinion seems to be that there will be a very noticeable increase in the price of meats, now that the new tariff measure of the United States has become law. Long before the measure was passed the sanction to the revised tariffs was anticipated and representatives of United States dealers and firms came to Canada and arranged big purchases. The result will be it is said that the already slight increase in the price offered for cattle will show further increases and this will mean a jump in price to the consumer here and elsewhere.

SOLDIERS CRUEL

They Slay All Wounded Rebels—Ordered Not to Take Prisoners.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, Oct. 8.—A report on affairs at the capital brought by Nelson O'Shaughnessy, charge d'affaires at the United States Embassy in Mexico City, was laid before John Lind, the personal representative of President Wilson, in an over-night conference. It was said that he brought no roseate pictures of conditions at the capital, but reported assurances from the national palace that fair election would be held and early pacification of the country accomplished.

A number of mining men who arrived here yesterday from the State of Durango assert that the federal troops there have been acting with far more inhumanity than the rebels. They say the federal soldiers kill all wounded rebels and that one man was dragged from the hospital immediately after one of his legs had been amputated and was placed before a firing squad.

In the coast country to the south of Vera Cruz the federal soldiers have been ordered not to take any prisoners.

Will Stand For Imperialism.

MONTREAL, Oct. 8.—The Daily Mail, Montreal's new morning newspaper, made its initial appearance this morning. In an editorial pronouncement, the aims of the paper were set forth in the following terms:

"The Montreal Daily Mail does not propose to introduce itself to the public with a long recitation of promises or professions.

"For the present, it is sufficient to say that The Daily Mail stands firmly and unalterably for British connection in all that term implies. It believes that Canada's destiny lies in its development as a nation within the British Empire, and it will promote all measures which conduce to the realization of that project.

Session in January.

OTTAWA, Oct. 8.—The Prime Minister stated yesterday afternoon that he had no reason to anticipate that Parliament would be summoned before January.

FENCE COLLAPSES

One Man Is Killed and One Badly Hurt In Toronto.

TORONTO, Oct. 8.—One man is dead and another seriously injured as the result of the collapse of a 12-foot fence surrounding the building at 90 Sherbourne street yesterday morning. Workmen were engaged in razing the fence at the time of the accident.

The dead man, Jacob Synberg of 106 Grange avenue, and Morris Hobas, 29 Wolseley street, was engaged with a companion in loading broken bricks on to his wagon standing near the fence. The falling timbers struck Synberg on the head and pinned him between the wheels of the wagon and a heavy mass of debris, crushing in his skull. Hobas escaped with a broken jaw and various body bruises. Both men were conveyed to St. Michael's Hospital, where Synberg died within a few minutes.

W. C. T. U. Convenes.

STRATFORD, Ont., Oct. 8.—Opening with an inspiring consecration service led by Miss Agnes Sproule, of Fort William, the 36th annual provincial W. C. T. U. convention opened at Central Methodist Church, with about 260 delegates present, and Mrs. E. A. Stevens, of Toronto, presiding.

The past president, Mrs. McKee, of North Bay, gave a brief address on "Fellowship." A notice of motion was given of amendments, whereby loyal temperance legions of 50 membership will be entitled to representation at the provincial convention, and those of 20 membership to county council conventions.

Let the Nation Do It.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The Times and The Telegraph publish editorials favorable to the appeal of the British committee for $300,000 fitly to celebrate the centenary of Anglo-American peace. The Telegraph recommends that the Government itself subscribe the entire sum, making "the movement national in the fullest sense of the word, for then every taxpayer would be contributing his proportional part." It adds: "Such a grant of public money could be justified on the ground that the celebration is a world event, and that the expenditure will produce far more than equivalent return."

EX-KING MANUEL.

It is reported that his grandmother has brought about a reconciliation between Manuel and his bride.

WORST JAIL IN ONTARIO

Bsantford Jail Condemned by Dr. Bruce Smith

BRANTFORD, Oct. 8.—"The male cells and the corridors of this jail are the worst in the Province of Ontario, and only for the fact that an industrial farm is proposed in this district the jail would be condemned and the necessity of a new set of cells and corridors would be insisted upon; in the meantime, careful attention to making the best of what is apparently so defective must be done. The ventilation is wretched. Prisoners kept in these corridors in idleness must of necessity become worse instead of better an account of their detention in such a jail."

This is a portion of a report forwarded to Sheriff Ross by Dr Bruce Smith, inspector of prisons and public charities, in which is given the minutes of his inspection of the county jail of Brant.

The inspector further reports as follows: "On inspection of the general condition of the building as regards cleanliness, it was found satisfactory, particularly in the female corridors. Some of the beds and bedding in the cells occupied by the male prisoners were untidy and some were not free from vermin. The male corridors and cells in this jail are not so clean as the female corridors. The conditions found around the toilets were very unsatisfactory, being both dirty and untidy."

The inspector further sets out that while quite aware that the structural defects at Brantford jail, so long complained of, render it a difficult task on the part of the jail officers to keep the jail as it should be, the necessity of a thorough cleaning is most apparent on this occasion of my visit.

"There is evidently not sufficient occupation provided for the prisoners who are in idleness and sit in the corridors hour after hour with nothing to do," stated the inspector.

GIANTS WON 3-0

In the second game to-day in the World's Series, New York and Philadelphia had failed to score at the end of the ninth innings.

Giants won in tenth 3—0.

Caught In Belting.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 8.—Matthew Concle, a Croation, 25 years of age, while lacing a belt in the blacksmith department of the Massey-Harris Co at about ten o'clock yesterday, became entangled in it and was mutilated beyond description. The head was severed, both legs and both arms torn from the body and other injuries sustained.

CHATEAUGUAY

The contest to be decided on Saturday next at Chatauguay, is one that it is difficult to prophesy about. The constituency is chiefly French and has always voted Liberal. If by any chance it should this time put in the Conservative, Mr. James Morris, it will come as a surprise to both parties and will be attributed to "Tory corruption" as indeed the Globe has already hinted.

Mr. Sydney Fisher, the Liberal candidate has some personal advantages, knowing the political game, having held the office of Minister of Agriculture in the Laurier Administration. He may therefore be automatically elected because of his political color. The Globe puts it correctly when it says:

"It is beyond reasonable doubt that if the electors were left to themselves they would elect Mr. Fisher."

But the wicked Tories will not leave the poor electors in Liberal darkness. The Globe goes on very charitably to say that "scandalous devices will be resorted to, money will be spent, and other sorts of election crookedness will be resorted to."

Doubtless Mr. Morris is a bad lot in the eyes of the Globe and has no right to come into a simple minded Liberal community and disturb their blissful ignorance.

PROTECTIVE FREE TRADE

That the Reciprocity Pact of the Laurier Government was unnecessary, and that the benefits to acrue therefrom were all in favor of the United States, is now fully proven by the passing of the new tariff law by the Wilson Government.

It would be useless to try and impress the Liberals with this fact. The Globe will claim that it is a triumph for Free Trade, and that Canada should now follow President Wilson's example.

But is it possible that Liberals can regard even President Wilson as an ingenuous devotee of Free Trade for its own sake? Why has not the States reduced these tariffs before now, and why now? The answer is, in the first place, the States have developed their industries and established themselves as a nation under Protection, and the reason why they now adopt a form of Free Trade is because their high tariffs no longer serve the purpose of protection. The new tariff is nothing but a modified form of protection and is created for self-defence and to suit changed conditions.

There may be a call now for a reconsideration of our tariff, and this will be done with the same object in view which prompted the revision of the American tariff. But we cannot afford to throw our markets open to a nation that has had the advantage of a century of Protection start of us.

There is nothing philanthropic about the Wilson tariff, except toward the American people. Americans were suffering under high Protection, and in that respect Wilson is an emancipator. But Canadians cannot be said to be suffering under Protection. We are prosperous and progressive because we keep our markets for Canadians, and for us to throw off all protection, even as the States has done, would be the height of folly, and nothing short of commercial and national suicide.

EDITORIAL NOTES

When is an emigrant not an emigrant?

Answer—When he's an immigrant.

Prince Charles of Wrede Wurseburg, was fined $7 for insulting a telephone girl. It seems he got mad and called the operator names over the 'phone, and said that the office was apparently a "hog pen," and that the girls were evidently reading novels between the switches. He paid the $7 willingly and thought it was cheap.

THE BATTLE OF CHATEAUGUAY

"Le Canada" announces that the Liberals will make the naval question the leading issue in the Chateauguay bye-election.

Follow me, my gallant cohorts, forward into battle's fray;
Float the grand old party banner in the heart of Chateauguay,
For I feel the old-time fever coursing madly through each vein—
"Laurier and two fleet units," Wilfrid is himself again!

What care I for "wider markets" promised just two years ago;
Wilson gave that its quietus with a solar-plexus blow;
Now we must have something newer if we hope to win the day—
"Laurier and two fleet units," that's the stuff for Chateauguay!

Come on, Pugsley; buck up, Fisher; serve it to 'em piping hot;
You're the boys to keep it going, you're the daddies of the lot;
Get Mackenzie King in harness, with his pretty little airs;
Oil the old machine up quickly, battles are not won by prayers!

See my white plumes dancing gaily in the struggle's foremost van;
"Money on the old cock," messieurs; try and beat me if you can;
I am fresh as any daisy, though I'm nearing seventy-three;
I'm the chap that put the little MY right in AUTONOMY!

Condemned Modern Dances.

Canon Newbolt, preaching in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, recently, strongly condemned the modern dances and those novels of the present day which, in the nauseous unreserve of the society novel, dealt with sex problems.

Such dances and such books, the preacher said, flourished because society persuaded itself that immodesty is artistic, and that anything is permissible which removes monotony. He asked, "Would an indecent dance, suggestive of evil and destructive of modesty, disgrace our civilization for a moment if professed Christians were to say, 'I will not allow my daughter to turn into a Salome, even although Herod were to give me half his kingdom?'"

M.P. Had Luck.

The popular member of the British Parliament who left bank notes to the value of £65 in a taxi-cab recently, and had them returned by a friend who fortunately proved to be the next fare, has had good luck which is denied to many. On discovering his loss the M.P. communicated with Scotland Yard, but before the police could reply he received a telegram from his friend apprising him that he had found on the seat of a taxi-cab which he had hired not only the bank notes, but papers which showed the identity of the owner.

Clergymen Barred.

As a club the Personal Service Club in Piccadilly is unique in that it altogether debars clergymen from becoming members, though it has a resident chaplain of its own. Recently, however, this rule has been relaxed in favor of the two Archbishops and the Bishop of London, who are honorary members. The club was founded in King George's coronation year, and none but University and public school men are admitted to membership.

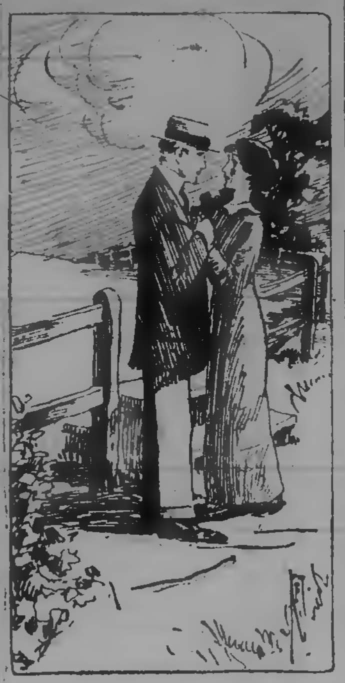
WHEN HE RETURNED

Human Interest Story of Broken Financier's Home-Coming.

By JOHN LINFOOT.



"I Have Always Loved You, John."

Bremerton, huddled up in his seat, looked out of the window of the West-bound Limited. Neat farm houses, well tilled fields, flew past, with sleek cattle that looked up, munching contentedly, out of the lush grasses. It was the prairie country of Iowa, the region of black earth and farmlands, the nation's dairy and the center of her agricultural wealth.

"It looks like my home country," he reflected, as he caught sight of a distant range of low hills, blue in the haze of the afternoon. "And to think that I might have been living here, perhaps with my few acres, happy, never knowing or caring of anything that lay behind these hills!"

The train slowed, drew into the station, waited a few moments, and then puffed out again. A man came into the carriage and stopped at Bremerton's side. The financier looked up with a start and unconcealed impatience.

"Excuse me, sir, but are you John Bremerton?" asked the other.

"Well?" Bremerton demanded curtly.

"I was sure that I was on your track. I knew I had recognized you. I want the inside story of the failure of the Cornucopia bank. I am a representative of the Iowa Free-Soiler."

"Good Lord, man, that story has been printed in every newspaper between here and Kingdom Come," said Bremerton angrily. "Don't you read the metropolitan press out here?"

"O yes, indeed," said the reporter, smiling, "but you know, Mr. Bremerton, that the story has never come from your own lips. You have succeeded in secluding yourself from all the newspaper men. Now it would be a great feather in my cap if you would give me an exclusive interview."

"You see, sir," the reporter continued, "of course we have all the details of the failure. We know that you were made the victim of an unscrupulous gang of financiers who wanted your properties. Nobody has ever breathed a word against your reputation. When the crash came you went back, faced the music, and came out with flying colors. But what are you going to do now? You are an Iowa man by birth, are you not? And you never married, Mr. Bremerton? Have you come back to settle in your state and marry your first sweetheart? I want a real human story."

"A real human story!" repeated Bremerton mechanically, and smiled a little bitterly at the irony of events which had left his life, except for his widened experience, just where it had been when he had left Framington, a penniless country boy, fifteen years before. And his first sweetheart—Lizzie Gray! She was only fifteen then and he twenty-one, but he was going to become rich and famous in the metropolis—perhaps he would even make twenty dollars a week—and then, when that miracle occurred, he was going to send her the fare to come to him, and they would live happily all their lives. He had written—every day for a month, then every other day, then twice a week, once a week, once a month; after a year his letters ceased. After two years he had stopped thinking of her. He had heard, not long afterward, that she was married.

"Framington! Change here for Des Moines!" shouted the conductor, and Bremerton started up hastily and seized his suit case. He had taken passage to Des Moines, although he had been indifferent where he went.

Standing upon the platform he found the reporter at his elbow. He had entirely forgotten him.

"I'm afraid there's a wait of two hours for the Des Moines train," he said. "We just missed the connection. Now, Mr. Bremerton, won't you please help me with that story? It will mean a great deal to me, sir."

Bremerton was a man of quick decisions. He pulled out his watch.

"Three o'clock," he said, glancing at the dial. He turned to the other. "My son," he said, "I'm going to take an hour's stroll through the old place. Perhaps it will get me into a sentimental mood, or a reminiscent one. If it does—well, I'll be back at four and I'll give you that story."

He strolled out of the station. Except that a few new buildings had sprung up, it was astonishing how little the town had changed during the fifteen years of his absence. Here was the old, irregular street, with its stores—he even remembered the names of them. There was Jim Hawley, the carpenter, still bending over his bench, industrious as ever; there the same old orchard in which he had gathered stolen apples when he was a boy. Then he was passing into the open country, and always his feet led him toward his father's home. He had refused to rent the old place after the old people had died, from some sentimental motives which he was ashamed to confess to himself. How empty and forlorn it looked, with its boarded windows, and the garden once trim, but now overgrown with weeds. And at the end of the lane was the Grays' cottage. That was not forlorn, but stood, trim and immaculate as ever, in its neat little garden.

A woman was walking up the lane. She had turned in from below, just where the Gray cottage abutted on the pike. She would see him when she came out of the bend a few feet from the stile. Bremerton remembered how his heart had hammered that morning he had first kissed her. It was here, and Lizzie had walked just as she walked now, unconscious that he waited there. He had wanted to run away, as he wanted to run now. And she had looked up suddenly and seen him, just as she looked up now.

And both had trembled, just as both were trembling now.

And he had kissed her, just as he kissed her now.

For the rush of the years was swept away, and they were boy and girl again beside the rustic stile. And it was only afterward, when they started guiltily away, that they remembered.

Bremerton remembered that he was a mature man, verging upon middle life, who had lost all the happy aspirations and ideals of youth. And she. . . . She had hardly changed except that her figure had grown mature and her face more thoughtful, graver.

"You are—not married then?" he stammered.

She looked at him coldly, the flush of shame slowly fading out of her cheeks.

"How can you ask me that, John?" she said.

"But I heard—I heard—"

"That's why you ceased to write?"

He had never been able to deceive Lizzie. Now the old impulse toward confession burned in him.

"No," he answered, "I ceased to write before I was told. But still, I am sure that if I had not heard so I should some day have come back."

"To redeem your pledge, John? Well, I release you from it. So let your conscience rest. My school occupies all my life and is my whole interest. While you—you are, or were, a very busy man and a very famous one."

"Then you have heard?" he asked.

"Of course I've heard of you, John Bremerton," she answered. "I—we have all followed your career with the greatest interest," she continued, coloring faintly. "You know we are all proud of you in Framington."

"Were proud," he corrected.

"Are proud, John," she replied, looking steadily into his eyes. "Because you fell fighting like a man, and never did a single dishonorable thing. And when they got you down it was they who were disgraced, not you. I am glad you came back for this little while, John, so that I could tell you this—that we all believe in you."

"O, if only I had never gone!" he cried. "If I could have life over again I would stay here and live out my life with you. I've been a fool, Lizzie, and in searching for the pot of gold under the rainbow I found the gold—but I guess I missed the rainbow. But now the gold is gone and the rainbow is still shining. Lizzie, I've come back to stay—with you."

"With me?" she repeated. "With me, John?"

"I want you," he cried. "I have never known what happiness meant since I went away. And even though I ceased to write and—well, forgot you—I always had a vision of time when I should come back to you. But you see I thought I had lost the right to come. Lizzie, dear, I have found you again. I want to keep you. Will you be my wife?"

"You—you mean that, John?" she stammered. "But—Oh, no, John, you are just chivalrous. I am not for you now; your place is in the city, where you will again make your mark—while I—"

He drew her into his arms, and she lay there at last, happily. He bent his face to hers.

"Tell me you love me," he whispered.

"I have always loved you, John," she answered back. "And somehow I always knew that you would come. Oh!"

She disengaged herself hastily, looking up the lane in terror, and, following her glance, Bremerton perceived the reporter approaching toward them. He was walking blithely and whistling. He had evidently not seem them, but now, coming upon them suddenly, he stopped short and began apologizing nervously.

"I was just taking a walk—" he began. "I thought I need not sit in that station till four. I didn't know—"

"That's all right, son," answered Bremerton. "Never mind that appointment, but sit down on that stile. I'm going to give you a real human story."

A Double Exchange

By REGINALD D. HAVEN

One day after I had taken a luncheon in a restaurant the waiter handed me my overcoat. I put it on and left the place. While walking along I put my hand in a side pocket of the overcoat and grasped a letter. Not being aware of having anything in that pocket, I pulled it out and looked at the superscription. To my surprise, the letter was not addressed to me at all. It was postmarked the city where I then was and where I lived and was written in a feminine hand. I put it back where I found it, returned to the restaurant and told the proprietor that I had changed coats with some one. He said that whoever had taken my coat had not yet discovered his error, or at least had not returned it. I gave him my address and went away, resolved to keep the coat I had until I got my own.

The same evening after dinner I read the note I had come upon, with a view to finding some clew to the fellow who had taken my coat. What was my surprise to find a promise from a girl who signed herself "Anne" to meet the man to whom the letter was addressed on a certain corner at a certain hour that very evening and to marry him.

This was the only clew I found. If I wanted my coat back I could go to the place of rendezvous and demand it. I thought it would be rather hard on a man who was about to be married to call on him to rectify such a mistake. Such a commonplace proceeding would spoil a romance. Nevertheless I concluded to go for this reason: Probably the man, having discovered that the letter had passed into other hands, would call off the elopement, but would go to the place of rendezvous, presuming that I had read the note and would go there myself to find him and get back my coat.

The meeting was to be at 11 o'clock. The place was a crossing of two streets on which were only dwelling houses and at no time much frequented. At 11 o'clock at night only some late home goer would pass it. I went there at a quarter to 11, or, rather, I walked up one of the cross streets, around the block and passed the corner by another. I kept this up until exactly at 11 I passed a lady, noticing that she was veiled. I walked on, turned and took position behind a tree box.

The lady was doing the same thing I had been doing, and she kept it up till nearly half past 11. Then I saw her go to a street lamp, look at her watch, hesitate, and by the way she started off I knew she had made up her mind to give up whatever she was there for.

I hurried up to her and said, "Pardon me, but you may be looking for some one who having lost a note mentioning the time and place of the meeting has been unabled to keep the appointment." Then I told her the reason for my being there. To prove my story I handed her the note she had written.

She was very much agitated. As soon as she had convinced herself that I had given her what I pretended to give she tore it into bits. She didn't seem to be thinking of me or the story I had told. Her mind was evidently on the man she was to have met and not very pleasantly on him.

"He doubtless lost your note," I remarked, "before having fixed in his memory the time of"—

"Nonsense!" she exclaimed, stamping her foot. "He has failed me—intentionally failed me."

"May I see you to your home?" I asked.

"No—yes."

"My second thought," I said, "is always more valuable, and, presuming that yours is the same, I shall accept your second mandate. I shall see you home; but, though I am a stranger to you, I trust you will not believe I am going for the purpose of learning where you live. If you prefer it I will leave you before"—

"Come as far as you like," she snapped. "You can't do me any harm."

She lived not far away, and we were but a few minutes reaching her home. Instead of stealing in, she put a latchkey in the door and opened it.

"I don't like," she said at parting, "that even a stranger should leave me without an explanation of this affair, but it is too long a story to be told here. Come to see me tomorrow evening and I will give you such information as I trust may indicate that I am not such a fool as would appear from what you have seen of me."

I accepted the invitation and listened to her story, which she was two hours in telling. I have not room for it here and I don't care to dwell on it. I can only say that notwithstanding the hope she had expressed in giving me the invitation she had not been especially wise in trusting a man who, from certain of his doings that she told me would lead any man not a fool to set him down as a cad. But men are fooled by women who could not fool their own sex, and women are fooled by men whom a man would see through at once.

The reason I don't care to dwell on the lady's story is that there is another story which more directly concerns me. It, too, is lengthy, though it may be all told in a few words—viz, the lady is my wife.

I never got my overcoat, and I never wanted it, for I would not wear it after it had been worn by the other party. The one I took in exchange for it I sent to a hospital for criminals.

Appreciated the Judge's Wit.

"That wasn't a bad epigram on the magistrate's part," said the somewhat educated tramp, who had been convicted for vagrancy.

"What did he say?" asked the tramp's pal.

"Seven days," came the reply.

"That ain't no epigram, is it?"

"I'm sure it is. I asked a cove once what an epigram was, and he says, 'It's a short sentence that sounds light, but gives you plenty to think about.'"

BOARD OF EDUCATION

"It's the largest increase we have ever experienced," remarked Mr. W. H. Hill at the Board of Education meeting last evening.

The statement was in regard to the report of the school attendance which report shows an increase of over 200 in the Public Schools.

Dr. Morrison, chairman of the Board, thought it was advisable to open the primary room in the South Central. Some forty new primary scholars had started to the Queen Mary on Monday morning.

The matter of engaging a supply teacher was discussed and was left in the hands of the Committee on Appointments. Owing to the absence of Mr. Eastwood chairman of the Industrial Committee, the report of the committee will be made at the next session of the Board. Inspector Mowat, of the Public School staff, reported the scheme to be meeting with remarkable success. It will necessitate five classes a week to handle the large enrollment of students.

Mr. J. J. Turner was of the opinion that the appropriation of $1000 might not be sufficient. The Finance Committee will look into the matter.

As a result of a motion of Messrs. Turner and Crane, the City Council will be requested to make a settlement in connection with the buying of the extra land south of the King Edward school property.

The matter of a formal opening of the new schools will come up at the next meeting of the Board.

INSURANCE ON SCHOOLS

Near the close of the meeting Mr. Turner inquired into the matter of insurance in connection with the new schools. Some of the local insurance men feel that an injustice is being done to them.

Mr. L. M. Hayes, K.C., chairman of the Finance Committee explained the matter and said that as soon as the new schools were taken over the matter would be adjusted.

Contractor W. J. Johnston wrote stating that he had completed the new East Ward school, which he now considered as taken off his hands by the Board of Education.—Received.

THE COLLEGIATE CADETS

The report of the Deputy Minister of Education on the Collegiate Cadets was found to be highly satisfactory and commendable. Major Gillespie of the 3rd. Division, the Inspecting Officer reported the local corps to be exceptionally good.

USE WEST WARD SCHOOL

Mr. E. G. Patterson wrote the Board suggesting that they retain the old West Ward school for the purpose of carrying on the technical classes during the day. In his letter Mr. Patterson pointed out that the city needed more facilities for that work and that the west ward school would answer for that purpose. The matter was referred to the Property Committee. The members of the Board however, heartily agreed with the idea and pronounced it to be a good one.

The request of the P.C.I. Athletic Association for their annual grant of $30 was granted.

CHORAL SOCIETY

The St. George's Choral Society will be allowed the use of the Assembly Hall at the Collegiate for $25. The janitor will be paid $1 per evening for his services by the society.

TWO FLAG POLES

A communication from the Peterborough Canoe Company, re the construction of two flag poles, one at the Queen Mary school and one at the King George school, which would cost $50 each, was referred to the Building Committee with power to act.

COMMITTEE REPORTS

The following report was adopted by the Board, in connection with the construction of a fence between the Grace Church and the North Ward School property,

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education

Gentlemen: Regarding the communication from the Secretary of the George Street Methodist church, requesting the erection of a fence between the school property and that of the church, and which was referred to this Committee, we beg to report that the following clause is embodied in the deed from the Church to the Board of Education:

"And the said parties of the second part for themselves their successors and assigns, hereby covenant unto the said parties of the first part, their successors and assigns, that they will forthwith erect along the western limit of said land hereby conveyed, a substantial close board fence at least six feet high with the smooth side on the east and extending from the south face of their school building to the rear of said lot number fourteen, and that they will for all time keep the said fence in repair and renew it from time to time so that the same "shall always be a good and substantial fence."

Your Committee therefore recommend that the fence be erected forthwith in accordance with the agreement.

All of which is respectfully submitedt,

B. F. ACKERMAN,
Chairman.

PLAGUE OF RATS

While removing an oat stack on his farm near Carman, Man., recently, Wilson Roblin discovered a large colony of rats. With the aid of pitchforks Mr. Roblin and his hired man were able to kill eighty-six. As Carman is 50 miles west of Winnipeg this is regarded evidence that unless drastic and determined effort is made to exterminate them it will be but a short time until this pest spreads all over Western Canada.

Not All "Pure Maple."

Extensive adulteration of maple sugar and maple syrup is indicated in bulletins just issued by the Inland Revenue Department. Of 128 samples sold as maple syrups, only 86 were found to be genuine, while of 82 maple sugar samples, 36 were adulterated.

ONE CHARGE WAS DISMISSED

In Police Court, this morning, a charge of seduction preferred against Garnet Innis was dismissed.

A more serious charge must be faced by Innis on Thursday, October 16. In the meantime, the young man has his liberty, the bail bonds having been renewed and accepted.

Before Magistrate Dumble, this morning, the young girl whom it is alleged was wronged by Innis, and also her mother gave evidence, but in the opinion of His Worship the evidence was not sufficient to show that Innis' relations with the girl were the outcome of his promise to marry her. The girl is 17 years of age.

G. N. Gordon appeared for the defendant and R. E. Wood conducted the prosecution.

The court-room was closed to the curious.

There should be three pairs of scissors in the kitchen — one for diving vegetables, one for trimming fish, and one for general use.

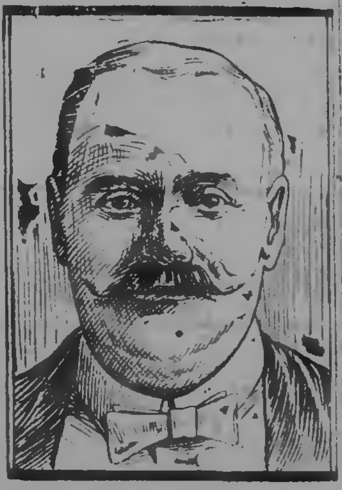
HE WOULD NOT LIKE TO LEAVE LONDON

KING OF ENGLISH COOKS LOVES THE OLD FASHIONS.

Thomas Davey Excludes French From His Menu and Is Firmly Decided That "'Ome Cookin' Is Best" — He Is Seventy-One Years of Age and the Most Celebrated Cook In the Metropolis.

On Easter Eve of the year 1867 Thomas Davey stepped out of the Old Rainbow Tavern, Fleet Street, London, to take a vacation. The next morning at eleven o'clock, instead of carrying out this threat, he donned a white apron in that ancient Arcadia of healthy appetities known throughout the world as "Simpson's-in-the-Strand." At that moment he came into his own; and it is still his own. And although the throne from which he holds sway as chef of the mighty Simpson's is situated two storeys below ground, in a little six by six snuggery of an office, he ranks with King Nicholas of Montenegro, who rules from many storeys above ground in his tiny mountain fastness, as one of the veteran sovereigns of Europe. On the thirty-first of July "Davey" — he lost the "Thomas" long ago—reached seventy-one years of age, the same age as King Nicholas. And again to draw a comparison with the Balkan ruler, he wields his despotic sceptre with an arm that is unshaken by age and yet with a democracy that has brought all the great London Bohemians of the last half century to bend the knee before his chefs d'oeuvre of culinary art.

Did I say chef d'oeuvre? Davey would not be guilty of such a Gallicism. There is not a French word in Simpson's bill of fare, and Davey is a believer in the entente cordiale only to the extent of having the choicest burgundies, clarets, and Chablis listed on the carte de vin— "wine list" it is called at Simpson's.



THOMAS DAVEY.

Davey's motto is that "good English food is food." He has a negligent contempt for the menus of Paris and Berlin which have found their way into many parts of the British metropolis. As he expresses it in his unalloyed Cockney — for Davey is born well within the sound of Bow Bells — "Wot a man eats makes a man. Well, look at them Frenchies and Germans, then tyke a look at an Englishman. That settles it. 'Ome cookin' for me!"

Davey's long observance of his motto in his daily life has brought him rotundity of figure.

Davey's rotundity is scarcely surprising; for Davey's menus for Davey are not slender ones. His eyes twinkled more merrily than ever as he suggested that he would probably partake of the following fare for his dinner that evening: As a starter, Scotch hotch-potch soup, which is mutton liquor with chopepd parseley and cream; then some salmon with lobster sauce, or "a bit o' white bait"—these merely as appertizers; the real hunger allayer to be roast chicken and bath chap, which is cured pig's face, or some roast duckling and peas; "and then," said Davey, "I should top off with some currant and raspberry tart with lemon pudding and cream, with a savory of bloaters' roes on toast." This, with some "stout and bitter," and fine old tawny port.

Because of Davey's distinctly English menus he has an enormous following of foreigners, and in summer the restaurant is crowded with Americans. When the "old Simpson's" fell before the house-breaker nine years ago and a new and palatial Simpson's rose phoenix-like from its fall, Davey scrupulously continued the old traditions, and the joints still go round on wheeled trays to each guest, the coffee is just the same, and the old romance is still there, even though this year the place was again enlarged to meet the requirements.

Many attempts have been made, especially to lure Davey away. Great restaurants have vied in offers for his services, asking him to "name his own price." And then delegations of Simpsonites have gone down the two flights of stairs to wait with bated breath for Davey's decision. But as Davey explained, with just a suspicion of a quaver in his voice, "a quarter of a century ago, when I was still young and foolish, they might have tempted me. But it's too late now. And as an Englishman, I'm still able to back my cooking against that of any man in the world."

Most Modern Things Ancient.

Discovery of a prehistoric Turkish bath in Ireland suggests again the thought that most of the things about which modern civilization boasts are ancient. An automatic machine was in use to supply sacrificial water in an ancient Grek temple. Queen Maria Theresa had an elevator in her house at Luxembourg at least as early as 1777, and an omnibus was running in Paris in 1662. In 1667 Robert Hooke conveyed sounds to a distance by distended wire—telephoned, in fact.

Recent Inventions.

Metal legs to be snapped on washtubs to raise them from floors have been patented by a Wisconsin man.

Arguing that a thief will be less likely to steal hand baggage that has no handle upon it, an inventor has patented a detachable handle for suit cases.

A talking machine may be made to repeat a record through the invention by a German of a disk on which is a return groove to carry the needle automatically from the end back to the starting point.

Was a Brave Sailor.

An interesting figure passed away recently in Toronto with the death of Captain O. G. V. Spain. He was one of Canada's few authorities on naval matters and coast defence, and had an active career as a sea fighter. As midshipman, he served on His Majesty's battleship "Minotaur" in the Egyptian War in 1882, and first scented the smoke of battle. For bravery in this war, he was awarded the Khedive's bronze star. In 1884-5, two years later, as Lieut. Spain, he served on the "Dolphin" during operations at Suakim in the East Soudan, and was again recognized for bravery in connection with a long-drawn-out defence of the army's water supply.

When he retired from the British navy, Captain Spain was made commander of the Canadian armed cruising fleet, of eleven ships, guarding the fisheries on the Canadian coasts.

In 1893, he was made Commissioner of Dominion Police. In 1904, he was appointed wreck commissioner for Canada, and a nautical member of the lighthouse board. In 1905, he was made commander of Canada's marine service.

LINDSAY IN THE MOVIES

Only Expence Will be Hotel Bill of Operator

Lindsay Post

The Cleveland Motion Picture Film and Supply Co., of Cleveland has notified the Council that Jos. W. Jones, Commissioner of Canadian Agricultural and Industrial Bureau has made arrangements with the firm to send one of their moving picture men to this town to take 50 ft. of moving pictures of our business streets, factories in operation, water power and any public improvements desired to be shown.

These will be exhibited in the principal cities and towns throughout the State of Ohio and elsewhere in leading picture theatres without any cost to the Council, since Mr. Jones is defraying all expenses.

This modern method of publicity demonstrates to the manufacturer in a comprehensive manner the manufacturing and shipping facilities of the town, that cannot be otherwise shown.

In a letter from Commissioner Jones dealing with this matter, it was pointed out that the only cost to the town would be the hotel bill of the moving picture operator, $6, providing he is kept no longer than three days. Commissioner Jones will also accompany him on his trip. The town will also be given a complimentary picture of the council in session.

The council thought the scheme an excellent one, and a resolution accepting the proposition went through with a bang.

DIRECTIONS FOR TREATING WINTER AND SPRING BULBS

Distribution Being Made to Members of the Horticultural Society

Bulbs for distribution to the members of the Peterborough Horticultural Society have been received and are being delivered this week. Any member not receiving his allotment within the next few days is requested to call the Secretary's attention to the same.

For the benefit of those who may not be familiar with the handling of these Winter and Spring flowering bulbs, we give the following simple direction for handling them.

The general treatment of Hyacinths, Daffodils and Narcissus is the same. A light, porus soil just suits them—some garden loam, leaf mould and sand mixed together. Use 5 inch pots for Hyacinths and Narcissus. Place some pieces of broken pot in the bottom so as to secure free drainage, and then fill up to within two inches of the top, set a bulb on the soil in the centre of the pot, then fill in with soil until the bulb is about two-thirds covered. Set the pot down once or twice with a sharp rap so as to settle the soil and bulb down well. This will leave sufficient space for watering. When the potting is finished as above described give water sufficient to wet the soil all through. The pots should now be placed in a dark, cool place, to remain several weeks while the bulbs are making roots, for it is necessary that these should form before the growth of the leaves and flower. For from six to eight weeks will be sufficient to fill the pots full of roots, and care should be taken during this time to see that pots do not dry out. Some varieties root faster than others and will show signs of leaf growth, and these can be taken up first to the light, while the others are left to bring up later, thus causing them to bloom at different times, successively over a number of weeks. They should be placed in a good light in a temperature of from 50 to 60 degrees, and freely ventilated on fine days.

Messmore, late of Pauri, India, will give a talk. Refreshments will be served before the close of the session. A cordial invitation to be present is extended to all the ladies of Omemee.

Mrs. Robert Toole and her daughter, Miss Myrtle, have taken up residence on King street, Omemee, one door west of Coronation Hall.

Dr. and Mrs. McNaughton, of Hamilton, were the guests on Wednesday last of his cousin, Mrs. O. G. Williamson.

Mrs. Thomas Mitchell and her daughter, Violet, have removed to Peterborough, where they intend to reside.

The sad news arrived of the death of Mr Wm. McAdoo about the 28th or 29th September, at his home at Picton. The deceased had been in failing health for some time, resulting from a neglected cold contracted while taking out wood and timber from the swamp in the winter. He had lived for seven or eight years at Mount Pleasant, where he had charge of the cheese factory. He was a comparatively young man, a hard worker and well known throughout Cavan and Emily townships. The funeral took place from his mother's home at Picton, on Wednesday, to the cemetery of that place. Messrs. Robert and Joseph Boyd, brothers-in-law, were present at the obsequies. Besides a sorrowing wife, he leaves to mourn his early death a young and much loved daughter, Bernice, to whom, and a large circle of other relatives, the sincerest sympathy is extended. The Independent Order of Oddfellows, of which the deceased was a member, attended the funeral.

Mr. Lowery Brooks is home for a few holidays.

Mrs. Morrison, of Peterborough, was the guest of her Omemee friends over Sunday.

Mr. H. R. Murray attended the wedding of his niece at Norwood last week.

Mr. Noel Clarke was home from Peterborough for over Sunday.

Major H. Fee, of Lindsay, was in town on Sunday.

Misses Grace Laidley and Edith Feir attended the Teachers' Convention at Lindsay on Thursday and Friday.

Mr. Staples spent Sunday at his home at Bethany.

Miss Thurston spent the week end at her home at Dunsford.

Miss Wray spent Sunday at her home in Lindsay.

Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Best, of Emily South, were business visitors to town on Saturday.

Messrs. F. Magee and A. Finlay, of Orange Corners, were in town Saturday.

Pleasant weather and an attractive lot of farm stock and implements drew a large crowd to the auction sale of Mr. T. A. McConnell on Thursday afternoon. Good prices were realized. There was a noticeable tendency to depreciation in the price of horses. Mr. W. J. Howden was the auctioneer.

Mr. J. H. McQuade has returned from an extended trip to the Prairie Provinces.

The Misses Parsons have returned home after a lengthy holiday with out-of-town friends.

Mr. George Shield made a business all Monday.

Mr. S. Lowes, of Peterborough, was in town on business the first of the week.

THROUGH EGYPT

Illustrated Lecture for Y.M.C.A. Boys, Friday Night

The Boys' Department Bible Class of the Y.M.C.A. met Monday night for the first time this season. The class this year under the supervision of Mr. Gailey, the energetic secretary of the Boys' Department, promises to be the most successful and instructive yet held.

The usual social evening will be held on Friday evening. Rev. T. J. Mansell, of Charlotte street Church will deliver an illustrated lecture on that famous subject "A Trip Through Egypt." A musical program by the boys will also be presented, after which a social half hour will be spent.

The vocational lectures by the prominent professional and business men and also the ministers will undoubtedly prove to be very interesting and of a great educational value to the boys. Each speaker will deal with his own work.

Concerning Women.

Mrs. Waldorf Astor, whose home is now in England, but who was born and brought up in Virginia, is said to be immensely popular with her husband's constituency in Devonshire. She made five speeches in two days recently and is quite a queen in Plymouth.

Mrs. Frank B. Tracy, who recently resigned the presidency of the Shut-in society of Boston, has been engaged in the work for fifteen years. She was presented with a gift in gold in appreciation of her faithful services. Mrs. Tracy is the wife of the editor of the Boston Transcript.

The famous girls' school at Ogontz has at last acquired the estate upon which the school is located. It was the property originally of Jay Cooke, the financier. It passed into the hands of the members of the faithful, who were never willing to sell it until it has now passed into the hands of Miss Abby A. Sutherland, who has conducted the school for a number of years. The price paid was $500,000 for 200 acres.

The co-eds of the Ohio States university have decided that they will use no more slang. Miss Caroline Breyfogle, dean of the women, and several other members of the faculty are in favor of the campaign, which has been started in earnest. The hall in which the girls meet is called the "gab room," and the dean has offered $5 for a name to substitute for this slangy one.

Millinery Styles FOR AUTUMN AND WINTER

You will be surprised at the picturesque style of these Hats. Our workroom has spared no pains in making these the most exclusive creations at the prices they are marked. Every one is of this season's popular design. Shapes are admired for their becomingness combined with these qualities: A rich appearance, smart trims of feathers or ribbon and one that will see that fashion presents a hat that at once satisfies the demands of good style, yet keeps within the bounds of economy.

OUR first range was a Peerless too

Pure white porcelain oven and fuel doors. All nickel warming-closet-door. Adjustable damper. Broiling and toasting lever. Sliding top-section.

—and she has it yet. The Peerless of to-day is of course a much better range than the one grandmother bought. Looks better. Cooks better. And uses less coal. The oven is of quick-heating steel—the flues perfectly proportioned—all of which saves fuel. The doors drop, forming shelves to draw out the cooking dishes. The top raises for broiling. The grates work without sticking. And the appearance! Grandmother admires the new Peerless with its plain heavy nickel and its pure white porcelain doors. But yet—she clings to her own Peerless. The faithful old companion of her earlier culinary adventures still has—and always will have—a place in her home.

Sam Jinks

He Was Everybody's Fool

By F. A. MITCHEL

Sam Jinks was an abnormal individual. It was uncertain whether he was man or boy. He was undersized; he had only a few stray hairs on his face, but there were as many gray ones in his head. He spoke—when he did speak, which was seldom—with a squeaky, high pitched voice.

Sam lived by doing odd jobs in the settlement. How he came to be there or who he was no one knew. The settlers usually gave him the jobs out of charity. They gave him, too, their castoff clothes, which were not only threadbare, but altogether too big for him. He went about everything he did with great solemnity, and it was d of him that he was born for a church deacon and had failed to de p. He was the butt of many a j but he didn't seem to mind it, and he was supposed to be too obtuse to understand that he was an object of ridicule.

One of the settlers, Jim Bunkers, was especially inclined to guy Sam. He would send Sam off on fools' errands, then abuse him for not having gone in the right direction, or to the right person, or for having committed some other stupidity. Jim's disposition had been soured by ill success. He had left his wife and children to seek his fortune in a new field, opening a store in the settlement to supply the people round about. But his profits were small, and his losses from bad debts were large. The consequence was that he had put off sending for his family from year to year and was getting discouraged.

One summer the country in his vicinity filled up considerably, and by autumn Jim noticed that the demand for goods was increasing and his stock needed replenishing. Encouraged, he resolved to use all his capital as well as his credit, go to the nearest city, lay in a good stock, and there was a prospect that in one year more he might feel warranted in sending for his wife and children. He had completed his journey and was returning when, a few miles from the settlement, whom should he see sitting on a log beside the road but Sam Jinks, looking more solemn than ever.

"Hello, Sam!" exclaimed Bunkers "What are you doin' away out here?"

"Waitin' for you."

"Waitin' for me? What for?"

"Bad news."

"What's happened?" asked Bunkers in a sharp, irritable tone.

"I don't like to tell. Better wait till you git home and see for yourself."

"You doggone fool! What did you come out here to tell me bad news for and then tell me to wait for it till I get home?"

"Well, if I must tell, your store was broke into last night."

Bunkers' countenance fell. Just as prosperity was coming his hopes were dashed. Sam got up off the log. Jim started, and the two jogged on.

"Did they git away with all the stock?" asked Bunkers.

"I hain't been inside the store to see."

"What time did they break in?"

"About 10 o'clock last night."

"Didn't the neighbors know anything about it?"

"No. None of 'em lives near enough."

"How did the devils effect an entrance?"

"Pried up a winder."

"How many of 'em were there?"

"Five."

"How do you know so much about it?"

"I was there and seen it all."

"And you don't know how much stock they got away with?"

"I came away before they left."

"And didn't give any alarm?"

Sam made no reply to this, but hung his head. Jim gave him a look of contempt and could scarcely refrain from kicking him.

"Sam," he said, "you're too stupid to live. You should have run up the road to Martin's and told him."

"Now, why didn't I think o' that?" said Sam reflectively.

"Because you were born a fool and will never be anything else than a fool. You have missed the opportunity of your life. If you had given the alarm and saved my goods I would have looked out for you for the rest of your life."

The two proceeded on their way for some distance silent and with mournful countenances, Bunkers' indicating that the hopes he had cherished were blighted, Sam's indicating that he was ruing having missed the opportunity of his life. Presently the former asked

"Did you get a sufficient sight of the robbers to see what kind o' lookin persons they were?"

"Not last night when they come, but I seen 'em this mornin'."

"This mornin'!"

"Yes, they was there this mornin'."

Bunkers groaned. What a trial to have to deal with such a numskull! "You don't mean they didn't have time to get away with all the stock in the night?"

"I dunno; they was there at sunup this mornin'."

"Had they gone when you came away?"

"Reckon."

"Do you mean that they were permitted to do as they liked with my store from 10 o'clock at night till sunrise this mornin'?"

"Reckon."

"And not a neighbor interfered with them?"

"The neighbors didn't know they was there."

"After you saw them break in what did you do?"

"I listened for awhile to find out what they was about."

"What did you hear?"

"Nothin'."

"Did they have a light?"

"First off, but they put it out."

"What did you do next? You didn't stay there all night, did you?"

"I went home thinkin' I'd come here in the mornin' and break the news to you."

Bunkers, not being able to make head or tale of this incoherent statement, concluded to hurry on and find out for himself what had really happened—whether any of his stock had been left and why his neighbors had not taken any action in the matter. He had shut up his store, since he had no one to take his place while he was gone. Now he regretted taking such a chance. Martin was his nearest neighbor, about an eighth of a mile distant. The next, Saunders, lived on the other side of a hill. It was very easy for robbers to pry up a window, go into his store and appropriate what they liked. On second thought he was not so much surprised that they should take their time about it.

The wayfarers plodded on in silence till they came to a rise in the ground whence they could see Bunkers' store. Smoke curled from the chimney. The owner stood looking at it in astonishment.

"It can't be," he said, "that the rascals are strong enough to defy the whole settlement."

"There was five of 'em," suggested Sam.

"Five desperate men, well armed, might be too formidable to warrant an attack—that is, by any force that could be collected within a few miles. Mebbe they're waitin' to git in more men from a distance."

"Like enough," Sam put in.

"Shut up," growled Bunkers, irritated that Sam, too stupid to give an alarm when he saw a store broken into, should offer an opinion.

There was another silence while the two descended the declivity. Presently Sam said:

"Air you goin' to tackle 'em all alone by yourself?"

Bunkers made no reply to this. He was trying to think what it all meant, what to do. The truth is, he was badly rattled. He walked on in silence.

"How would it do," asked Sam, "for me to go ahead, see what they're doin' and come back to tell you? They wouldn't do nothin' to a measly chap like me."

Bunkers uttered an exclamation of contempt. He was not the man to put a fool into danger he would not encounter himself.

As they drew nearer a girl about fifteen years old came out of the house and stook looking up the road.

Bunkers stopped stock still.

"By jings!" he exclaimed; then added, "If that don't look just like my Emeline!"

From this time he forgot all about Sam, who dropped behind and disappeared. As Bunkers drew near the store he hastened his steps, for he saw his daughter, and before he reached her his wife came out, holding his boy, Jim, by the hand. They saw him and flew to meet him.

Mrs. Bunkers had got a legacy and used it to surprise her husband by taking herself and children to join him. She had arrived in the night and had been obliged to break into the house for shelter. There was a happy reunion.

But where was Sam?

Bunkers found him and said to him:

"Sam, anybody who calls you a fool again I'm goin' to lick him. You got it on to me splendid. I said if you had given the alarm I'd 'a' taken care o' you for the rest of your life. You come into my store and I'll give you a salary. If you're smart enough to fool me you can make somethin' of yourself. Anyway, you'd better try."

Sam tried and succeeded far beyond his employer's expectations.

For the Children

This happy young gentleman was tripping along the beach at Asbury Park, N. J., when the camera man happened along and snapped him. During the bathing hours at this famous summer resort hundreds of kiddies may be seen enjoying themselves on the edge of the surf. Of course they are always accompanied by some older person to keep them from venturing too far out, but as a rule the youngsters do not venture into the water by themselves. Playing on the sand, gathering shells and pebbles and just wetting their feet in the water is usually the extent of their bathing. When father or mother plunge them under a breaker they ordinarily set up a great shout of protest.

Speculation.

The leader in this game provides two packs of cards, one of which is dealt one by one to the company till all the pack is dealt. The other pack he keeps in his hand, drawing one card from it at random, which he conceals in his pocket.

The players, being each further provided with a saucer containing fifty beans, the leader rings a small bell and calls out, "Speculate!"

Then for a time there is confusion, the players circulating around the room, offering beans in exchange for certain cards which the neighbors display. Each wishes to hold the duplicate of the card concealed by the leader, though no one knows which it is.

At a second ringing of the bell the players are again seated, while the leader, turning up one card from the pack in his hand, calls out its name. Whoever holds the duplicate must go forward and lay it upon a table provided for the purpose. After half a dozen or more of the cards have been thus collected the signal to speculate is again given. Of course the interest increases as the number of cards held by the players diminishes, and sometimes a player will give his last bean for a card which may be called in at the next ringing of the bell.

After repeated speculations and callings in only one card remains—the duplicate of the one concealed in the pocket of the leader. The fortunate holder of this wins a prize, as also does the possessor of the greatest number of beans.

To test a cake to see if it is thoroughly baked use a skewer.

GIANTS WITHOUT FRED MERKLE AND SNODGRASS

Mathewson and Plank Fighting in Second Game at Philadelphia---Meyers' Finger Injured in Practice

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—A light drizzling rain fell during the night, and a heavy mist overhung the city this morning making everything wet and dripping, but if no more rain falls the second game in the world's series will be played here to-day, as Shibe Park field is in fairly good condition.

The probable batting order given out is:

NEW YORK.

Shafer, centre field.
Doyle, second base.
Fletcher, shortstop.
Burns, left field.
Herzog, third base.
Murray, right field.
Meyers, catcher.
Merkle, first base.
Matthewson, pitcher.

PHILADELPHIA.

E. Murphy, right field.
Collins, second base.
Baker, third base.
McInnis, first base.
Strunk, centre field.
Barry, shortstop.
Schang, catcher.
Plank pitcher.

It is not certain, however, that Merkle will be able to play on account of a slight sprain to his ankle, received yesterday, and the choice of batteries depends on the weather.

Later.—The Giant's line-up is:—Herzog, 3b, Doyle 2b, Fletcher ss, Burns lf, Shafer, cf, Murray rf, McLean c, Snodgrass 1b, Matthewson p.

Wiltze later replaced Snodgrass. Merkle is too lame to play. Meyers hurt his finger in practice before the game and may not play again in the series.

THE GAME.

SHRIBE PARK, PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—The second championship game started at two o'clock.

The batteries are Mathewson and McLean; Plank and Lapp. Herzog bats first instead of Shafer. Umpire Connolly is at the plate and Rigler on base decisions. Although the mist has partly cleared, the weather is still dark and murky and it is hard to follow the course of the ball to deep outfield. Over twenty thousand people were on the field before the game started.

FIRST INNINGS.

NEW YORK— Herzog popped out to Collins, Doyle out on a short fly to Strunk. Plank used his famous cross fire ball and deftly worked the corners of the plate. Fletcher fanned. No runs, no hits, no errors.

PHILADELPHIA— Doyle made a horrible error on Murphy's grounder the ball filtering through his legs. With two strikes Oldring singled to left sending Murphy to second. Baker fanned McInnis fied to Burns No runs, one hit, one error.

SECOND INNINGS.

NEW YORK— Plank easily fanned Burns; Shafer flied out to Murphy. Murray fanned. No runs, no hits, no errors.

PHILADELPHIA— Strunk out to Doyle to Merkle, Barry out on high fly to Burns. Lapp fanned. No runs, no hits, no errors.

FIRST GAME

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—In the third world's series clash between the all but perpetual champions of their respective leagues, the New York Giants and Philadelphia Athletics, the Athletics won the first game 6 to 4. It was a battle of bats. The Athletics hit the harder, and won; they clustered their hits better, they drove out more long hits. Forty thousand enthusiasts witnessed the game.

SPORTING GOSSIP

(Hamilton Spectator.)

Another Canadian league player has made the grade into faster company, according to despatches from Peterborough, the Liftlock City club having been notified of the loss of Harry Brant, the brilliant little shortstop, who has been drafted by Chattanooga of the Southern association, a class A league. Chattanooga is managed by Billy Smith, formerly in charge of the Buffalo International league club, and is regarded as one of the best training schools for a youngster in the country. Brant is a player with a great many friends throughout the circuit. He is a youngster who has been in the league since it was organized, playing with London the first season, when his work was very brilliant. The second year he was sold in mid-season to the Peterborough club for a small sum, and since joining the Petes has been a big factor in what success they have secured. Brant was the best fielding shortstop in the league this year, while he hit .270 for the season. Last year he hit .271. His fielding has always been of a brilliant nature, while the youngster is possessed of considerable speed. While with the London club he had a good record as a base runner, but under Manager Davy Drohan was not allowed to develop this ability to any extent, as Drohan would not allow his players to take any chances on the bases.

Peterborough has done well as far as drafts are concerned the two years they have been in the game. Last year they lost Trout to Toronto, and this year Hilliard and Brant, making a $1,500 haul, much better than the majority of the clubs do.

ANCIENT BONSECOURS.

Montreal's Great Market Is Picturesque Spot.

In the ancient heart of Montreal there gathers on certain days of the week, a buying, selling, bargaining chattering throng. It is in a convenient place to transact business, convenient to get a large selection of what you want. If you go early enough, convenient for watching the various selling and purchasing methods. Some days they crowd to this place till you wonder whether any more could have room enough to walk about and effect their dealing. It is considered a boon to the poorer people to come to this spot and purchase their table necessities. It is not a grocery store, confectionery, or butcher's shop, that I am speaking of, but a genuine, price-lowering, popular, public market, so much talked about as a factor in cost-reduction by political economists and other guessers at the riddle of the rise in the price of living.

The market is called Bonsecours, in honor of the gray old-time church which stands within hailing distance. The market is old, but the church is older, built in 1771 in place of an older edifice burned in 1754. Here is where Montreal comes in as an historic town. The market comprises Jacques Cartier Square and a fine, old-time-honored stone building, once a city hall. It is a familiar landmark to thousands of Montrealers. Talk about your fairs, and national exhibitions, here is an exposition every lawful working day. If you like the looks of cabbage, turnips, carrot, onions, chickens, ducks, turkeys, all the produce of the farm except the coarser grains, all on their best behaviour you will be delighted to take a stroll along these booths and peer around and perhaps buy something to haul home with you, if you are not single but double. Outside you see rows of booths, on the north side selling vegetables and poultry mostly, on the south side, stores offering all sorts of Canadian and even foreign fruits. It resembles a main thoroughfare of an active business town with the shops reduced to its size. But everything is done here in the open. You see the operations of the dealers from the street as it were and it somehow increases your confidence in making purchases, you do not seem to take so much on faith, at least it looks that way on the surface.

You will see two men in a booth piled high with cages holding the feathery denizens of the farmyard, crowing shrilly, or cackling wildly, and if you stand long enough you may see a long arm thrust into a cage, extract a chicken, wring its neck, pluck it, and put on the counter for sale. Some of the purchasers prefer to buy their chickens alive, lug them home, and commit chicken slaughter in their own back yards. Strange, but most of these purchasers wear long beards, whitish or sandy, if they are masculine, and are of the religious faith that calls Christians Gentiles. These customers prefer preparing a live animal for the pot in their own way, make a sort of religion out of it, as it were.

You will see also some unusual things offered for food, or pets, just as your inclinations are. For instance, rabbits. Two or three booths make a specialty of these among other articles. Another dealer sells red foxes, and by the number he had for sale you would judge that quite a market existed for these cute little animals. Those on display are young and would make boyish pets.

The old market building was erected in 1845 when Hon. J. Ferrier was mayor. Inside of its splendid central dome it bears inscribed the names of the Council, Mayor Ferrier, Alds. Linn, Trudeau, and Molson, and Councillors Laroque and Currie. Montreal had "commission" government in those days, with the aldermen elected by the council, and acting as a sort of Board of Control, after the old English style which was done away with by the British Municipal Act of the thirties.

The old market house stood on the site of a hotel, several stores, and an opera house, where Charles Dickens recited from his works when he visited Montreal in the thirties. It remained in use as a city hall till 1878, when the present City Hall was erected.

You're a crook! By Jove! You're a crook!

When after years of labor you have got things going right,
And finally at last you find you've won
the awful fight,
And you turn to greet your old age with a feeling quite secure
And view your life work with a sense of satisfaction pure,
You're a crook! By Jove! You're a
crook!

I wonder what incentive an ambitious man can find
To put forth his best efforts in a life of daily grind,
When at last, when it is over and success has crowned it all,
He hears the "down and outer" in his monotonous call,
You're a crook! By Jove! You're a
crook!

—Leslie's Weekly.

He's Wise.

Every seat in an outgoing street car had been taken. At the next corner several well dressed ladies were let on. As the conductor passed through taking fares he noticed a gentleman on an end seat who had fallen asleep.

"Wake up, here!" he shouted to him. "No sleeping on this car!"

"I'm not asleep, sir," said the man.

"If you wasn't asleep what did you have your eyes closed then for?"

"Well," said the gentleman, "you know I just hate to see ladies standing up."—Judge.

Maddening Advice.

When the mercury climbs
To the hundred mark
And the public feels
That in madness stark
Is its only end
It would slay the fool
Who comes along
And says, "Keep cool."

When instead of peace
The world's agog
And each steps toward
Some business bog
And heat and toil
Aches bring each brow
'Tis a jar to hear,
"Don't worry now."

The heat's enough
In summer time
To drive a man
To any crime,
But other plagues
Must torment thrice—
Mosquitoes, flies
And fool advice.

THE DRESS OF A BUSINESS LETTER

To judge quickly, to discriminate at a glance between good things, and bad, is what most men who receive business letters have been trained to do. It is not an exaggeration to claim that the success of many business letters often depends on the paper.—By HARRISON COURTNEY in "System."

A COMING BIG EVENT

Three Hundred and Fifty People to Have Part In a Gorgeous Production of D. Hope Lenard's Fairy Tale, "Land of Golden Dreams"

Arrangements have been completed by the Ladies' Committee of St. John's Church, with Colonel John F. Bragg of New York for its presentation at the Grand Opera House early in November.

The members of the Ladies' Committee are enthusiastic over the prospect of presenting Miss D. Hope Leonard's beautiful spectacular operetta, "Land of Golden Dreams," and in order to do justice to the work it will require about 350 of Peterborough's best talent, who will be assigned to the various speaking and singing parts by an instructor from New York. Preliminary training will commence soon and in due time. Other instructors will arrive from New York to assist in the rehearsals. The entire production is under the management of Colonel John F. Bragg, of New York.

Over 500 gorgeous costumes are used which are furnished by the management. The properties, electrical and calcium effects are beautiful and the "Land of Golden Dreams" is without doubt the most pretentious amateur opera ever presented in our city.

Full particulars will be advertised in a subsequent issue. 16

EIGHTY VOICES ATTEND CHORAL SOCIETY PRACTICE

St. George's Choral Society had another splendid practice in the Collegiate Assembly Hall, last evening when eighty voices took part. The present membership is around the one hundred mark.

The fee for the use of the hall has been decreased from $50 to $25, by the Board of Education but it is the opinion of the officers of the Society that only a nominal fee should be charged.

It is pointed out that the Society expended nearly $800 last year in the production of The Messiah. When all the accounts were met, the Society had a balance of $50. Every member pays for music, the tuition alone being free. As a membership fee the ladies pay fifty cents and the men $1.

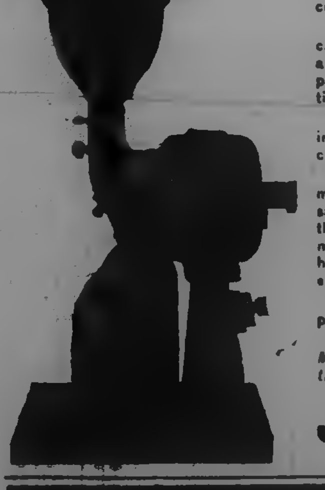
One of the officers commented this morning on the action of the Board of Education making a grant of $30 to the Athletic Association for sports and charging the Choral Society $50 for the use of the Assembly Hall.

INCREASED TRAFFIC THIS SEASON ON TRENT CANAL

There has been a large increase in the Trent Canal, this season, in fact it has been the best year in the history of the waterway. Much improvement has also been made.

A new wharf of timber and cement was completed at Keene last Saturday. An extra sluice is being added to the dam at Buckhorn and Mr. Ed. Wade has a gang of men at work on the dam at Lakefield. Mr. Bob Miller left this week with a gang of twelve men to do some necessary work on Squaw River.

Extensive repairs have been made to Kenesee Dam in Haliburton, and the government dredge and drill scow are at work at Balsover on the Lake Simcoe division.



To the Lover of Good Coffee

We wish to advise you that we have installed in our store a new

manufactured by the A. J. Deer Co., of Hornell, N.Y. This machine is equipped with steel knives which cut the berry into fairly uniform, clean cut particles, instead of grinding and crushing it, as by the old method.

All Coffee Mills heretofore used will only crush the berry mutilating the minute oil cells, allowing the Coffee Oil to evaporate, thus impairing the strength and flavor, and in a short time the coffee becomes rancid, sour.

This is one reason why a pound of coffee cut in this Mill will make more cups of full strength coffee than will any coffee ground the old way.

Another feature about this Mill is that you may have your coffee cut as fine as the finest sand and it will still be practically free from that fine dust which is produced by the old method of grinding. You will, therefore, always have a clear cup of coffee instead of a muddy effect—a result of using the old style mills.

ROYAL CUT COFFEE is also adaptable for percolators or French Drip Coffee Pots.

Try a pound of our Coffee cut on a Royal Mill and we know you will be pleased with the results.

Yours truly,

J. JOHN 336 WATER ST. PETERBORO

NOT FORCED TO EAT.

Convicted Thief Allowed to Starve To Death in English Jail.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The provisions of the "cat and mouse" act, permitting prisoners to be released temporarily when suffering from the effects of "hunger strikes," appear to apply only to the militant suffragettes. A male prisoner, who adopted their mode of obtaining freedom, has been allowed to die in Bedford jail.

The prisoner, Alfred Davis, when sentenced to a term of imprisonment for theft, announced to the magistrate his intention of starting a "hunger strike." No attempt was made to feed him forcibly and he died yesterday. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of "death from natural causes."

A fugitive militant suffragette, Miss Lillian Lenton, who has been connected with a number of outrages and has been arrested several times, was again taken into custody in London last evening on her return from France, to which country she had fled.

Vegetables for salad must be dry or the dressing does not amalgamate, and it loses its flavor.

A scheme of road lighting has been suggested consisting of electric lamps secured to the curbstones.

PLANS WOLFE MEMORIAL CHURCH

Canon Scott Would Build Memorial To Hero.

A proposal to erect a church to the memory of Wolfe, on a conspicuous site in the new Battlefields' Park which is now being opened up by the National Battlefields Commission, has been made by Rev. Canon Scott, of Quebec. Already a beautiful avenue has been put through, connecting the Plains of Abraham, on the cliffs overlooking the St. Lawrence, with the battlefield of Ste. Foye, overlooking the St. Charles Valley. This avenue is named the Avenue des Braves. It is proposed to erect the church on a piece of ground which is the highest spot on this avenue, and the highest part of the whole future park. The option on the site has already been secured, the property having a frontage of 260 feet on the Avenue des Braves.

Standing on the proposed site one can see across the fields the very place where the battle was fought and, when the trees are bare of leaves, even the spot where Wolfe fell. To the north an extensive view of the Laurentian Mountains across the valley of the St. Charles is obtainable, while in the immediate foreground is to be seen the monument Aux Braves, marking the battlefield of 1760.

Plans of the church have already been prepared. Two designs have been submitted, one of which is by R. A. Cram, architect of the extension to St. Alban's Cathedral, and provides for a building in late Gothic style, with lofty interior, stone-vaulted roof, with nave of six bays, triforium, and large clerestory traceried windows. The interior is completely flanked with flying buttresses, with the exception of the west end, while the east end is to be rounded. The cost of the building will be in the neighborhood of one hundred thousand dollars.

Already Canon Scott has received considerable support for the idea, and has got the ear of some very influential men both in England and in this country. The Archbishop of Canterbury writes: "Nothing could be better than that a church should be erected to the memory of Wolfe, whose claims to our gratitude are recognized, I think, by everyone." Prof. Osler, regius professor of medicine at Oxford thinks the suggestion excellent, and promises to help in any way he possibly can. Lord Halifax, of whose family Gen. Wolfe was a distant connection, approves highly of the proposal, and will give his support. The Archbishop of York says he is much interested, and hoped the idea would meet with every success. He will contribute later as a token of his interest and of his connection between Gen. Wolfe and the Diocese of York. Others who are interested are the Duke of Newcastle, the Bishop of Winchester, Lord Stanhope, and many others.

The body of Gen. Wolfe at present lies buried in the family vault at St. Alphege's Church, Greenwich, Eng., but, at least, in this memorial church a cenotaph to Wolfe might be erected if it could not be that his actual remains might be brought to Quebec. Again, no more suitable place could be found to hang the flag in which Wolfe was wrapped and carried off the field of battle. This flag is at present carefully preserved and hung in an English cathedral. Possibly other relics of Wolfe may find their way to the church, such as his private Communion Book, which is still preserved. In an age when such a thing was uncommon Wolfe led a pure life.

Canon Scott has been in England doing some necessary work in connection with the matter.

HON. J. D. HAZEN WANTS TO SEE TREATY ENFORCED

Minister of Marine to Take Up Matter of Fisheries at Washington.

OTTAWA, Oct. 9.—Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries will go to Washington about the end of the present month to take up with President Wilson and other members of the United States Government the long-vexed question of the international fisheries treaty between Canada and the United States, which has been hanging fire for the past three years. Mr. Hazen will endeavor to procure some decisive action by the United States on the question, so that if possible the treaty may go into force for the present fishing season. If such action cannot be obtained then Canada will withdraw from the treaty, and consider legislation for the conservation of the fish in the boundary waters.

Mr. Hazen will urge that the provisions of the treaty, as prepared in 1910 by the joint commission consisting of David Starr Jordan and Prof. Prince, and accepted by Canada, be also concurred in by the United States, so that the treaty may go into force at once.

The ratification of the treaty by the United States has been opposed by the representatives of special interests in the Senate from Michigan and other states. Now that the United States Government has disposed of the tariff bill it is expected that it will have time to turn its attention to this important matter.

DUBLIN IN SORE STRAITS

Transport Workers' Families Dying For Lack of Food.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Dublin is being ruined by the continuance of the transport war, which is now in its fifth week. The plight of the poorer section of the population is dreadful, one hundred thousand men, women and children, or one-third of the city's whole population, being on the verge of starvation. Rain fell heavily in the city Tuesday, intensifying the misery of the strikers and their wives and children huddling together for warmth. A crowd of girls and boys lined up at the Liberty Hall headquarters of the Irish Transport Union to receive a dole of soup and bread, and then sat down on the nearest doorsteps to nourish their wasted bodies.

The food which has come in the relief ships is the only thing which has kept many families from actual death by starvation, and any cessation of these supplies would be followed by indescribable misery. As it is, strangers are dogged by child beggars, who implore the price of a meal without hesitation and without relaxation.

Aviation Corps Formed.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Through the activities of the Aero Club of America, a volunteer military aviation battalion has been formed to become a part of the National Guard. Application to that end, endorsed by some of the highest military authorities has been made to Washington and through official channels to Albany.

Up to the present time aviation in the regular army corps has been conducted as a part of the signal corps but under plans that have been proposed, the aviation corps will be organized on an independent basis and the proposed battalion conforms to the new plan.

Crashed Through Wall.

GUELPH, Oct. 9.—An accident which fortunately resulted in no loss of life or injuries to anyone, occurred yesterday morning at the Dominion linen mills and caused the temporary closing down of the plant. A fly-wheel on a high speed engine which supplies the power, flew off and, gyrating at a terrific speed crashed through the wall of the building and out forty yards into the swamp.

ST. CATHARINES, Oct. 9.—Lying in the shallow water at the edge of the old Welland Canal, Mrs. Robert Loosemore, a widow, aged 73 years, was found drowned yesterday morning one hour after she had left home. UNCERTAIN ABOUT FARM.

Brant County Municipal Representatives Seek More Time.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 9.—The attitude of the delegates from Brant County, declaring to vote in favor of an industrial farm, because of the fact that they did not wish to bind themselves to the county council blocked progress at the meeting held here yesterday of the representatives of the six counties, Waterloo, Brant, Elgin, Perth, Norfolk and Oxford.

After Dr. R. W. Bruce Smith had spoken and outlined the need for such a farm and the system in use in Fort William, a vote was taken. The resolution was to the effect that the delegates report back to their councils recommending the adoption of the industrial farm scheme and advising the appointment of two delegates from each council to secure further information.

Hangs Himself on Shipboard.

HAVRE, Oct. 9.—During the voyage of the steamship France, which arrived here yesterday, an Italian emigrant, Baptiste Gal, who had been deported from New York, was seized with a violent attack of homicidal mania and attempted to kill his wife. He then hanged himself. The woman was only slighted injured. The man was buried at sea.

Sister or Niece?

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 9.—A dispute between heirs as to whether Mrs. Caroline Amelia Waller of Vancouver, is the sister or the niece of the late Ald. Wallace McRae of North Vancouver, is to be settled by the appointment of a commission to take evidence at the old home in Ontario of the McRae family. Mrs. Weller was recently appointed administratrix of the estate on the representation that she was a sister of the deceased.

Both Were Acquitted.

MELUN, France, Oct. 9.—The Criminal Court here yesterday tried and acquitted on a charge of running over and killing a gypsy girl on Aug. 8, Baron Hans von Bleichroder and Walter Palmer, the chauffeur of Princess Sofia of Saxe-Weimar, who committed suicide at Heidelberg on Sept. 9, owing to the refusal of her parents to consent to her marriage to Baron Bleichroder.

Quartette Committed.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Oct. 9.—Mrs. Clara Knapp, charged with attempt to defraud, and W. E. Walker and Alfred Allen, who yesterday gave the name of Kindy, and his wife charged with conspiracy, were held by Magistrate Fraser for the assizes Nov. 4, at Welland. They are charged with attempting to swindle the Imperial Bank by means of a bogus check.

WILL RECTIFY THE ERROR

Vexation Clause in Tariff Likely to be Repealed

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—If the consent of Representative Underwood and other House leaders can be secured to-day a joint resolution will be passed through Congress within a few days repealing that portion of the new tariff law authorizing a 5 per cent. tariff rebate on goods brought to this country in American-owned ships.

The decision to ask for the repeal of the clause was reached by administration officials yesterday after experts of the State and Treasury Departments had decided that to carry out its exact terms would mean a reduction of 5 per cent. in tariff on goods from practically all the chief exporting countries except Brazil, France and Russia. After a conference with President Wilson, in which the latter gave his endorsement to the plan, Solicitor Joseph W. Folk, of the State Department, took up with the Congressional leaders last night the plan to have the objectionable clause eliminated from the tariff law.

Senator Simmons, chairman of the Senate finance committee, gave assurance that the Senate undoubtedly would agree to a repeal of the entire clause, as it had originally rejected it. An attempt was made to reach Representative Underwood over the long-distance telephone, but Mr. Folk could not locate him in Atlantic City, where he had gone for a short vacation. It is expected that Mr. Underwood will be consulted to-day and that House leaders will accept the decision of the administration that the provision should be taken out of the new law.

Foreign countries, including Germany, France, and Spain, which claim they would be severely discriminated against by the shipping clause, have made strong protests to the State Department, and it is realized that retaliatory measures probably will be adopted by several countries if the 5 per cent. clause is administered, as the State Department believes it must be.

LIBERAL LEADER VISITS CHATEAUGUAY AGAIN

Sir Wilfrid and Other Speakers at Ormstown for Fisher

ORMSTOWN, Que., Oct. 9.—Accompanied by Hon. Messrs. Graham, Fisher, Marcil and Lemieux, Sir Wilfrid Laurier made an excursion to Ormstown yesterday in the interests of Hon. Sydney Fisher's candidacy in Chateauguay.

Speaking of the Conservative record of work since 1911, Sir Wilfrid said: "What have they done? They have been dabbling in what they call imperial affairs. They have forgotten Canadian interests. The Empire is not in danger. It does not require the assistance of anybody. Mr. Borden says: 'Save the Empire.' I say to Mr. Borden: 'Leave the Empire to Mr. Asquith, and attend to our own affairs at home'."

Sir Wilfrid cited a compilation on the cost of living issued by the British Board of Trade, which showed that while it had increased in the British Isles seven per cent. it had increased in Canada fifty-one per cent. On the other hand, he showed them a surplus of fifty million dollars in the Dominion Treasury. The Government he said should not take from the pockets of the people so much money when the cost of living was so high.

"For this money does come from your pockets. Surpluses do not come from heaven. The Government has no magic hand. I say on behalf of Mr. Fisher and the Liberal party this state of things must not last. We must revise the tariff."

Referring to the navy, Sir Wilfrid declared that there was no emergency. The British navy collected in home waters when Mr. Bordon brought in his emergency bill had scattered to the ends of the Empire. This, he said, showed how little of an emergency there was.

Hon. Sydney Fisher, in his speech, told the farmers in the audience what improvements on their farms could be traced to his own influence and work as Minister of Agriculture.

MONTREAL, Oct. 9. Rt. Hon. Herbert L. Samuel, British Postmaster-General, arrived in Montreal shortly before midnight and will remain here for several days, attending a banquet this evening and speaking at the Canadian Club to-morrow. Several luncheons and receptions have been arranged in his honor during his stay here.

Rogers To Lay Stone.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 9.—Mayor Hartman received word yesterday morning from W. F. Cockshutt, M.P., that Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works for the Dominion, would be in the city next week for the laying of the corner-stone of the new postoffice building.

To Exterminate Rats.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 9.—A bubonic plague-infected rat was killed on the waterfront here several days ago, the first in years, and the health department immediately spread poison in the neighborhood and took other steps to exterminate rats. For many years Seattle has paid a bounty of ten cents on each dead rat brought to the health department, and has employed rat catchers besides. The danger of plague always is present because rats jump overboard from oriental boats and swim ashore, sometimes a mile.

WORKMAN WAS KILLED

Was Buried in Sewer and Not Found for Five Hours

TORONTO, Oct. 9.—While engaged in excavating in the civic trunk sewer near the corner of Glenholme drive and Glendonwynne street, Geo. Voitch, a Servian laborer, was caught in the collapse of the sewer and buried under 23 feet of timber and sand. The accident happened at noon yesterday, and it was not until five hours later that 40 fellow workmen succeeded in digging out the body. The remains are at the morgue, where an inquest is to be held.

John Pinco, who was working with Voitch in the trench at the time, had a narrow escape. Pinco, partially protected by timbers, was buried under a few feet of debris, but was dug out alive in a few minutes.

The greatest care had been taken to avoid just such a catastrophe. The walls had been planked at intervals of a foot as the work progressed, and the belief is that one of the braces gave way.

The pulmotor was applied, but Voitch evidently had been dead for some time.

To Eradicate Scourge.

EDMONTON, Oct. 9.—The Alberta Legislature yesterday afternoon passed a resolution authorizing the Government to memorialize the Federal Minister of Agriculture to take steps towards the eradication of tuberculosis in cattle.

"There have been many complaints," said Hon. Duncan Marshall in presenting the resolution, "and up to the present no action has been taken to prevent the spread of the disease further than supplying the farmers who make requests with tuberculin."

Killed By Train.

UTICA, N.Y., Oct. 9.—Dr. C. F. Wood, president of the village of West Winfield, and H. D. Wheeler, a prominent resident of that place were last night killed by a Delaware, Lackawana and Western train at Clayville. They were in Dr. Wood's automobile and going home from this city when they drove in front of a milk train. The machine was demolished and both men were instantly killed.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 9.—Dr. G. H. Kennedy, one of the most distinguished members of the medical profession in western Canada, surgeon captain in the R.N.W.M.P. and the official doctor of the C. P. R. for many years, died in the General Hospital yesterday morning.

Dr. Kennedy was born at Dundas Ont., in 1857 and came to the north west in 1878. In 1883 he married Miss Alice Maude Allen, who survives him. One son and one daughter also survive. The son, Dr. A. Kennedy lives in Maclead, Alta., and the daughter, Mrs. Ward, resides in British Columbia.

Prince Ernest Rejoins Wife.

BERLIN, Oct. 9.—Prince Ernest August of Cumberland returned here yesterday and rejoined his wife, the Princess Victoria Louise, who has been staying with the empress, her mother, while recovering from her recent indisposition. The reunion of the prince and princess is regarded here as a definite sign that the recent trouble over the succession to the throne of the Duchy of Brunswick was rather a controversy between the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, and his advisers, than between the Hohenzollern and the Guelph families.

Austria Plans Navy Increase.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—A Vienna cable says: Austria's naval estimates made public yesterday, include forty-five millions for new battleships to be constructed or already building. Besides four dreadnoughts already laid down, it is planned to build two super-dreadnoughts at a cost of $15,000,000 each.

The Admiralty also contemplates two more super-dreadnoughts to be completed in 1917 at a cost of thirty million dollars.

PLUNGED INTO POLICE STATION

Railway Cars Broke Through Wall Building

WINDSOR, Oct. 9.—While running at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, a Grand Trunk westbound freight train ran into an open switch in the Walkerville yards at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, crashed head-on into a Wabash yard engine with a long train of cars, and pushed several of the cars right through the middle of the Walkerville police station. Both engines, several of the cars, and the police station were badly smashed, but no one was injured. Chief of Police Griffith and F. E. Evans, who were standing in a station room at the time, had narrow escapes.

The freight, in charge of Conductor Sheehy of Windsor, and drawn by Grand Trunk engine No. 1,282, Engineer Nelligan, came around the curve at a rapid rate in order to make a nearby grade. When it was too late Nelligan and his fireman saw the switch set against them and jumped.

Wabash yard engine, No. 117, Engineer Howe, had just entered the siding to haul out several freight cars. The impact of the collision splintered several of the cars and knocked others back through the brick wall of the police station at the far end of the switch.

The extension to the station, which had just been finished, is in ruins. The yard engine was almost completely wrecked, and the pilot of the mogul freight engine was carried away.

Convicted of Arson.

KINGSTON, Oct. 9.—Frederick Gabriel and Alex. C. Maws, former members of the Royal Canadian Dragoons Toronto, were found guilty of arson by a jury at the fall assizes yesterday afternoon. Churchill's Speech Accepted as Statement of Government's Policy

DUNDEE, Scotland, Oct. 9.—Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, addressing his constituents last night, reaffirmed that nothing would deter the Government from carrying through the Home Rule bill as planned and doing its duty in upholding the law suppressing disorders, by whomsoever fomented.

Mr. Churchill, whose speech was keenly anticipated as a declaration of the Government's policy, added that in the natural course of events a general election would occur before any legislation could be passed by the Irish Parliament, and, in the event of the transference of power, it would be open to the opponents of the bill to repeal it. That was their only constitutional remedy so long as they opposed settlement by agreement.

In the latter part of his speech Mr. Churchill made what is regarded as an overture to Ulster. He said:

"The claim of Northeast Ulster for special consideration is a claim, which, if advanced with sincerity and not as a wrecking manoeuvre, cannot be ignored without full consideration by any Government dependent upon the present House of Commons."

FIRST RADIAL SCHEME

Hydro Board Presents Plan to Ontario Counties

TORONTO, Oct. 9.—But four months ago the proposition to build a Hydro-electric Railway to Whitby and Port Perry was conceived; yesterday the Hydro-electric Commission submitted plans and estimates to the promoters, who unanimously adopted them, and immediately set about preparing ways and means for getting the people affected by the line to make final acceptance of the project and the apportionment of cost among the townships and municipalities which are to be benefited by the line's construction.

One hundred mayors, reeves and councillors of the various rural and urban areas in the counties of York and Ontario attended at the City Hall yesterday to hear Hon. Adam Beck read the report they had been waiting for during the past two months.

The general scheme embracing the Toronto, Markham, Uxbridge, Port Perry and Whitby areas would have a mileage of seventy-one, representing a capital cost of $2,470,776. The mileage is made up of sixteen miles of line between Toronto and Markham and Port Perry and seven miles between Brooklin, a point on the Markham-Port Perry section, to Whitby. Estimating the operating expenses at $396,660, with a revenue of $450,500, there would be a surplus over operating expenses of $53,840.

The engineers have figured out the total cost of construction and equipment at $41,300 per mile, or $2,932,276 for the whole scheme, or $2,470,000 deducting the Government subsidy.

STRICKEN

A well known English weekly journal contains six editorials with the following headings: "Protestant Ulster," "Sir Edward Carson," "The Dublin Strikes," "English Strikes," "The Busmen's Strike," "The Strike Weapon."

This continent has no monopoly in striking headlines just now. But jokes apart, there's something rotten in the State of Denmark when so versatile a paper as the British Weekly gives up its editorial page wholly to strikes and riots.

We, who live in a new, progressive and democratic country, are naturally a little impatient with the old home and wonder sometimes if they have nothing else to do but fall out and fight each other.

Of course the Suffragettes, the Strikers and the Ulsterites all make good news items, even so far away, and serve the purpose of keeping us in touch with the Old Country, and assuring us that they are very much alive over there.

But one cannot help feeling a certain amount of pity and impatience toward the old people who are conducting their household in such a loose manner, and the fear is that there will be a general smash up before long.

THE SHADOW OF THE GALLOWS

The noose which has been dangling over the head of young Gibson for the last eighteen months has at last been taken away, and the miserable wretch led into the outer darkness of life imprisonment.

How many night-mares he has suffered in the last year and a half under the shadow of the gallows, like the conscience-haunted Mathias "The Bells," will never be known. The law's delay in such cases must be a terrible suspense to a man, even if he be guilty, for he must live in a perpetual alternation between the extremes of hope and dread, to which the process of hanging is comparatively merciful.

Circumstantial evidence upon which Gibson was convicted, is usually dangerous ground for hanging a man, except in cases where such evidence is absolutely clear and unquestionable. In this case doubts had been raised, and, after all, it is much safer to give the prisoner the benefit of the doubt. You can always release a man from prison if his innocence is at any time proven, but when you hang an innocent man the law hangs itself so far as justice is concerned.

The Scotch verdict of "not proven" has its advantages, although it leaves a loop-hole for lawyers, who can prove or not prove sometimes, [illegible] the status of the prisoner.

A VICTIM OF POSITIVISM

The Church of Humanity of which the religious maniac who murdered several persons, is a member, is a sect of Positivists who have established a church in Liverpool, Eng.

The members of the church are mainly well-do-do people, many of them being originally Unitarian, Socialist or Agnostics, and some Sceptics. Their religious faith is based upon the teachings of Comte, the great French Positivist, whom they regard as "the Master," and whose memory they revere with something akin to worship.

The teachings of Comte have had some influence upon many modern writers and thinkers. George Eliot the novelist, being a great admirer of the French philosopher. Among living personalities Frederick Harrison is the most noted Positivist, but he is not regarded with much confidence by those who follow Comte as the founder of a religion and carry his teachings so far as to establish a form of worship upon them.

Federick Harrison takes Positivism as a philosophy of life, and is content to observe, or at least tolerate the existence of the Christian religion.

Comte did not deny the existence of God, but held that God only had an existence in Humanity. The Church of Humanity is for the worship of the "Great Being" which is perpetually expressing itself from age to age, not only in humanity but in the lower animals as well.

It is little wonder that a young man, especially if he be of a very highly strung temperament, should lose his head over such a revolutionary and monstrous doctrine. In this case we have the spectacle of the Great Being turning upon itself.

EDITORIAL NOTES

In the report in the Globe of the Brockville Canadian League meeting we are informed that—"During the afternoon Messrs. Cooper and Hawkes visited the Hospital for the Insane." Far be it from us to suggest any sinister motive for this visit. Nor do we suggest that the two gentlemen visited that institution out of a sympathetic or fellow-feeling toward the unfortunate inmates, lest Mr. Hawkes and his friend should misunderstand us, it is really very difficult to say anything complimentary about the Canadian League as there is always the danger of it being taken for sarcasm.

The London Standard says that Miss Christabel Pankhurst's recent writings in the Suffragette "are the most daringly indecent matter published within memory. They deal with questions which should never be discussed except between doctor and patient, and are extraordinarily suggestive to young men and women who constitute the principal part of the reader of The Suffragette." This is yet another side of the "votes for women" movement. These articles are written in Paris where the sweet Christable has been in "retreat" for some time. "Evil communication corrupt good manners." She ought to do well writing for some Paris journals.

The Toronto Star has an editorial in praise of the Salvation Army. This is surely inconsistant with its recent condemnation of militarism in every shape and form. We had expected it to suggest the omisson of "Onward Christian Soldiers" from our hymn books as a relict of the war whoop and tending to rouse the military spirit of good Christian people.

The Globe in its report of the Brockville Canadian League meeting described it as an enthusiastic gathering. The Montreal Gazette, in its sober way, (The Gazette is always sober) said it was a very poor affair. Now we are inclined to believe the Gazette's account, without casting the least reflection upon the Globe's glowing narrative. The Liberal press seem to have a mortgage in the Canadian League.

Mr. Altman was a bachelor, and had led a very secluded life, especially during recent years. His physician said that it was doubtful if there were one hundred persons in New York who knew him by sight.

MAN OF BUSINESS

But His Methods Were Bad, and Then Love's Young Dream Comes True.

BY SELINA ELIZABETH HIGGINS.

"Don't stand in your own light, Hilda. Mr. Armitage is a rising man of business, and many a girl would consider herself lucky to receive the attentions he has shown you."

"Mother, his attentions are more than distasteful to me. I cannot bear to even have him speak to me."

"There are a good many reasons why you should encourage him," declared Hilda Mason's stepmother.

The girl's lips closed tightly. A worried, anxious look came over her face. She put on her wraps and left her humble home for her daily work.

The worldly advice of her stepmother had made little impression upon Hilda. Mr. James Armitage was practically her employer. He was in full charge of the silk factory of Meserve & Co., one of several operated by that wealthy firm. Hilda's father had been engineer of the plant half his life time. Her brother, Bob, was in charge of the shipping room. A smaller brother was errand boy in the office. Hilda had light agreeable work in the sample department.

It was only recently that the Masons had felt that prospects were brightening for them. A strike, sickness, the failure of a bank carrying away their savings, had brought about a hard experience. Now, with all hands at work, the future looked encouraging.

Armitage had come to the plant about a year previous. From the first Hilda had felt repelled by him. He had a hard, cynical face. He was pitiless in his exactions with the workers. He was a widower, and Hilda had heard that his wife had died of a broken heart.

Armitage had seemed to take a fancy to Hilda, as the thoughtless Mrs. Mason put it in her shallow way. When on two occasions recently he had asked permission to take Hilda to places of entertainment, she had not enjoyed his company, and was glad to get home again.

"I wouldn't wipe my shoes on the wretch," a discharged office girl told Hilda, meeting her on the street. "He is a snake, a tyrant. He discharged me out of sheer meanness, and all the girls despise him. One good thing—he won't be here long."

"Why not?" asked Hilda.

"I shan't tell you, but you'll see. I do hope you are not falling in love with him."

Hilda protested indignantly. She evaded Armitage, and twice when he called managed to be out of the way. Hence her stepmother's advice.

A new interest came into the life of Hilda one day. Armitage passed through the sample department accompanied by a bright-faced athletic young man. The latter seemed interested in everything he saw. Something about the neat graceful Hilda held his glance. She noticed it and flushed, but his look was so pleasant she could not feel offended.

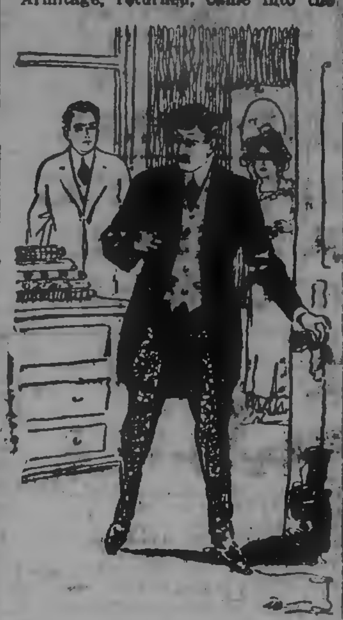
"He is a Mr. Harold Macy," a companion told Hilda. "He has come well recommended to Mr. Armitage, and is going to be a kind of an overseer."

Armitage was absent for several days inspecting another mill. It was a happy week for Hilda. The new employe passed through her department frequently. From the first he had a pleasant word for her. Then he began to question her about her work and its details. One evening he was strolling past her home when he met her. There was a band concert going on in the public square. The young man asked for her company there. Both enjoyed the concert.

Mrs. Mason gave Hilda a great lecture when she got home. "Spoiling her chances," "out of respect for Mr. Armitage," were some of the pointed phrases she used. But Hilda could not help thinking of the manly young fellow whose bright natural ways had opened a new chapter in the book of her young life.

A few evenings later young Macy called at the Mason home. But for the glum looks of Mrs. Mason, it was a second happy occasion for Hilda. It made her happier still when she fancied she noted something in his eyes, that told he was thinking of her with a warmer sentiment than of simple friendship.

Armitage, returned, came into the room where she sat at work next morning. He was pale and stern looking. He forced a smile, as if asking a welcome. Hilda reluctantly touched the hand he extended. He tried to retain it, but she arose to her feet.



Armitage Slunk From the Room.

"I heard of your having quite a social time during my absence," insinuated the manager. "Hilda," and he came a step nearer, and his eyes had an eager, sinister glow, "the time has come when circumstances force me to reveal my feelings towards you. I have spoken to your mother; I wish you to become my wife."

"Oh, Mr. Armitage!" breathed Hilda tremulously. "You must not—that is, I cannot—cannot ever marry you."

"Because, I suppose," sneered the manager with a dark scowl, "you have taken up with this new employe, Macy?"

It was coarsely said. Words and manner were offensive. Hilda bridled.

"Mr. Armitage is a gentleman and a dear friend of mine," she said staunchly, as though defending him from aspersion.

"He shall not remain here long to cross my path!" cried Armitage savagely. "Come, Hilda, be reasonable," he added in a pleading tone. "At least consider my appeal. I truly love you. I can give you comfort, luxury, a social position far beyond your own."

He could not but note firm denial in her eyes; more than that, positive aversion. It maddened him. Armitage sprang towards Hilda and threw an arm around her.

"You shall become my wife," he cried. "I am not used to being crossed in my plans. Girl, do you understand that I hold the welfare of your family in my hands? I can turn you and your father and brothers out of your positions. Only love me, and they shall be well taken care of."

In an excess of emotion the manager attempted to kiss Hilda. With a scream she beat his face with both her hands.

"That will do," spoke a calm but masterful voice, and Armitage was hurled to the other end of the room.

"You!" panted the manager, recognizing young Macy, his eyes blazing with fury. "You are discharged from my employ. Out of here at once, or I will have you thrown out."

"Your employ?" repeated young Macy. "My man, I advise you to get to the office and be ready for an accounting, which will be demanded of you by my father, the owner of this business. I have telegraphed him, and he will be here tomorrow. A discharged girl employe gave us a hint of your double dealings in dividing sales profits with our clients. I came here under an assumed name to get the details. My correct name is Victor Meserve."

Like the craven he was, Armitage slunk from the room. With a slight twinkle in his eye, young Meserve turned to the astonished Hilda.

"Miss Mason—Hilda," he said, "judging from what you just told that man, you intend to remain a spinster. Still, recalling your kind words about myself, I must hope that you will allow me one favor."

"What—what is it?" faltered Hilda, red as a rose.

"To ask your parents if we may become engaged," was the earnest reply, and Hilda did not say him nay.

TO BENEFIT OTHER SUFFERERS

You May Publish My Letter About "Fruit-a-tives"

Mr. Jones is proud to acknowledge the great debt of gratitude he owes "Fruit-a-tives". He is glad to have his letter published in order that other sufferers may be induced to try these wonderful tablets made of fruit juices.

SARNIA, ONT., FEB. 5th, 1911

"I have been a sufferer for the past 25 years with Constipation, Indigestion and Catarrh of the Stomach. I tried many remedies and many doctors, but derived no benefit whatever. Finally, I read an advertisement for "Fruit-a-tives" I decided to give "Fruit-a-tives" a trial and they did exactly what was claimed for them. I have now taken them for some time and find they are the only remedy that does me good. I have recommended "Fruit-a-tives" to a great many of my friends, and I cannot praise these fruit tablets too highly"

Turkey Stuffer.

"These scratches on my face," he said, "don't indicate that I am unhappily married. They indicate that I am a turkey stuffer.

"High grade turkeys are brought up to the proper degree of corpulence by hand stuffing. That is where I come in. With a short cane I stuff their food down their throats twice daily. They object to this. They expostulate with beak and claw. Hence these scratches.

"What do we stuff our high grade turkeys with? Well, their morning meal is ground pea flour and olive oil. Their evening meal is wheat boiled in milk. Sometimes, for a prominent millionaire, we stuff our turkeys exclusively with chestnuts boiled in milk. You'd hardly believe what a delicious nutty flavor this gives.

"But it's hard work, the work of a turkey stuffer. Your assistant holds the bird's legs; you hold its head with one hand while you thrust the food into its mouth with the other, and then you shove the bolus down where it belongs with a short cane. The turkey gives you many a nip, many a scratch, during this forcible feeding. A turkey stuffer's job is no sinecure."

Looking Ahead.

"I suppose you take a deep personal interest in the education of your daughter?"

"Oh, yes. I am doing my best to have her fitted to be the wife of a man with a title. You see, my husband has patented an invention that is almost sure to make us immensely wealthy."

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Crown Prince of Italy and One of His Playmates.

A PERFECTLY DOCILE STEED.

Mounted on a Donkey Without Saddle or Bridle, Prince Humbert Exhibits His Skill as a Rider—A New Way of Playing an Old Game.

Mounted on his diminutive donkey Prince Humbert of Italy is a bold and skillful horseman. He shows no signs of fear—in fact, appears to be enjoying himself to the utmost. The steed is a very small affair even for a donkey. As the prince sits on its back his feet nearly touch the ground, so that should he fall off no harm would come to him.

© by American Press Association.

PRINCE HUMBERT OF ITALY.

But there is no fear of that. The little animal is perfectly gentle and for a long time has been one of the prince's favorite playmates.

Prince Humbert is the only son of King Victor Emmanuel, and is therefore heir apparent to the Italian throne. He is named for his grandfather, and as he is only nine years old thinks very little about his high title and future prospects. He has three sisters, two of whom are older and one younger than himself. Some day, perhaps, he may be king of Italy.

Button and Ghost.

This is a new way of playing an old game. The players sit around the room in a circle or hollow square. One who is the leader, takes a button and, holding it between his hands, which are pressed palms together so as to conceal it, goes around the circle. Each player holds his or her hands together in the same way, and as the leader goes around he presses his hands between those of the other players in turn, saying to each, "Hold fast what I give you," and being careful not to show into whose hands he drops the button.

When he has been around the circle the leader goes to the first player and says, "Button, button, who hasn't got the button?" and this person must answer by naming some one whom he supposes hasn't it. So it goes on around the ring until all have answered this question according to their belief, when the leader calls out, "Button, button arise," and the button holder stands up. Then if there is any one who guessed that the person who really held the button did not have it he becomes a "ghost" and goes out of the circle. The player who held the button becomes leader, and the game goes on. If no one is caught the game proceeds with only the first leader and the one who held the button changing places.

The "ghost" can only become mortal and again join the circle when they can get some player in the circle to speak to them, and then that mortal must take the ghost's place.—Philadelphia Record.

Stork Legends.

There are many beautiful legends about the stork. In all countries it is considered to be a bird of good omen. In Holland the natives believe that they will have good fortune all the year if a stork alights upon the roof of their cottage in passing.

If storks happen to build near the house the neighbors consider them very fortunate people.

And last, but not least, there is great faith among children in the old legend that the stork brings tiny children from the cloudland, away up there beyond the sunset, down into the garden at home, and when no one is looking lays them softly down within the cradle, fast asleep.—Philadelphia Record.

Summer Play.

In winter time I love to look
All morning at my picture book.

But when the summer comes to stay
I like to play a different way.

I play that grandma's garden wall
Is a tower strong and tall.

And then I climb the cherry tree
And feel so big for little me!

SUCCESS OF KEENE FAIR

Susie Hal and Dr. Johnston Won the Horse Races

A BIG CROWD

Fine weather greeted the annual Exhibition of the Otonabee Agricultural Society, which was held in the village of Keene yesterday afternoon. The attendance was as large as other years while the exhibits compared most favorably with former years. The quality of the numerous exhibits were of a very high order.

As in former years it was a grand old meeting day for old friends and the old familiar times were once more discussed by some of the oldest residents in the vicinity.

The midway lacked the call of the barker, but several refreshment booths did a good business, while the majority of the visitors confined their attention to the horse races. The Alderville Brass Band from Roseneath was in attendance and were very liberal with their music.

The main building was devoted to the usual small exhibits. The fancy work exhibit was no doubt one of the best that has been shown in the village for some seasons, and the winners of prizes deserve credit as the work was of an exceedingly high class.

The Fine Arts exhibit was also in prominence, and a most tasteful collection was in evidence. The department devoted to home manufacture by the ladies was also a credit and showed that the culinary art is receiving considerable attention from the ladies in Otonabee.

The vegetable and roots exhibit was extensive as usual. Fruit was also prominent among the exhibits, and especially the apples which were certainly up to the standard of other years.

The poultry exhibit this year compared favorably with former years.

In the horse exhibits a large number of very fine specimens of horse flesh was in evidence. Among the numerous special prizes competed for in the above were prizes donated by J. A. Sexsmith, W. Higgins, A. Smith, R. Simpson and Company, Grafton and Company, Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Company, L. Burley, G. T. Gall, M. J. Maher, Messrs. Fife Bros. R. H. Campbell, Kingan Hardware ware Co., H. LeBrun, Peterborough Hardware Company, R. R. Hall, Vincent Eastwood, D. Drummond, T. Barrie and W. Lech and Son.

The horse races were probably the biggest bill of the day, and the turf men were well satisfied, as both the free-for-all and the green race were keenly contested. Out of four starters Susie Hal, owned by Dr. Johnston, of Peterborough, took first money by winning the free-for-all in three straight heats. Bourbon Brook, owned by Wm. Elmhurst, of Keene, came in for second money. Despite the fact that there were only two starters in the green race, a hot contest was pulled off. "Dr. Johnston," owned by Charles Fife, took the big share of the purse.

The officials were:

Starter—Frank Montgomery, Peterborough.

Judges—Robert Munro and James Clancy, of Peterborough.

The work of the officials was found satisfactory to everyone.

A complete list of the prize winners will be published in a few days.

Among he large number of local people who took advantage of the fine afternoon to visit the Fair were: Messrs. F. D. Kerr, E. L. Goodwill, Dr. Brown and family, Arthur Johnston, S. Long, Jas. Moher, George Stevenson, Ald. Duffus, W. Ruth, W. H. Robertson.

The horse races resulted as follows:

FREE-FOR-ALL.

Susie Hal, Dr. Johnston, Peterborough	1	1	1
Burbon Brooke, Wm. Elmhirst, Keene	2	2	2
Harry Direct, Dr. Johnston, Peterborough	3	3	3
Ora Tariff, Wm Fife Otonabee	4	4	4

WORK ON THE INCINERATOR

Will Likely be Completed in Two Weeks

Ald. Duncan this morning expressed satisfaction at the progress of the garbage incinerator which is being erected on the north side of Townsend street.

The work is progressing satisfactorily and the incinerator will, it is expected, be completed in two weeks.

ANOTHER FINE OF $25 IMPOSED

Robert Hagarman, charged with supplying liquor to Arthur Kennedy, a blacklister was fined $25 at Police Court this morning by Magistrate Dumble.

Since 1908 Japan has expended $15,000,000 yearly in Korea in excess of revenues.

POLICE FOUND $257 ON MAN WHO STOLE A RIDE

HE ALSO HAD TRAMP'S EQUIPMENT

John Morgan, claiming Toronto as his home, appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning, on the charge of trespassing on the C.P.R. property. He pleaded not guilty and was remanded to jail for a week on the request of the Special Officer of the C.P.R.

Morgan has yet to face the charge of assaulting the officer, who gave evidence to the effect that yesterday morning while on duty at the depot he noticed the prisoner get off a train.

MADE RESISTANCE

He followed him to the bridge, there arrested him. While making the arrest the man resisted and as a result a warm time ensued before the man could be handcuffed.

When searched at the Police Station a roll of bills amounting to $257 was found inside his shirt and also a tramp's outfit consisting of a razor soap, towel, and a few other articles generally carried by the knights of the road.

GOING HOME

Morgan claimed that he had been in Toronto for the past month owing to poor health, and had paid his passage as far as Myrtle. His home was orginally in Barrie.

Last night the man informed the Chief that he was on his way home to the old country to see his father who was getting rather old, but this morning he denied it and said that the chief must have been mistaken as he merely said that he was thinking of going home to the old country for his health.

POULTRY MEN PREPARING FOR THE WINTER SHOW

Twelve New Classes to be Added to Prize List—Committees Appointed

Notwithstanding the fact that the Peterborough Poultry Association's annual exhibition will not be held until the second week in January, there was a great response to the call for a special meeting of the directors which was held last night. All the officers and directors were present, and when President Fred Holmes called the meeting to order they immediately got down to business with seemingly more enthusiasm than ever before in the history of the association.

The amount of work involved in making preparations and the holding of a poultry show is far greater than any person not closely connected with the same, has any idea of; therefore in order to be in readiness the officers and directors have made an earlier start this year than is usually their custom. In view of the fact that the entries have been steadily increasing year after year, it is now found necessary to build more coops, and a committee was appointed consisting of Messrs. Robson Kelly, Abbott, Brault, Lush, Buller, Grose and Holmes to purchase material and erect coops to accommodate several hundred more birds. This will give ample room for the coopage of 1500 birds, which number the association is hoping to have on exhibition next January.

Other committees appointed were as follows:

Printing Committee — Messrs. Paxman and Holmes.

Special Prize Committee—Messrs. Cunningham, Brault, Holmes, Kelly, and Paxman.

Com. to Revise Prize List—Messrs. Holmes, Paxman and Kelly.

There will be about ten or twelve new classes added to the list this year, also a slight increase in prize money for the heavier classes.

Quite a discussion arose over the discarding of the old time prize card and introducing the more up-to-date system of giving ribbons instead. It was finally left in the hands of Joe Kelly and Geo Paxman to inquire into the matter and report back to the executive at the next meeting.

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS ASTONISHED

RHEUMA Acts on Kidneys, Liver and Blood the First Day—and Out Goes Uric Acid Poison.

Rheumatic sufferers astonished;

Anybody can afford to pay 50cts. to get rid of terrible Rheumatism, Sciatica or Gout, and that's all RHEUMA costs at Warne Drug Co. and they say if it doesn't do all that is claimed for it, money back.

It's wonderful how speedily this simple remedy takes hold and how the sore muscles limber up and the swollen joints come down to normal. Make no mistake—RHEUMA costs but little, but it's the best remedy you can find to drive Rheumatic poison from the system and bring back health to misery-racked bodies.

"I had Rheumatism for a long while, and tried many medicines, but was not cured until I used RHEUMA I cannot praise RHEUMA too highly. My advice to those suffering from Rheumatism is to use the great remedy, as I believe it will effect a permanent cure in any case." — C. B. Lanham, Sattes, W. Va., April 27, 1912.

THE SPORTING WORLD

MACKMEN SCORE FIVE IN FIRST TWO INNINGS

Giants Did not Score Till the Fifth --- Athletics Hit Tesreau Hard---Collins and Baker at it Again

Canadian Press Despatch

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, Oct. 9— Umpire Rigler examined the playing field at Polo Grounds and reported to the National Commission that they were soggy but fit to play on if there was no more rain. The gates were immediately opened and the long line began to file into the grounds.

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, Oct. 9— The sun came out shortly before one o'clock, promising a fair afternoon. When the two teams appeared on the field, Mathewson and Wiltze received a great ovation. McGraw announced Tesreau and McLean for his battery. Merkle will be tried on first base again instead of Wiltze.

The line-up—

PHILADELPHIA

Murphy, right field.
Oldring, left field.
Collins, second base.
Baker, third base.
McInnis, first base.
Strunk, centre field.
Barry, shortstop.
Schang, catcher.
Bush, pitcher.

NEW YORK

Herzog, third base.
Doyle, second base.
Fletcher, shortstop.
Shafer, centre field.
Murray, right field.
McLean, catcher.
Merkle, first base.
Tesreau, pitcher.

Rigler calls the balls and strikes, and Connolly gives the base decisions.

FIRST INNINGS.

PHILADELPHIA—Fletcher threw out Murphy at first. Oldring singled. Collins singled over second. Oldring scored on Baker's single to left Collins and Baker made double steal McInnis struck out and Collins and Baker scored when Fletcher took Strunk's grounder and threw wild to the grandstand. Barry pop-flied to Fletcher.

Three runs, three hits, one error.

NEW YORK— Herzog out, Barry to McInnis. Doyle got an infield hit which Bush was unable to field in time. Fletcher was hit by Bush. Burns flied to Collins who tossed to Barry doubling Doyle at second.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

SECOND INNINGS

PHILADELPHIA— Schang struck out. Bush flied out to Murray and Murphy beat it out to short. Oldring got his second single to right sending Murphy to third; it was the hit and run play cleverly worked. Oldring stole second, Murphy being held at third. Murphy and Oldring scored on Collins' line drive over Doyle's head. Collins out at second when Doyle took Baker's smash and touched second, a wonderful piece of fielding.

Two runs, three hits, no errors.

NEW YORK— Shafer out, Collins to McInnis. Murray flied to Collins. McLean fouled to Schang.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

THE BOX SCORE

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 9.— With a badly crippled team behind him, the most dangerous collection of slugging hitters in baseball to face and with the championship of the world practically at stake, Pitcher Mathewson of the Giants beat the Philadelphia Athletics almost single handed here yesterday by 3 to 0 in ten innings.

He not only prevented Mack's team from getting a run but made the winning hit which settled the game. It was by all odds the most sensational baseball match in any world's series. The scores are as follows:

To Study Pellagra.

COLON, Oct. 8.—A study of the disease of pellagra in the West Indies is to be made by the British expert Dr. L. Westenia Sambon, of the London School of Tropical Medicine, who left here for Trinidad yesterday, accompanied by Capt. Joseph F. Siler, U.S.A. medical corps, and A. H. Jennings, chief of the bureau of entomology at Washington.

During his sojourn on the Isthmus Dr. Sambon kept in close touch with Col. Wm. C. Georgas and found that fully fifty cases of pellagra had occurred on the Isthmus within the past three years, most among natives of Barbados and Jamaica.

Rooster Travels Free.

A red game rooster beat his way over the G.T.R. from West Toronto Junction to Guelph, but was arrested as soon as he arrived in the G.T.R. yards. The rooster, flying up on the pilot of the engine as it stood at the water tank taking water, ensconsed itself above the cow-catcher, and as the train drew out of the yards crowed lustily.

It stuck to its post until the train got to Guelph, where one of the train crew found it. It presented a most bedraggled appearance, and was almost all in, its features being filled with cinders and sand.

Hopping Circle.

Form the boys and girls in separate circles. The children face inward and are about two steps apart. For each circle get rope about twelve feet long with a bean bag tied to the end of it. One of the children stands in the center and swings the rope around in a circle, keeping the bag close to the ground. As the rope approaches each pupil he hops upward and over the swinging bag. Whoever is struck by the bag or rope steps out of the circle. Insist that the bag be swung close to the ground and, with timid children that it is not swung too rapidly.

SOUTH MONAGHAN

Special Correspondence.

SOUTH MONAGHAN, Oct. 8.—Mr. James Taylor, our young cheese maker, accompanied by Mr. William Murray, has been visiting this section trying to ascertain the number of cows of each factory patron. Mr. Taylor, though of short experience in dairying, has won honors for himself at Peterborough and Millbrook exhibitions and is trying to advance the factory interests. We wish him every success in his work.

Mr. James Jackson and Mr. Fred Waterman have recently filled their silos, and report the season's crop much superior to that of last year.

The potato crop, which is being harvested under the most favorable conditions, is also superior to that of last year.

Quite a number attended the Millbrook exhibition on Friday, amongst whom were Mr. James Taylor and Miss Eva Fletcher, of Bensfort, who have very favorable reports of the display of produce, as well as the excellent concert held in the Town Hall.

The Elders of the Presbyterian Church met on Thursday to consider extending a call to the Rev. Mr. Crowe, who recently occupied the pulpit, but owing to the small attendance another meeting is to be held on Friday night, when several calls may be considered.

PAIN IN MY BACK IS ALL GONE

Since I Got a Box of Gin Pills

CHURCH ST., CORNWALLIS, N.S. January 23rd,

GIN PILLS drive away the pain every time—or your money promptly refunded. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. Sample free if you write National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto.

Haphazard, occasional saving seldom accomplishes much. It's the steady, persistent, regular depositing of so many dollars a week, or month, or season, in the Union Bank of Canada, which makes one financially independent. The money accumulates all the more rapidly, too, because of the Interest which is added every six months.

COPY OF AGREEMENT FROM RADIAL RAILWAY COMPANY

IS UNSATISFACTORY TO ALDERMEN

Has to do With Changing of the Trolley Supports From Wooden to Hydro Poles

The Peterborough Radial Railway Co. has submitted a copy of an agreement in regard to the transference of the Company's trolley wire supports from their own wooden poles to the new steel poles, now erected for the purpose of street lighting by Hydro Electric.

This agreement has been awaited by the Council for some time. It was felt that the Company would go ahead and change the wires, as the Power Committee had been given to understand that on the City agreeing to pay the cost of the work, operations would proceed and Hydro Electric work would be facilitated.

But the agreement submitted, it is understood, is far from being satisfactory to the Aldermen who have perused it and as it now reads, there is little possibility of it being accepted by Council.

WANT BETTER SERVICE ON THE BELLEVILLE LINE

HASTINGS, Oct. 9.—The Board of Trade sent a delegation to Cobourg to-day to act with the other towns along the line in representing to the Railway Commission the necessity of a better train service between Belleville and Peterborough. It is the object of the deputations to have another train put on between these points and going up through there about noon, returning about six p. m. This will give those wishing to go to Toronto the opportunity of returning the same day. Cleaner and better cars will be asked for.

CLEARING THE WAY FOR NEW AND MODERN BUILDING

This is a step preliminary to operations for the new and modern building to be erected at this corner.

Particulars are not yet ready for publication but it is understood the structure will be a very fine one, and in every way a credit to the business section of this growing city.
